All the girls ponder the thought of pushing Rick from the wall.

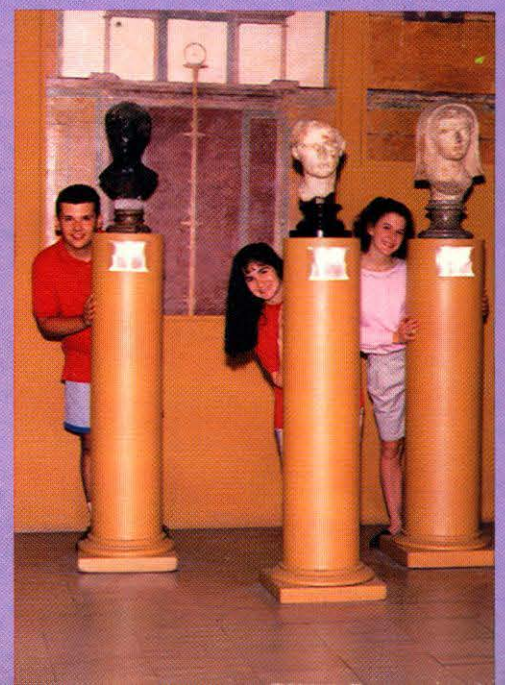

Some statues look so lifelike!

Stacy, Debbie, and Tessa: Simon says touch your nose!

Melissa says, "It's about time somebody took my picture!"

Eric, Inna, and Kerry, what are you hiding from?

Rick and Eric are the only guys. What's wrong with this picture?

AN EPIC TALE

A hero's journey is long and fraught with much peril. While our own personal thirteen-year odysseys through Chelmsford Schools were not mortally dangerous, we were confronted by many unique challenges.

When held captive, the mythological heroes faced their fears and overcame the blockades. Later, they were enticed to give up but they resisted the temptation to fail and continued on their journey. By making the necessary sacrifices, they were able to remain true to their quest. We, too, on our own odysseys, have encountered many obstacles. But with the strength, wisdom, and determination that were the trademarks of the heroes of old, we have been able to perform deeds that we deemed impossible.

Even when the heroes returned home from their long journeys, they still had many dangers to face. Past experiences allowed them to overcome these perils. As we, upon completing one odyssey, embark upon another, we must also look to the past so we might ensure our success as we continue our life-long odyssey.

Here, within these pages of The 1991 Lion, lies an epic tale. It is a story of victory, friendship, and heroism. It is the story of our past and the prelude to our future. It is the story of A.D. 1991.

THE PHANTOM of the OPERA

The time was seven o'clock on the breezy evening of May 19, 1990. The scene was the Paris Opera House. The event was a farewell feast, preparing for the Class of 1991's final Odyssey.

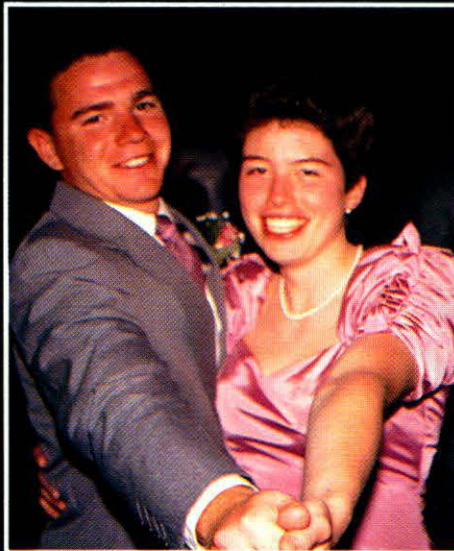

The Gods and Goddesses arrived early in the evening, resplendent in their finery. As they walked down a balloon-bordered red carpet and through a magnificent stone archway into the Opera House, they were greeted by the architects, those responsible for transporting all who attended to a world of music and dancing. An hour of socializing amid the musically covered walls came first, during which talk of past years mingled with hopes for the present and dreams of the future. Cameras flashed as photographers captured the evening's enthusiastic spirit.

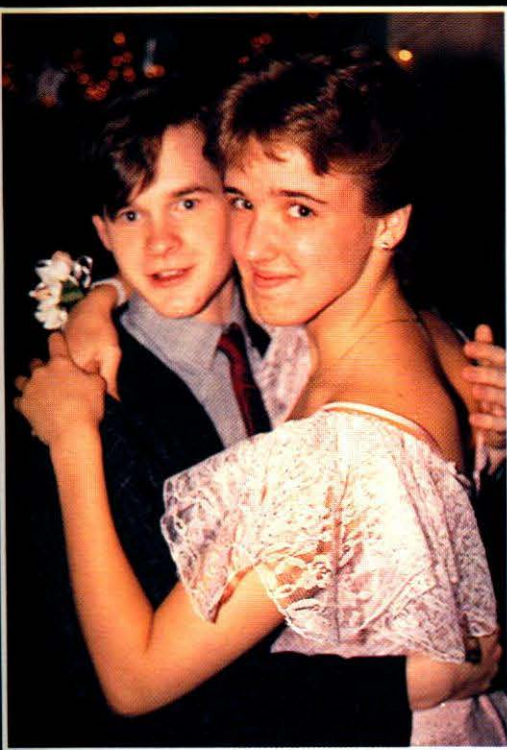

In the banquet hall, nectar and ambrosia fit for royalty were served before the deities donned their masks. Music and magic filled the air as all adjourned to the ballroom. The Gods and Goddesses were joined by the Phantom of the Opera as they prepared to dance away the evening under the stars; even the most reserved guests were coaxed to the floor to dance with their friends. The Limbo was the highlight of this revelry as many attempted to see how low they could go.

The past three years led up to this special occasion. The Class of 1991 enjoyed this break from their labors to celebrate their hard work. All realized there was no turning back — their odyssey must continue until they reach their final destination, a position at the peak of their mountain. But before the final journey, the Gods and Goddesses lost themselves in the joy and enchantment of an evening at the Opera.

C'mon Tim — The Opera isn't that bad!

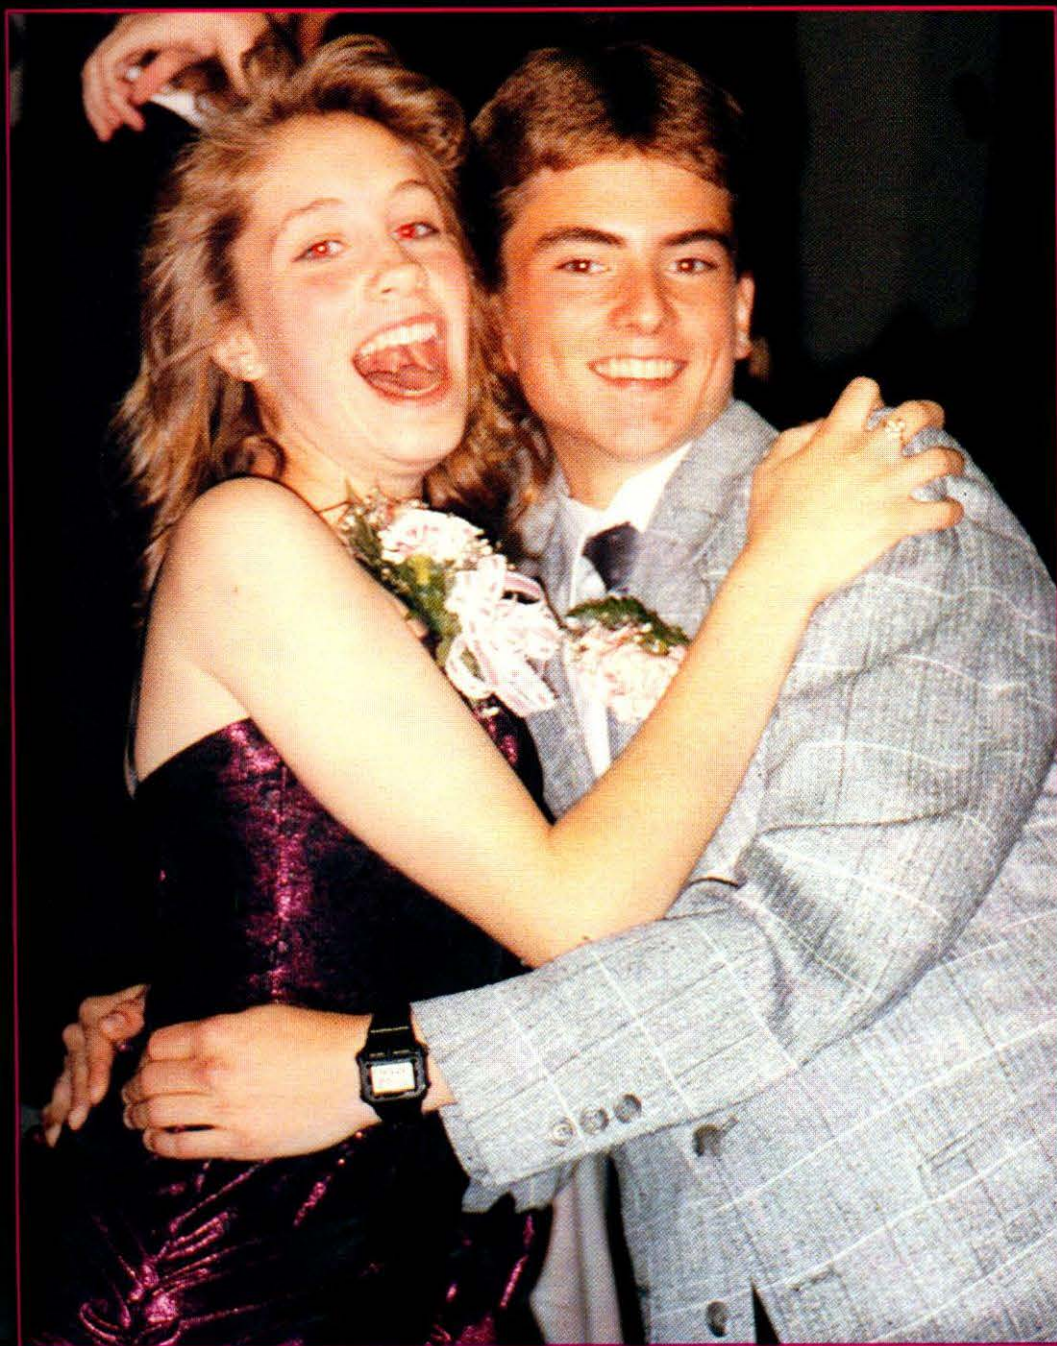

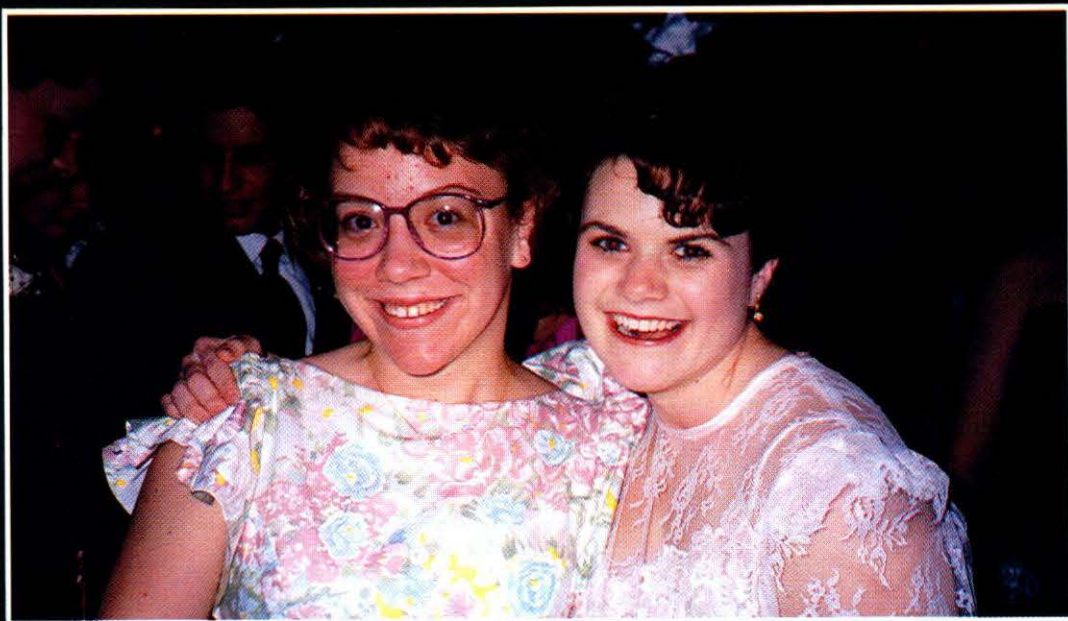

Tango for two.

Cheek to cheek is really chic.

What's wrong Steph and Melissa — couldn't you get dates?

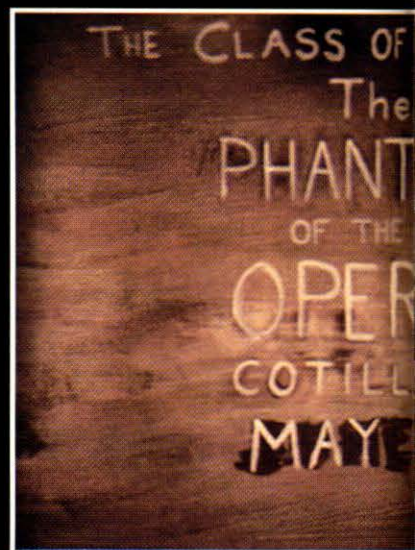

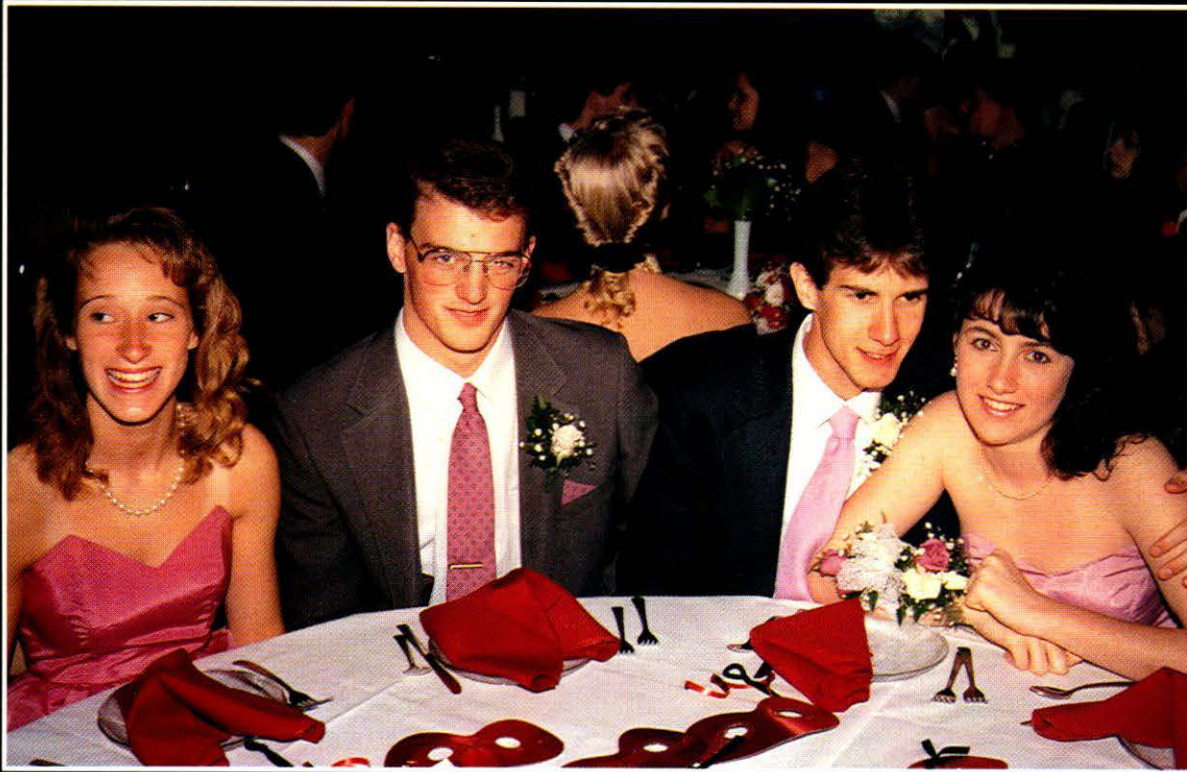

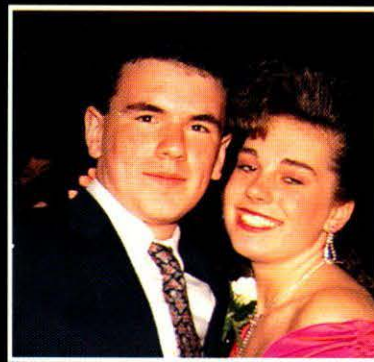

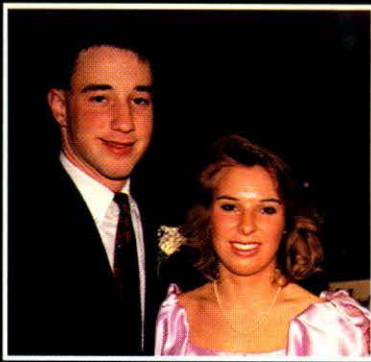

Don't scream Jen, you only have to dance with Josh once!

Erin records Cotillion memories with her camera.

Fond memories.
Pretty in Pink.

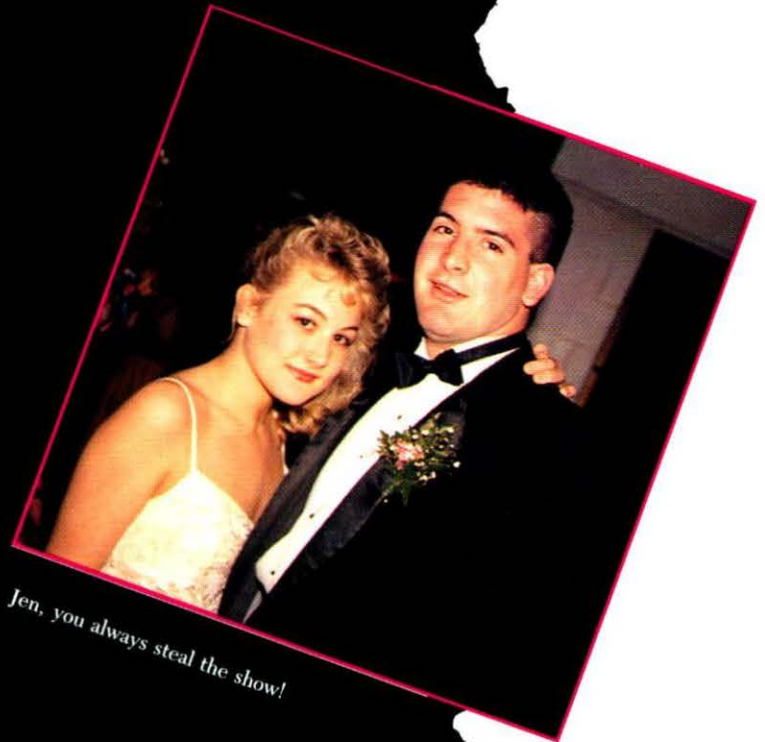

The Phantom's date has arrived.

Sherry and Jen

Russ and Kerry danced the night away.

Smile pretty for the camera, Kurt!

Jen, you always steal the show!

get all the attention.

Kathleen says, "Eat your vegetables, Katy!"

THE CLASS

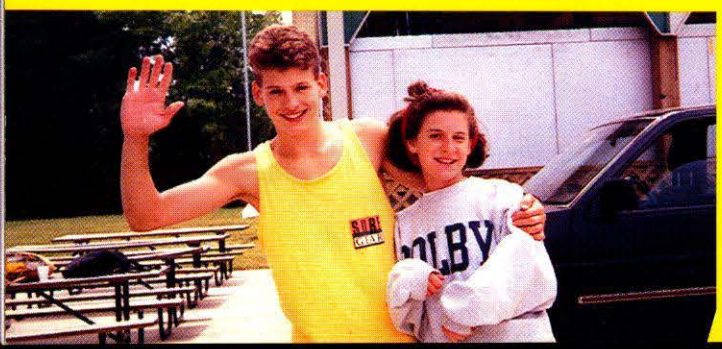

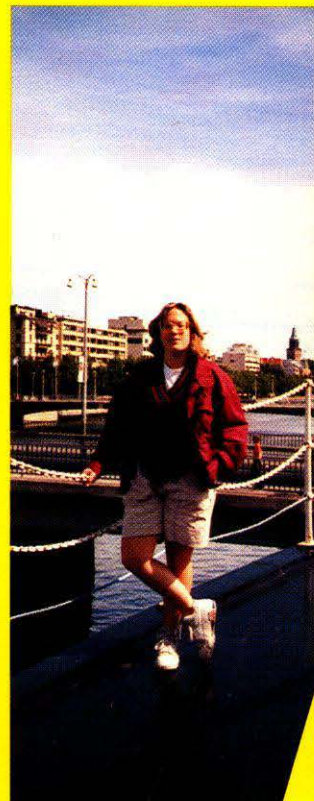

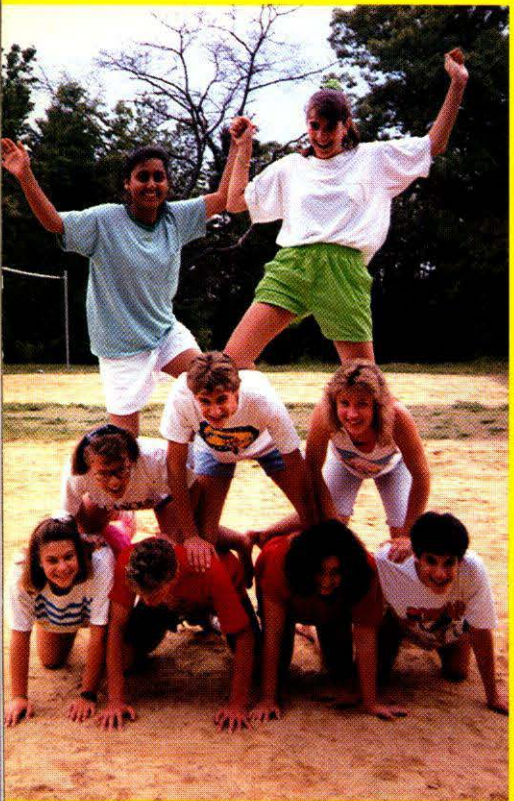

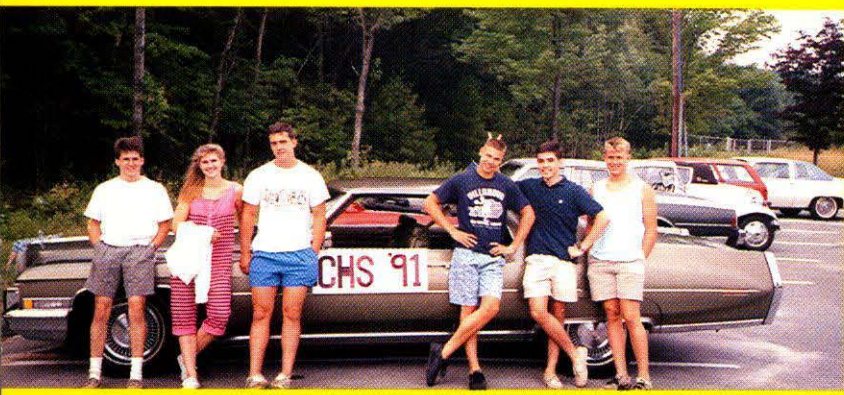

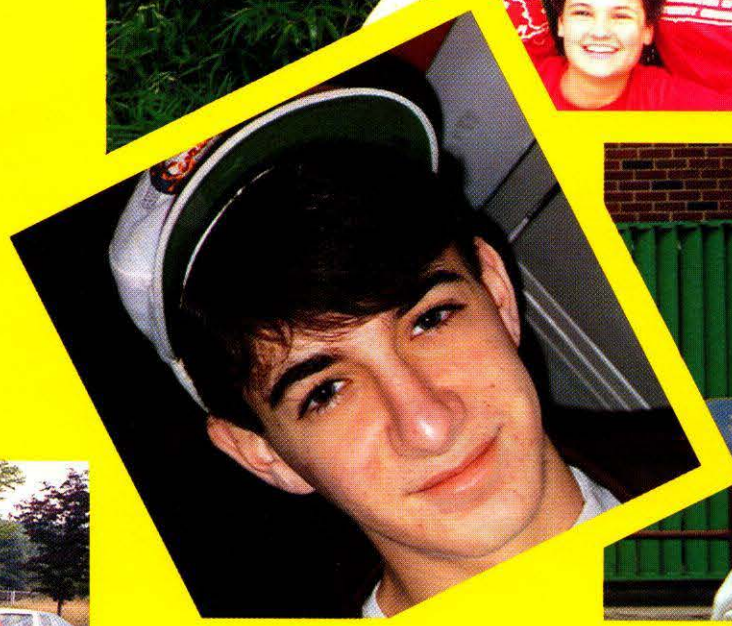

A large group of students and staff are posed in a field at sunset. The students are arranged in a large, roughly rectangular formation, with some individuals standing out in the front rows. The background is a vast, open field under a bright, golden sky. The overall mood is celebratory and nostalgic.

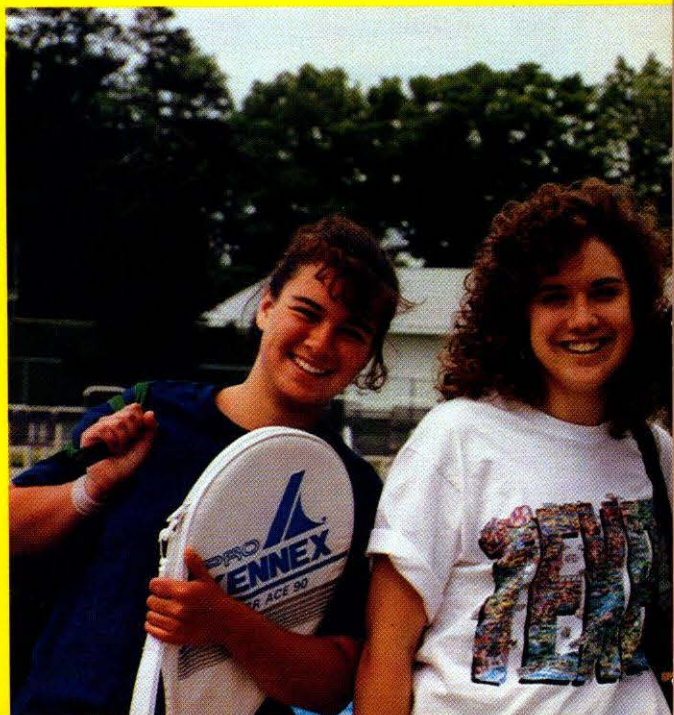

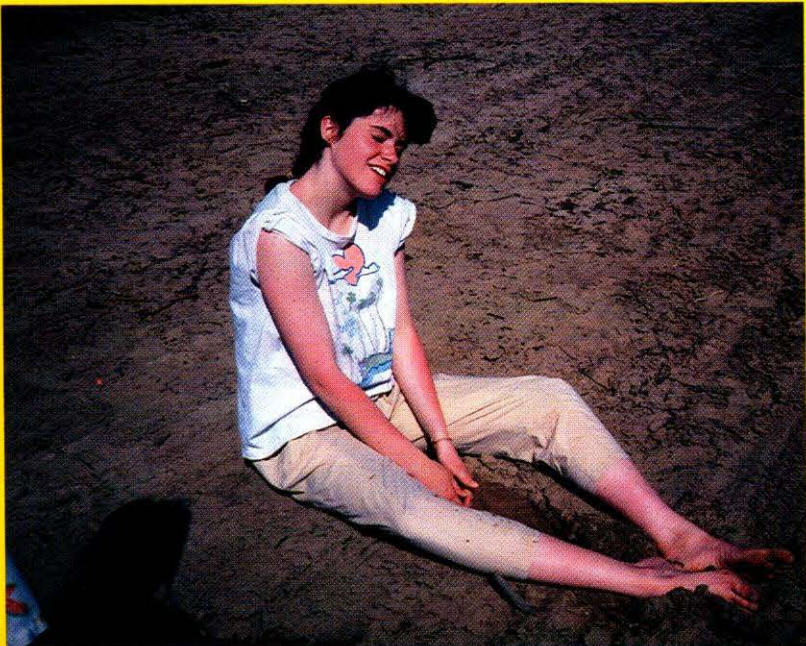

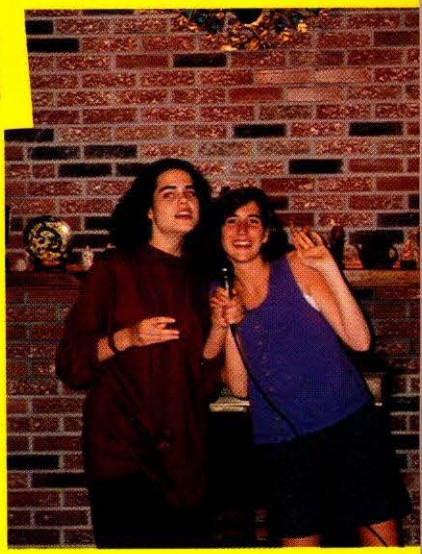

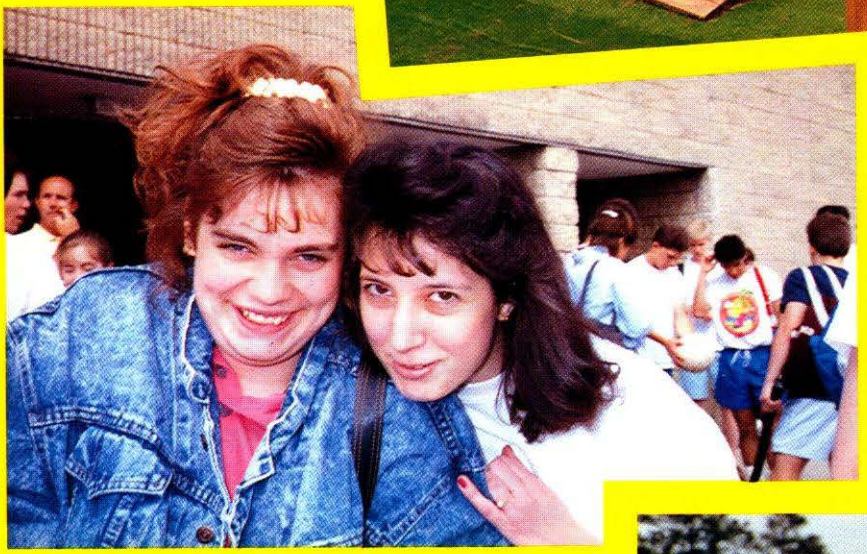

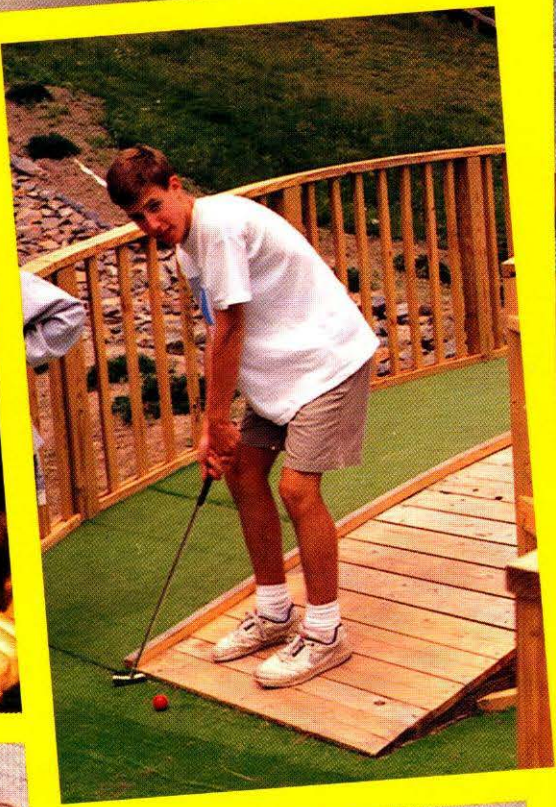

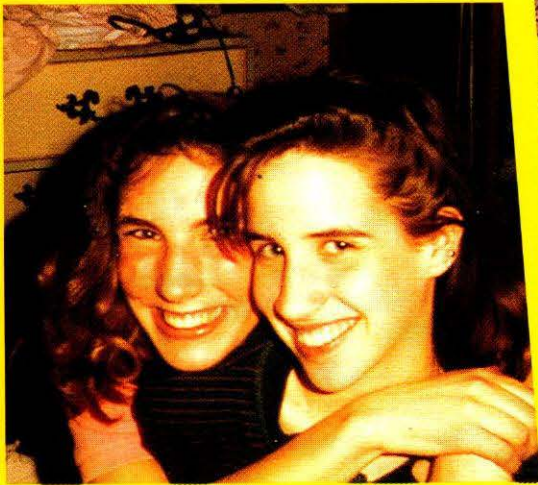

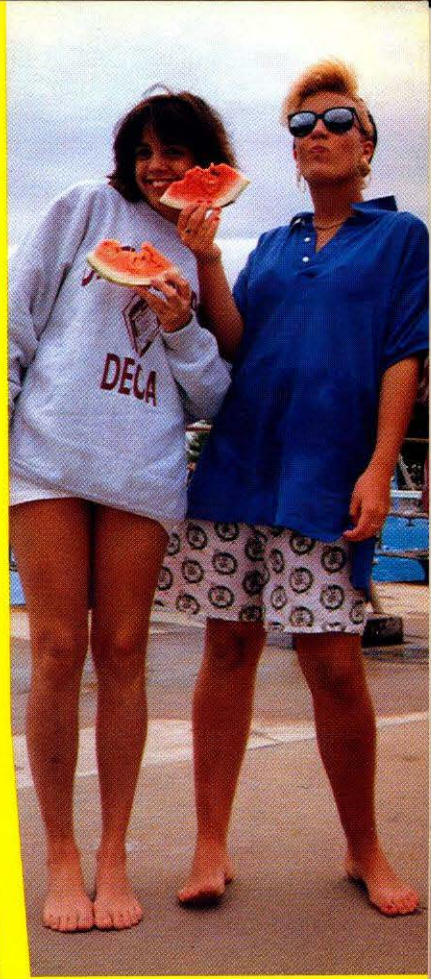

OF 1991

Summer Song

John Ciardi

By the sand between my toes,
By the waves behind my ears,
By the sunburn on my nose,
By the little salty tears
That make rainbows in the sun
When I squeeze my eyes and run,
By the way the seagulls screech,
Guess where I am? At the!
By the way the children shout
Guess what happened? School is!
By the way I sing this song
Guess if summer lasts too long:
You must answer Right or!

SMURFS, MUPPETS, AND DWARFS — OH MY!

All the world loves M&M's.

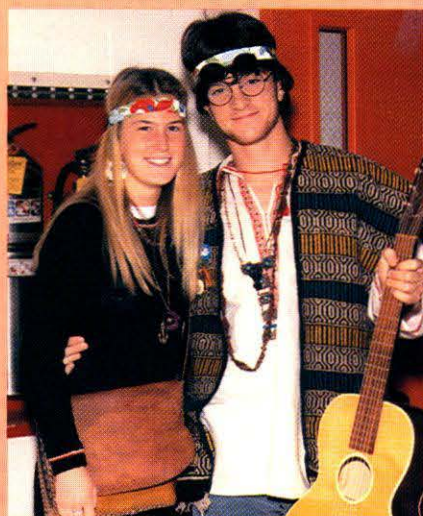

Keep it rollin', Mrs. Swierzben

The Joker is always stuck in the middle.

I don't wanna grow up!

Flower power!!

Shake, rattle, and roll 'em.

Where can one find the Buttheads, the Muppet Crew, New Kids on the Block, Winnie the Pooh and the gang all together? There is only one place — the Chelmsford High 1990 Halloween Dance. It was a happening dated Saturday, October 27th in Cafe II.

The dance began at 7:30 p.m. In no time, the judging of the costumes commenced. Those given awards for their costumes were: Jeff Cohen who impersonated Mr. Marshall; Jared Luskin and Kristen Hearn, who were disguised as a peace couple; the Wizard of Oz crew — JoAnn Brown, Erin Desaulnier, Karyn Bickford, Jen Witt, Marion Russo, Julie Anstiss, and Sylvia Reis; and the Buttheads — Bob Reid, Tim Abbott, Jeff Carignan, David Loro. Shoes were laying to the side, and comfort became the priority.

Soon the traditional "limbo" was started. Everyone either watched or participated. It was really amusing when Mike MacQuarrie pushed Bill Chevalier, in a wheelchair, under the rope as the crowd chanted, "How low can you go?"

After limbo, it was time to bob, not bop. A child's swimming pool, filled with apples, was placed on the floor. It sure didn't take long for the guys to dunk themselves. The girls maintained their calm — they laughed.

Dancing resumed, but it was a solo act for the "New Kids on the Block." They moved to the beat of "Step by Step." From Brian Ritchie's grabbing Rachel DeYoung from the onlooking crowd to Eric Hanson's dance moves, one could have mistaken this group as authentic.

The night came to a close all too fast. No one wanted to leave, but the last song was played. The music was over, and so was our night of unity and craziness. It was a night to remember.

Hey, where is Snow White?

The four little pigs?

Lead us to the cheese!

All smiles, for they left Christopher Robin home to organize piles and piles!!

All dressed up and no place to go!

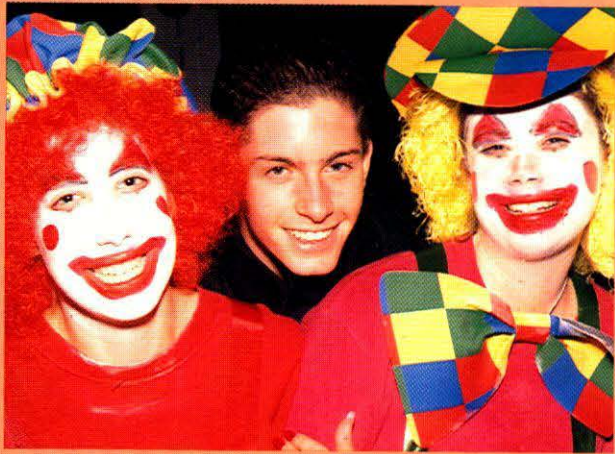

Nuns on the run!

Vicky and Krista, did you dump your dates for these two?

Strike a pose!!

Just clowning around!

Debbie, is it easy being green?

Andria needs First Aid after a rough day on the field.

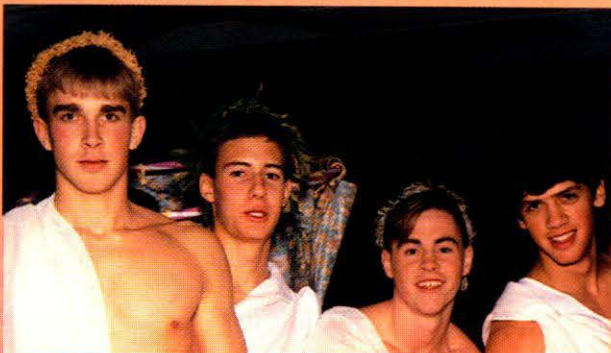

Terri, what is your opinion?

Elementary, my dear Eric!

Mindy, a head above the rest.

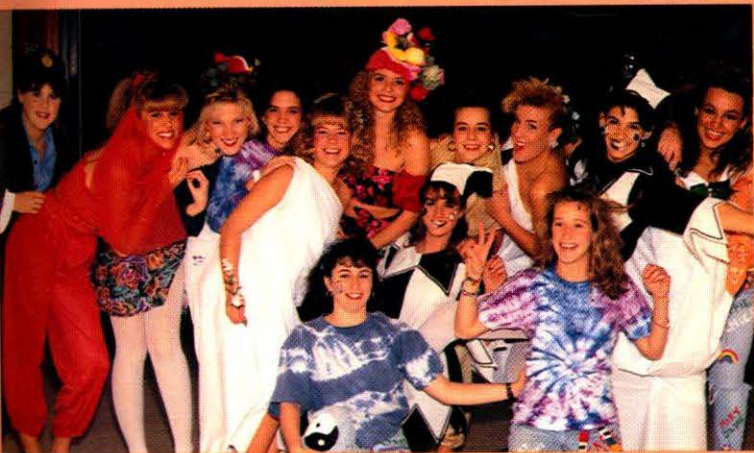

Et tu Brute?

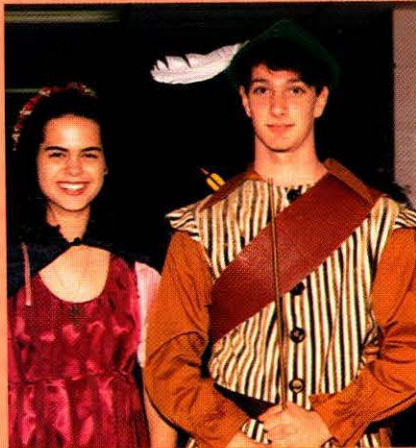

Beauty and the Beast

Laurie and Michelle, have a smurfin' good time.

The gang's all here!

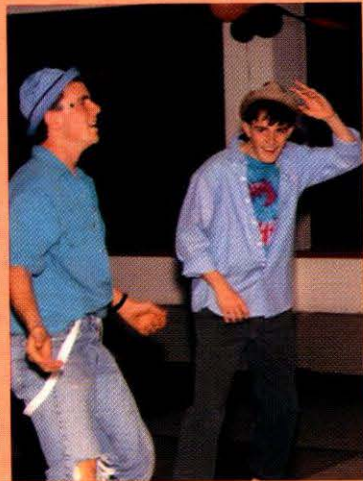

Josh, did you plan on having your feather point at Kate?

Mrs. Foley, who is your attractive date?

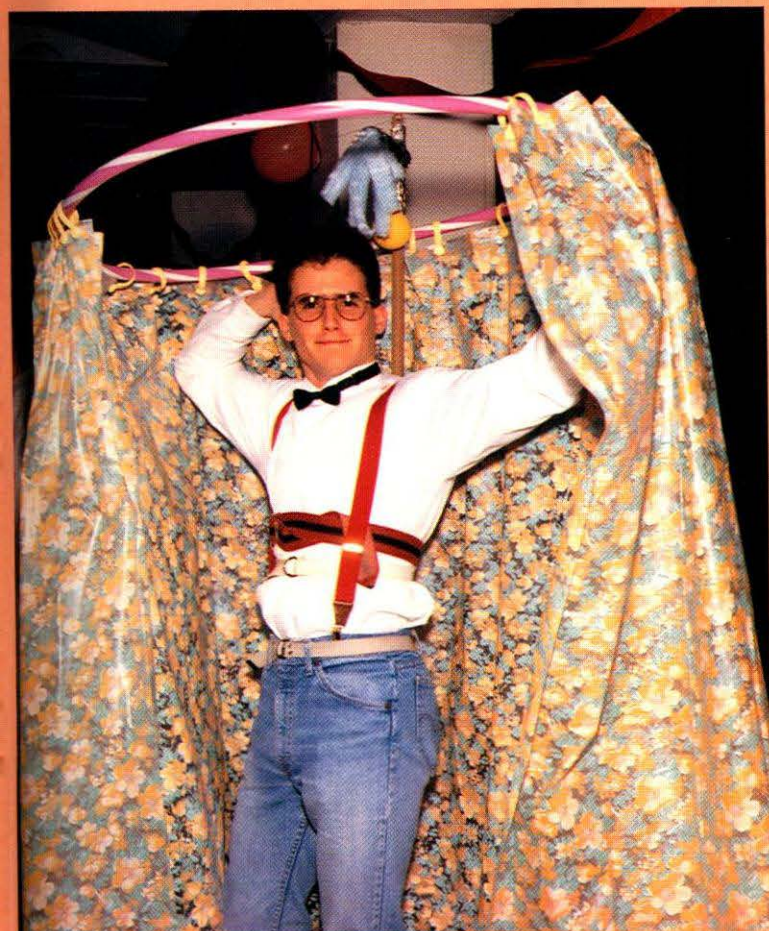

Hangin' Tough!

The new teenage idols?

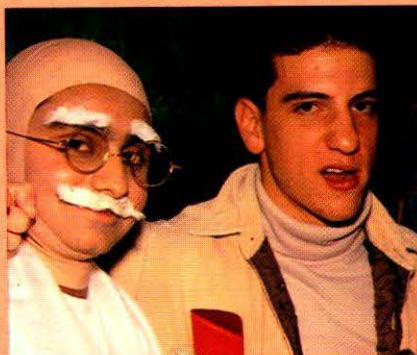

"All the President's Men!"

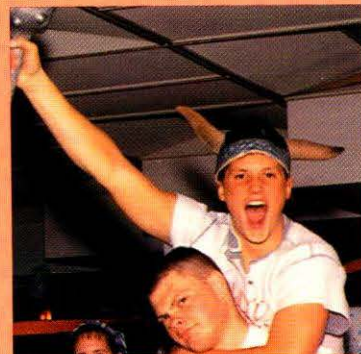

Chris, why didn't you shower before you came?

Two of a kind — Kerry & Krista

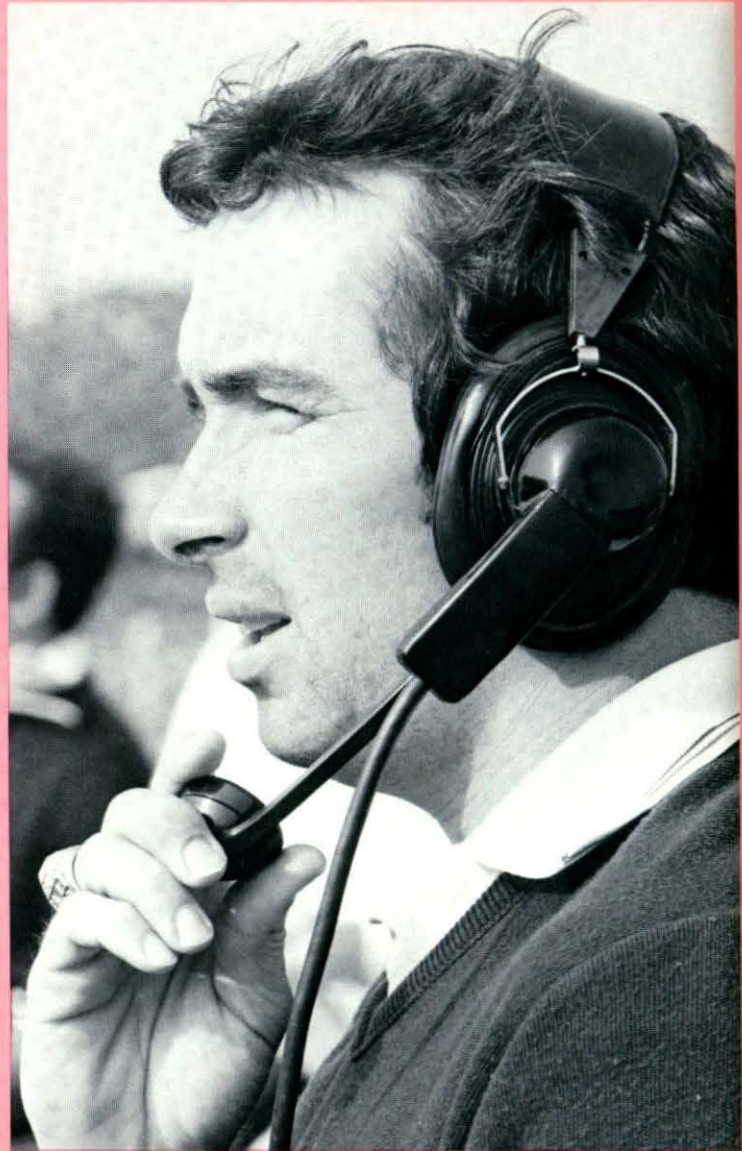

Such an attractive couple.

Josh, the Statue of Liberty reborn!

GODLIKE INSPIRATION

Mr. John "Jack" Fletcher is a mathematics teacher, the athletic director, the hockey coach, and a football coach at Chelmsford High School. Those are the facts, but that is not the real story.

As a teacher and a coach, he has yelled with us, for us and at us. He shared our enthusiasm and celebrations, he was our advocate, and he told us to "shape up" whenever we needed it.

The educational and co-curricular programs at C.H.S. have been put under difficult financial constraints during the last few years. For a while, it looked like activities and sports programs would be reduced or totally eliminated. Mr. Fletcher asked the administration and the school committee to "trust me." He said that he would raise the money necessary for all of the programs to continue. He did just that and paid the price in doing so. He endured criticism while taking the chances and doing the work necessary to achieve his goals.

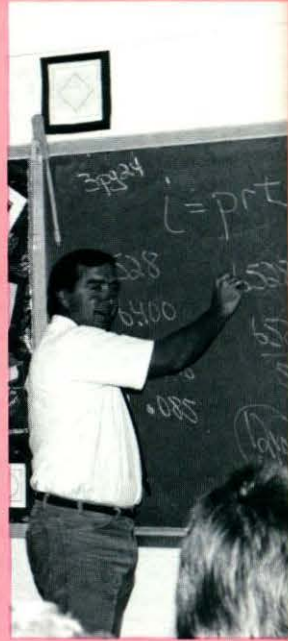

Whether patrolling the outside area, watching one of "his" teams, dazzling his students, or talking with friends in the hall, he has always brought his big grin, his genuine concern and his blunt honesty with him. When we recall our high school years, he will always be part of our fondest memories.

Don't let the grin fool you. When he has to, Mr. Fletcher can really get down to business.

Coaching football is just one of the many roles Mr. Fletcher plays at C.H.S.

Do you get it now?

THE CLASS OF 1991'S ADVISORS

Class Advisors: Mrs. Swierzbina and Mrs. Foley

As the oracles in mythological times advised the populace, so do the class advisors, Mrs. Anna Swierzbina and Mrs. Donna Foley. These two caring, helpful teachers have nurtured us through the insecurity of Freshman year, the adjustment of Sophomore year, the confidence of Junior year, and the security of Senior year.

Mrs. Foley and Mrs. Swierzbina supported our class and were always there for us Freshman and Sophomore year. It was last year, though, when their job intensified. They unselfishly made the Class of 1991 their priority. They ran concession stands at every wrestling meet and basketball game. All of the proceeds went to our class. Another responsibility they had was planning the Junior Cotillion. They moderated the initial decision, the making of the theme and served on committees for selecting a caterer and decorations. They also planned the junior class trip to Cederdale, which was a huge success. They even helped with the blood drive.

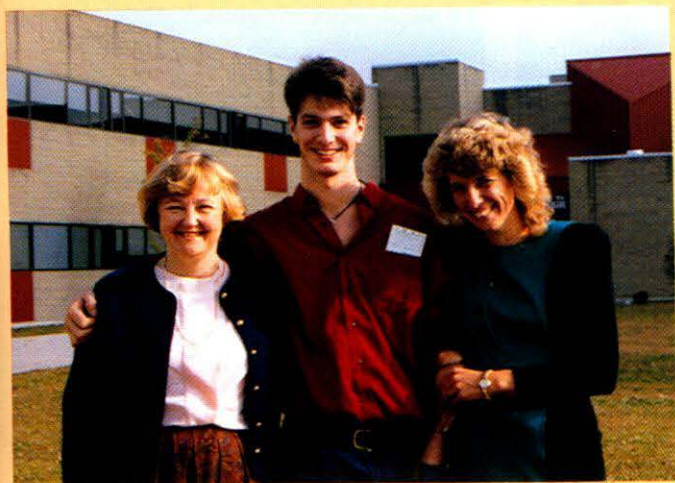

This year was the culmination of all our high school efforts. It was also the most difficult and time consuming for the advisors. The first popular dance of the year was the MORP. This dance is a reverse prom where students dress down. It was a lot of fun. Also, Mrs. Swierzbina and Mrs. Foley set up a committee for the class t-shirts. The names had to be organized and the design and artwork had to be handled. They also organized the magazine drive in October. This was one of the major fundraisers for the class. Students sold magazines and won prizes for selling. All of the proceeds from the drive went to the class to use for Senior week activities. Next came the seniors-only Halloween Dance which was loads of fun and a great success. In December, there was the popular, semi-formal Holiday Dance, also sponsored by the Class of '91.

As the year progressed, our advisors had to plan the committees for the class gift and choosing the speaker for the graduation ceremony. Committees were also needed for the Senior banquet and luncheons. Last, but certainly not least, the prom had to be organized. This included: finding a location, determining a theme, and the after-prom breakfast. Mrs. Foley and Mrs. Swierzbina helped the class greatly with their physical work and their emotional support. We definitely couldn't have survived without them.

Over the past four years, Mrs. Donna Foley and Mrs. Anna Swierzbina have provided us with the guidance of Prometheus, the speed of Mercury, and the power of Zeus. They have selflessly worked long and hard to make the Class of 1991 the best. These two advisors and all of their efforts will never be forgotten. The Class of 1991 thanks you!

Okay, who are the students and who are the teachers?

Our president: the ladies' man

HIGH SCHOOL SURVIVAL KIT

As a senior, you will enjoy the following bits of hindsight. Knowing this information in your earlier years would have made high school a whole lot simpler. To you this will seem an unpleasant lesson in "If only I knew then what I know now."

To those of you who are not seniors, take heed. The following is a valuable information that will help you better survive the remainder of your high school career:

(AT LEAST) TWO PENS — Whether it's during a test, taking notes, or playing notebook golf, a pen will inevitably die on you. It's best to be prepared.

CALCULATOR — Simply put, sometimes the human mind just isn't good enough.

SEVERAL NO. 2 PENCILS — Actually, for normal class activities, any type of pencil is sufficient. However, for anything that involves coloring insipid little ovals, circles, or diamonds, nothing can beat a good old No. 2.

A VERY LARGE ERASER — Face it, no matter the size of the pencil, the eraser always runs out before the lead does.

GUM — Chewing gum is better for loud cracking sounds that annoy substitute teachers, but any kind of gum will get you lots of new friends.

CLIFF AND/OR MONARCH NOTES — God's gift to the high school student, these have saved many an English test grade. It's best to study both, for a second opinion, if you will.

SLIPS OF BLANK PAPER — One must always keep plenty of post-its; you need these to write down homework assignments that won't get done.

AT LEAST 8 LOCKERS - Teachers don't like their students to travel across the school to get something they forgot in their locker (and you will forget things). The best way to avoid this enmity is to have several lockers, so you will always have one near your class.

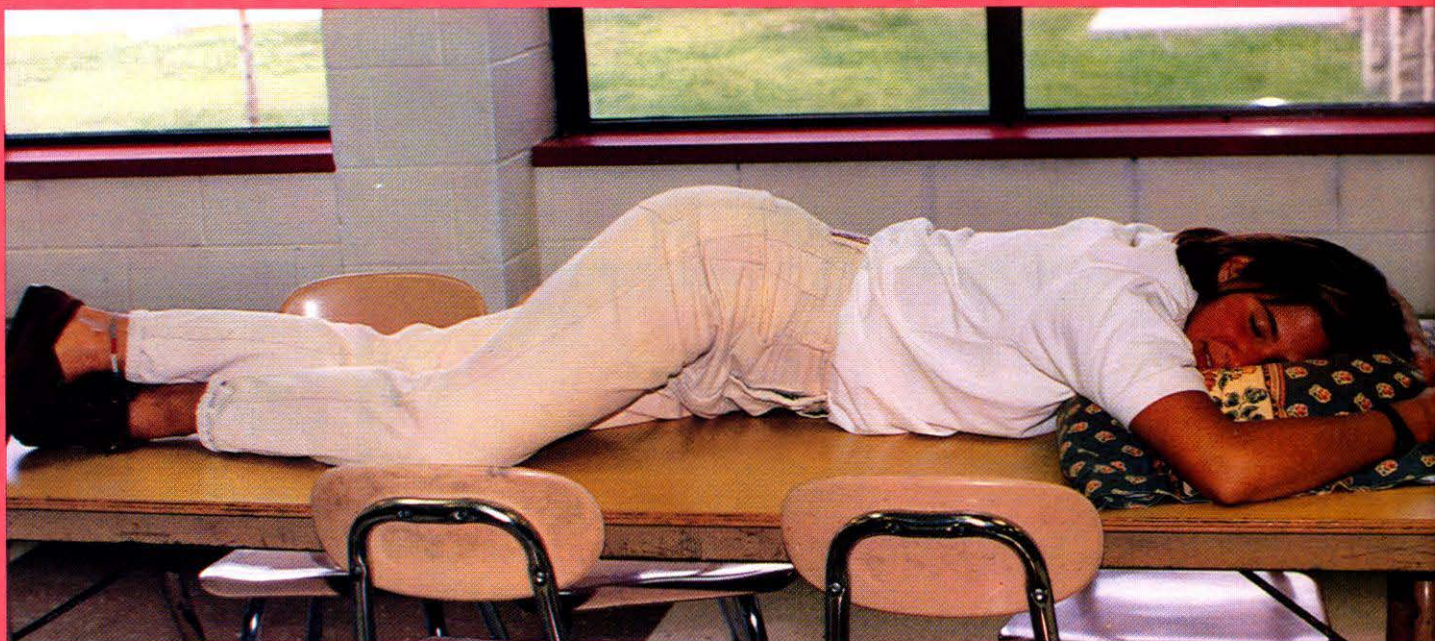

AN EXTRA MID TERM OR TWO — Have you ever lost your mid-term? If not, then you're due. This will save you the trouble of going back to your house office for a new one. It's also handy to have an extra to fill out on your own, in case you don't like the grades or comments on the one the teachers gave you.

A PILLOW — In-class movies can be verry boring.

EXTRA LUNCHES — In order to keep from going hungry on those days when you forget your lunch, you should always keep an extra in your locker. Of course, make sure it's freeze-dried. Funny things happen to weeks-old, non-refrigerated food.

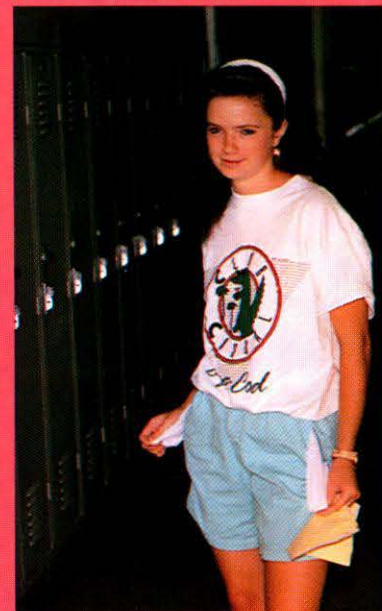

A LARGE BAG OF MONEY — This is for no other reason than being a student in high school. Chelmsford High School, especially, costs a lot these days.

Jen Lamontagne takes a much needed nap during another day at Chelmsford High School.

Hey girls! Think we should have added a day in the sun to our list?

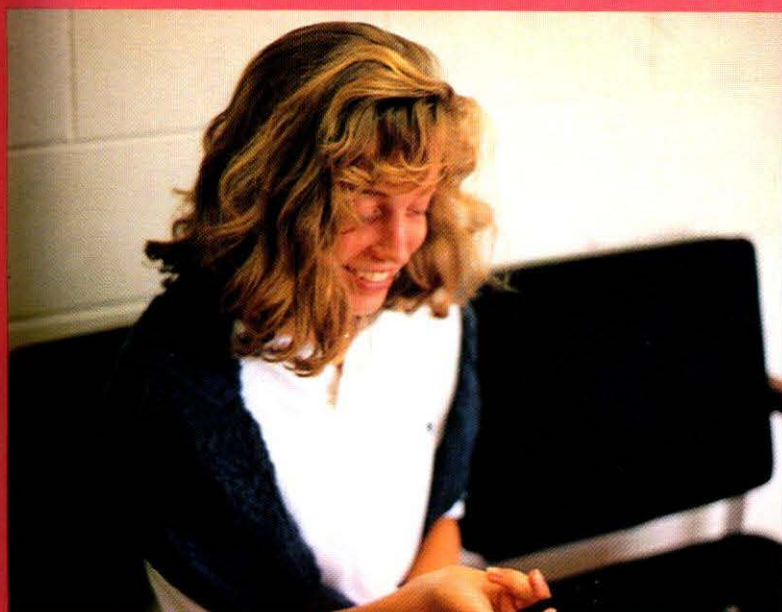

Melissa Johnson illustrates the financial woes burdening most seniors this year.

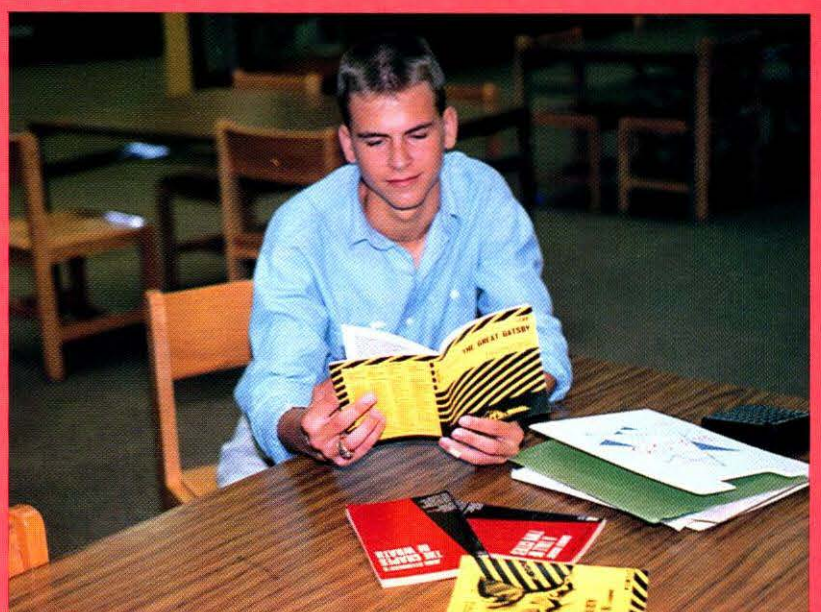

What's this? Our esteemed Class Treasurer involved in a mischievous act of mid-term doctoring?

Bridget, don't you know that chances are, if it gets written down, it won't get done?

Did your pen dry out, Sara? You wouldn't have a problem if you had an extra. Shame on you for not remembering!

A DAY TO

The place was Cedardale Country Club in Groveland, Ma. The date was June 6th. The day was Wednesday. The year was 1990. It was our class trip! A few days prior to our adventure, different rumors were circulating about Cedardale: an Olympic-size pool, a hot tub, three tennis courts, an 18-hole miniature golf course, a baseball field, a basketball court, volleyball nets, and lots of open space to play frisbee or other games. Well, these were no rumors!!

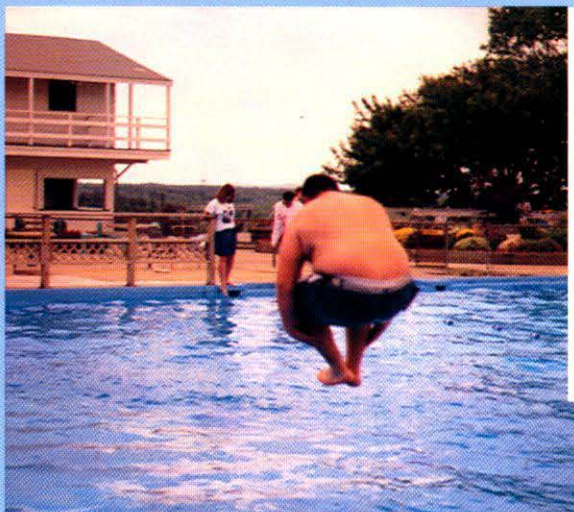

The fun began at 10:30 A.M. Although the sun was peeking in and out, everyone kept their fingers crossed that the day would bring good weather. Well, it didn't. But we had a lot of fun anyway. As soon as we arrived, people were wandering everywhere, trying to decide what to do first. It wasn't that there wasn't anything to do. There were so many choices. It didn't take people long, though. By 10:45, there were numerous volleyball games going, the duffers had hit the links, and the lobbers were on the courts. The swimming pool, however, was not very full due to the lack of sunshine. This didn't affect the filled-to-capacity hot tub, though. In fact the clouds made more people want to indulge themselves in the steamy, bubbling water. As the day progressed everyone tried the different activities at Cedardale.

By noon, everyone had worked up an appetite. Lunch was served. Hot dogs, hamburgers, chips, salad, and unlimited soda! After lunch, a teacher-student softball game energized the crowd. Mr. Fletcher, Mr. Winn, Mr. O'Shea, Mr. Bernier, Mr. Thomas, and many other teachers were involved. Just as the game started going, though, it started to sprinkle. The raindrops seemed to drive away the audience. The game itself never was completed! So as far as who won — well that remains a mystery! After the rain, everyone continued enjoying themselves. Was a little rain enough to melt the smiling faces of the day? Definitely not!!

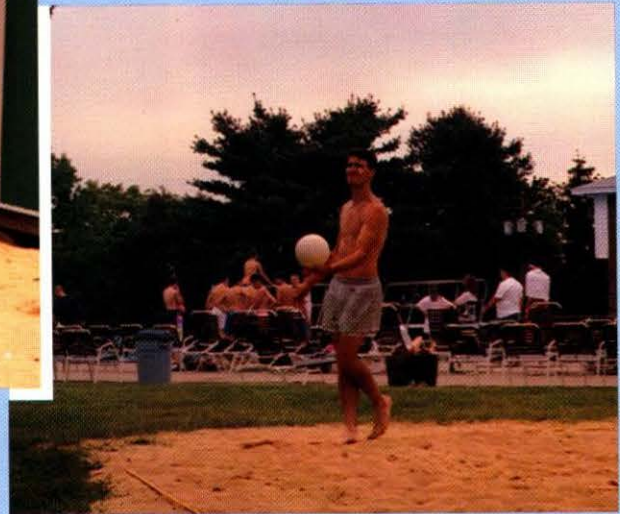

At 4:30 P.M. we headed back to Chelmsford, only to find that it had not rained one drop. It really didn't matter, though. The day was so much fun that no one really cared that the weather wasn't picture-perfect. We didn't return with golden tans, but we did bring back wonderful memories that will never fade away!

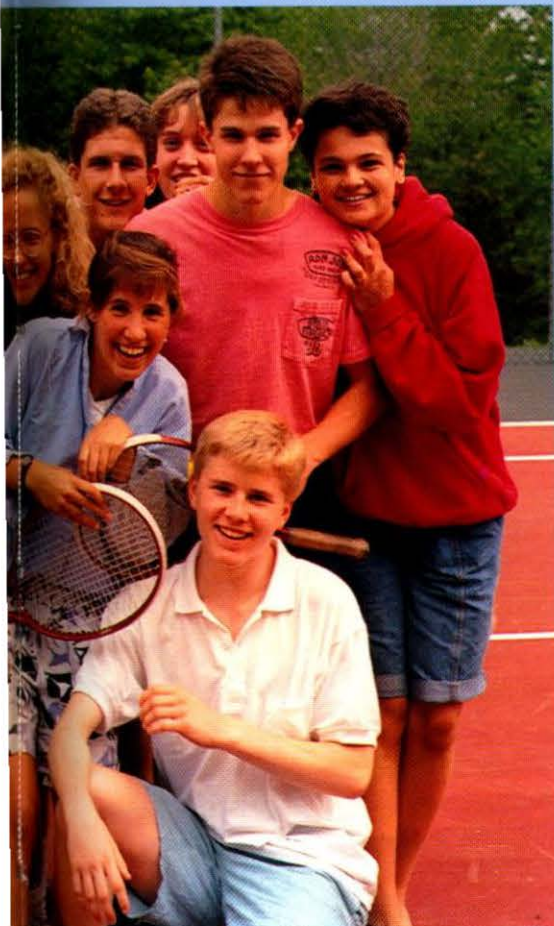

Double trouble — Jen and Joanne — friends forever! They're all smiles when they're together!

Curtis, as long as you are having fun, that is all that matters! No one will ever tease you about riding on an infant's rocking horse. Who are we to pass judgement?

GODS & GODDESSES ♫

Our odyssey began four years ago, at the base of Chelmsford High School, home of the Lions. We were demons, timid and curious, recently opened to the new world spread before us. Even then, we were ready for the challenges laid out ahead.

As mortals we had gained a year's wisdom, which we used to light the torch of knowledge. Muses of the arts and the challenges of athletic games brought us out of our havens and prepared us to prove our place in the still-forming world around us. As the second year of our quest ended, we celebrated with an exciting festival at Canobie Lake Park.

Alas, our Promethean struggles continued. We were heroes and heroines, encountering perilous dangers such as the SAT's and Achievements. It was during this time that we elected our leaders, who would lead us safely through the turbulent waters. For successfully completing this leg of our odyssey, we celebrated in style at the Junior Cotillion and in amusement at the legendary realm of Cedardale.

As the fourth year of our quest commenced, we emerged into the halls of Chelmsford High School as the gods and goddesses, the Class of 1991. Most, realizing the proximity of their goals, vastly increased their efforts. However, some were afflicted with a disease known as senioritis and were never able to reach their full potential.

Once recognized as deities, we did not isolate ourselves from the rest of the world. Prevalent throughout the final year was a feeling of revelry. Many celebrations — the Morp, the All Hallows Eve Masquerade, the Holiday Festival — were enjoyed. Later we were granted gifts like college acceptances and scholarships.

At the end of the merrymaking we underwent a surge of excitement, during the time known as Senior Week. This was our last week to reign. We had gained our independence, increased our strengths, and honed our talents. A celebration of luncheons, banquets, and the legendary Prom culminated the four years we spent performing the Herculean labors expected of us, leading to our own Golden Fleece: GRADUATION. Here, all the people of the land arrived to laud our achievements.

Those who have performed outstandingly in all areas during the past four years are those who demonstrated a dedication to all forms of excellence. Our ambrosia of wisdom gained while at Chelmsford High School will be the foundation for our odyssey, but along the way it will be sweetened by the nectar of life. We, the gods and goddesses, the Class of 1991, have accomplished all that we can for ourselves and the others in the hallowed halls of Chelmsford High School. We now exit, relinquishing our thrones, thus ending our epic, and allowing the New Age of Man to begin.

The Council of Areopagus

Senior Class President Joshua Safdie

Officers John Rega, Jared Luskin, Joshua Safdie, and John Belanger with our venerable advisors Mrs. Swierzbins and Mrs. Foley.

odyssey n. An extended adventurous wandering.

In June of 1987, the class of 1991 left the quiet oasis of the McCarthy Middle School and set off on the epic journey of our high school education. For all of us at times it has seemed like a course with no direction, but as we look back across time, we can see that our odyssey has not been without excitement, and has not been without purpose.

Our first year in the great land of Chelmsford High School was truly frightening. But through hard labor and friendship, we managed to survive.

Sophomore year, the land that we had so newly become accustomed to underwent changes. Our beloved King Simonian retired and left us in the capable hands of King Betses. Our day changed from fifteen "mods" to seven periods. Although it was difficult for us to adapt to such major changes in the kingdom, we knew they were for the better. We kept our chins up and not only maintained a hold on what we had already accomplished, but made great strides forward in becoming more involved in the land.

By our third year, the end of our odyssey came into sight. We had many festivals to celebrate our victories, and the leaders of our pilgrimage were given the titles of President, Vice President, Secretary, and Treasurer. Under their leadership, with help from the council known as the Class Representatives, we made bold strides toward our ultimate goal, the prosperous city-states of College and the Real World.

Now our senior year is over. We are triumphant pilgrims and adventurers who, during our odyssey, have performed many deeds great and small. Now is the time when we receive our laurels and all our hard work pays off. Having been granted the high honor of graduation, we now have the power within us to face any challenge that the gods greet us with.

I would like to extend my gratitude to the Class of 1991 and the people who have helped make it so successful — Vice President John Belanger, Secretary Jared Luskin, Treasurer John Rega, the Class Representatives, and, of course, our sagacious and venerable advisors Mrs. Foley and Mrs. Swierzbins. Every class president should be blessed with such an enthusiastic and devoted group to work with.

To the Class of 1991 I would like to say that I feel immense pride in being the president and a member of such a wonderful group of people. One of the most vital aspects of a public school education is the interaction and camaraderie that develops among the students, and our class has certainly displayed these traits. The friends I have made in my four years at Chelmsford High have taught me things about friendship and love that no textbook ever could, and the lessons I have learned I will carry with me always and pass on to eager minds whenever I can. I hope that all of you leave Chelmsford High with as fond memories as I do, and I hope your lives are filled with love and music and happiness.

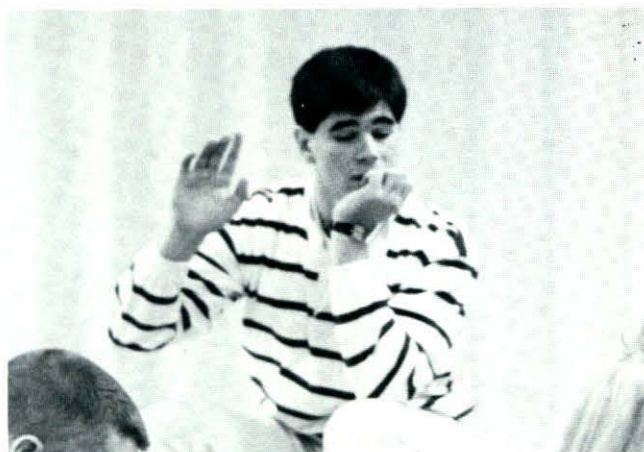

To the rest of our lives,

Joshua Safdie

THE MORP

It was the night of September 22, 1990, and every being, from the highest of the gods to the lowest of the demons, headed for Chelmsford High to dance the night away. The occasion was the Morp and all came in their oldest togas and most run-down sandals. The night was chilly and rainy, but that didn't stop the revelers from dressing in their summer togas one last time.

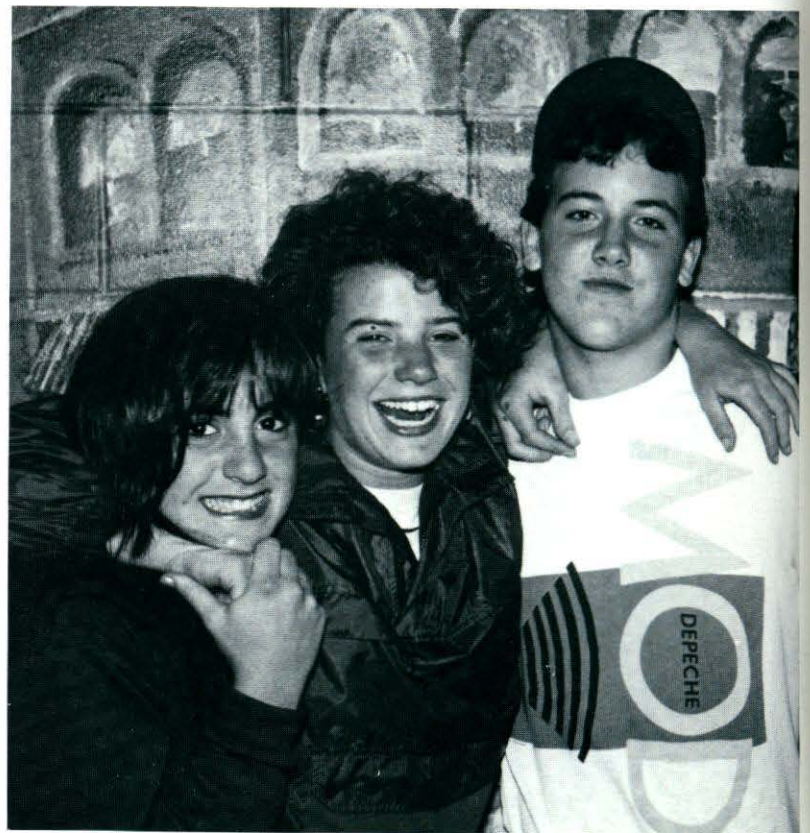

Even the blown fuse that shut off the sound system and ended the night prematurely didn't dampen anyone's spirits. Seasoned partygoers, the dancers found their own amusements. The Morp was proclaimed a grand success, earning large sums for the Class of '91.

Mark and Emily prove that chivalry is not dead.

Don't look now, Wayne . . .

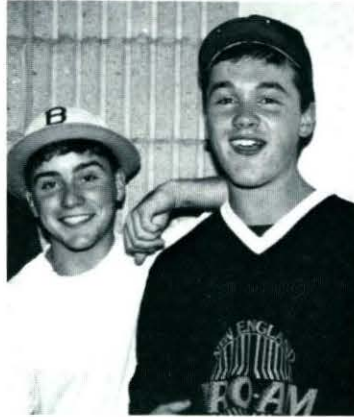

CHS, where the party never ends!

Jen, Leslie, and Pat take a break from their dancing.

Eric and Michelle enjoy a slow dance.

Having fun, Billy and Brian?

Give Mrs. Swierzbins her share, Marion!

Gods and goddesses party the hardest!

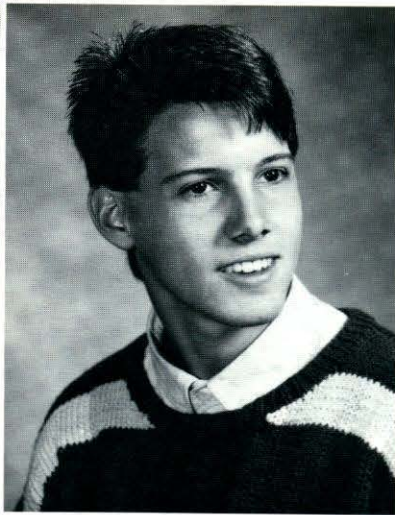

Mike, you're just too cute.

THE MAGAZINE DRIVE

Midas touched his finger to Chelmsford High School on Thursday, October 18, 1990, the day that kicked off the biggest fundraiser of the year for the Senior Class: The Magazine Drive. Seniors began a ten-day quest for magazine and music subscriptions. Students received M&M's, tee-shirts, hats, blankets, and stuffed lions as rewards for their hard work. Elusive mystery teachers roamed the halls with their candy bars filled with money and were much sought after by students wearing hats. A weepul on one's hat would double the prize and the fun.

Big sellers were Michelle Amerson, Jennifer Griffin, and Christine Godlewski — each sold over 25 magazines and were eligible for prizes of Herculean size. Many seniors also participated in the Money Scramble and were awarded the Golden Fleece of cash prizes.

The Class of 1991 raised $33,149 to offset Senior Week activities. Congratulations are extended to all who participated. Appreciation goes to the many parents, teachers, neighbors, and friends who bought magazines. Special thanks are given to Mr. Battle, Mrs. Foley, and Mrs. Swierzbins for donating their wisdom and time to the Class of 1991.

Mike Sawyer, Dan Isleib, Ken Dobbins, and Kevin MacNamera discuss who is going to give blood first.

"The Price is Right" portion of the Magazine Drive presentation kept Peter Dionne and Kate Buswick laughing.

During the blood drive, Josh Blagg ponders his options at the snack bar.

Brian Taranto receives support from friends Krista Mater and Jason Scott.

Frank Soracco and Karen Gilet wait to see if they won the $25 prize in "The Price is Right."

Giving blood seems to have been too much for Brian Field, seen here, slightly incapacitated.

Josh Safdie gives complementary class blankets to our advisors.

Mr. Betses kicks off the Magazine Drive.

THE BLOOD DRIVE

In the early morning hours of Friday, October 19, 1990, a white truck pulled up at the rear of Chelmsford High School, its red emblem signaling to staff and students what day had arrived. The International Red Cross was here, and people were scheduled to dedicate their time or to donate their blood to the annual Blood-Mobile.

For most, this was their first time giving blood and they were nervous, but the calm, patient nurses put to rest any lingering doubts. After completing a simple form, each donor's blood was tested, just as a precaution. Once these minor formalities were handled, the students were escorted to a stretcher, where they lay down. Blood donation commenced. The procedure lasted ten minutes, each student donating one pint.

After the contribution, a volunteer escorted the donor to the complementary snack bar, also run by students, where food and drinks were served to help replenish lost energy.

That day, ninety-one pints were donated by students and teachers who had the inclination to help those in need. The long lines were a sign of the generous attitude that prevails among members of the Class of 1991.

The Snowball

Anticipation filled the air on December 22 as the students of Chelmsford High School prepared for the first semi-formal of the year — the Snowball. Although it was an unusually warm evening, everyone was struck with the chill of excitement as they approached the Elks Hall. Music played, lights twinkled, and a festive spirit prevailed as people partook of the refreshments and visited with friends. Dressed in a vivid array of finery, those in attendance glided across the dance floor under the red, green, and white streamers.

The evening drifted away until it was time for the leaders of the gods and goddesses to step forward and be crowned. The king, Frank Soracco, led the queen, Karen Duggan, as they began their first royal dance! They were joined by the other members of the court, which included: John Lennox, Julio Vazquez, Andy Lynch, Mike Bartel, Julie Odom, Joanne Brown, Julie Cocoran, and Alyssa Dineen.

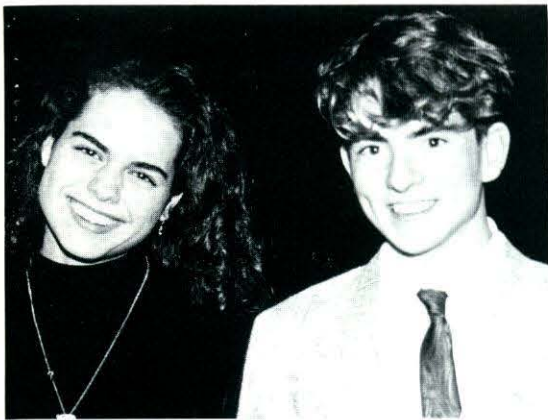

For the freshmen, it was their first semi-formal. For the seniors, it was one of their last, but all agreed that it was the best. As people departed, an atmosphere of cheer and holiday spirit was felt by all.

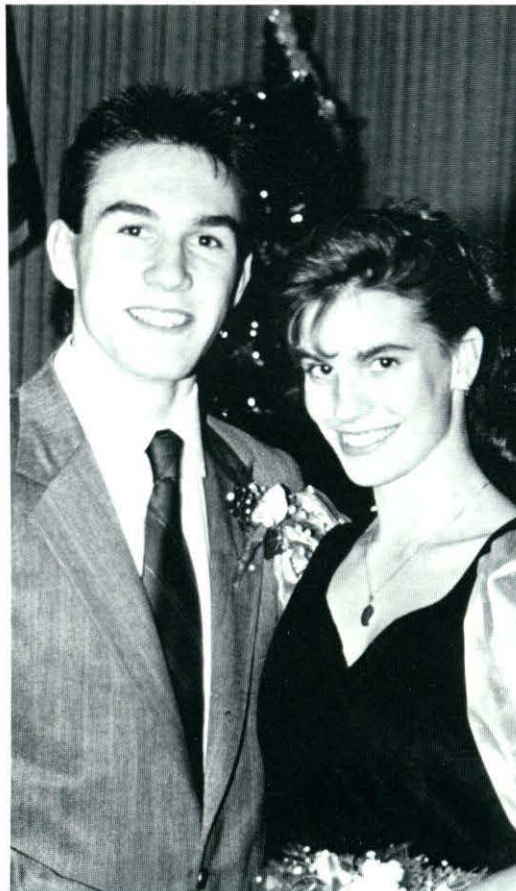

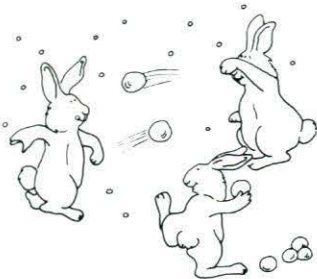

Todd, Jon, and Josh — The Three Musketeers!

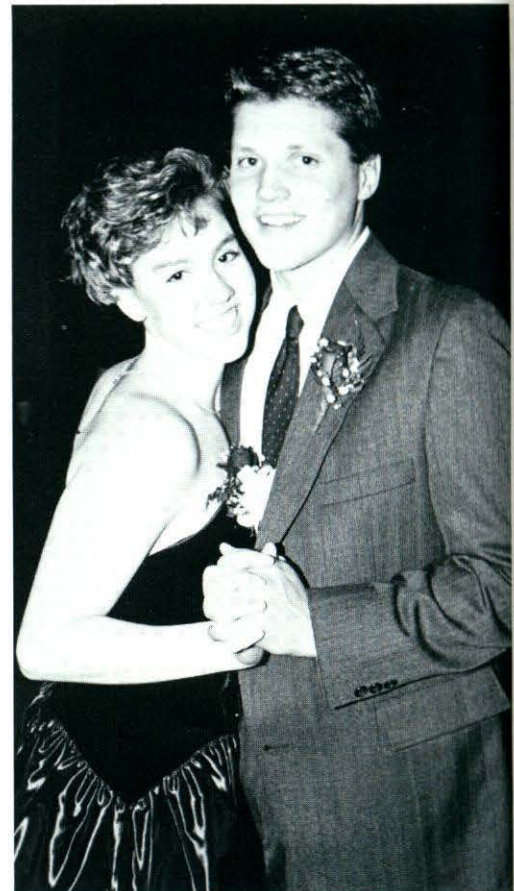

Don't Alyssa and Melissa make a cute couple!

Kate and Josh — the best couple in black and white!

Mike and Becky, a match made in heaven.

Alicia and Josh dance the night away.

Our King and Queen, Frank Soracco and Karen Duggan and their court.

Chris, Jackie, John, and Kate show that smiles were a common sight that night.

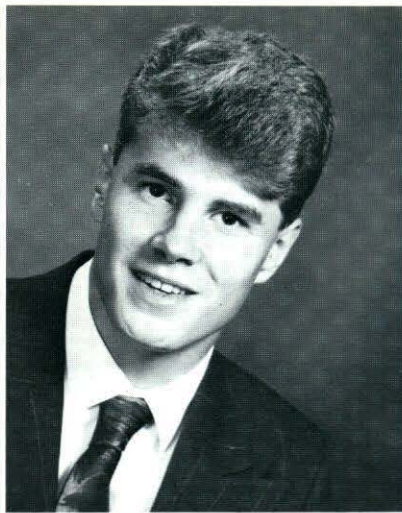

Michelle and Julio are just two of the people who had a "Snow" ball.

Friends Linda Mulkigian and Laura Hohmann ham it up for the camera.

High above the mortal realm, on the slopes of Mount Olympus, the gods and goddesses pass their days reveling in games and competitions that display their individual prowess. While all the deities are uniquely endowed with some skill or trait that distinguishes them from all others, a select few inevitably stand out as representing the epitome of their class. The twenty-two Olympians, appearing on these four pages, were bestowed this honor by their 410 peers in recognition of their unique characteristics. Congratulations to each and every one of them!

Another movie, Pete? Where's the popcorn?

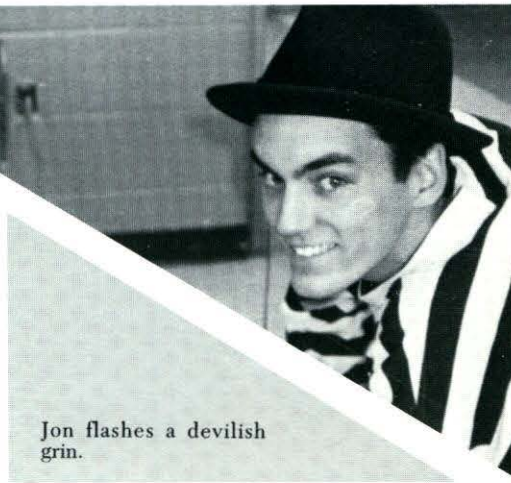

Gods dealing the cards of destiny

Delanna, Gina, and Chrissy are all smiles for the camera.

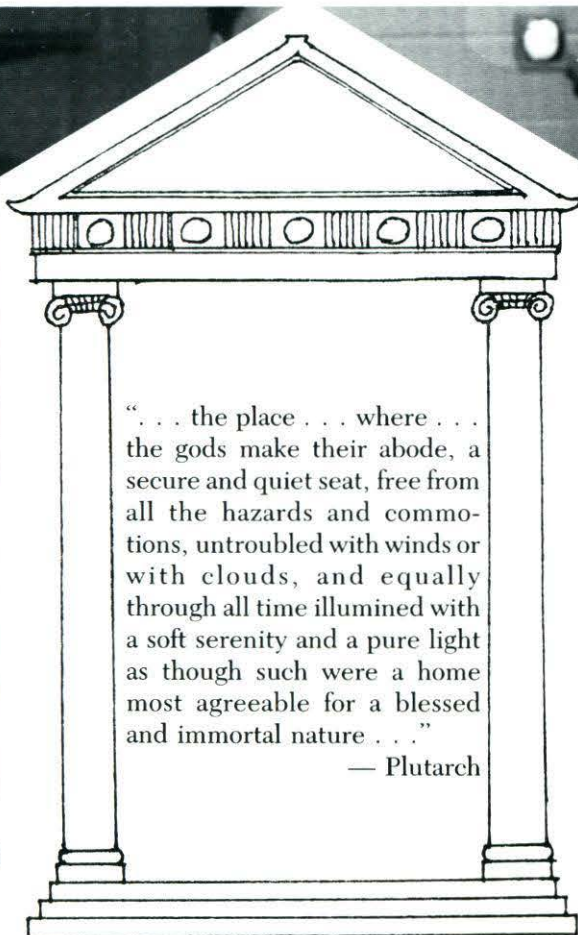

Sherry gives us a natural smile.

Jon flashes a devilish grin.

PEACE

“. . . the place . . . where . . . the gods make their abode, a secure and quiet seat, free from all the hazards and commotions, untroubled with winds or with clouds, and equally through all time illumined with a soft serenity and a pure light as though such were a home most agreeable for a blessed and immortal nature . . .”

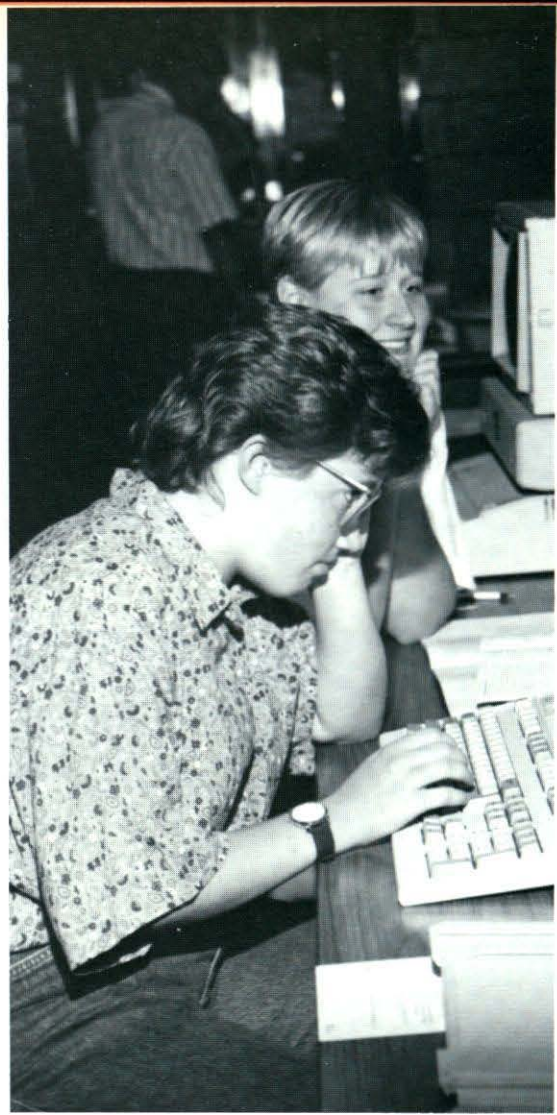

— Plutarch

I Want YOU For The US Army!

Bridget and Mary, don't let those computers take a "byte" out of your day!

HEROES

As heroes, the Class of 1992 is the most powerful of the underclasses. Second only to the gods and goddesses, the heroes now only have them to look up to. They assist the gods and goddesses whenever possible, providing endless support and encouragement. The heroes offer a spectrum of talents and powers that enable CHS to maintain a fine reputation.

Looking back upon the past three years, the heroes have participated in a number of events. They watched and learned from the Olympians, who strived to produce a solid basis for their community. Through walk-a-thons, class trips, and fund-raisers, the heroes have helped to create a foundation for CHS to thrive on. Remembering to take time out for pleasure and recreation, the juniors can smile upon memories of their Cotillion, sporting events, and activities, both in and out of school. The triumphs have been prolific, ranging from the enthusiasm shown at pep rallies to leadership roles within the school. There have been many long, hard struggles, but the heroes have remained strong throughout their endeavors. Surviving PSAT's, SAT's, and proposition 2½ was no easy task; yet, the Class of 1992 emerged with their heads held high. At times, when demands issued by teachers, peers, and upperclassmen were thrust at the juniors, they resembled Atlas, with the weight of the world on their shoulders. Yet they conquered these obstacles with the type of courage, determination, and endurance of true heroes. The Class of 1992 used common sense, logic, and trial-and-error to accomplish the seemingly impossible.

Another crucial factor of heroic life is setting good examples and serving as role models for those who are less than heroes. In ancient times, hero worship was frequently combined with godly idolization, and with good reason. Heroes were greater, loftier, and closer to the gods.

The heroic Class of 1992 is one with a personality entirely its own. Members of this class have shown a fierce loyalty to what they believe in, and a vigorous desire to be the best. Although they rarely show it, the Class of 1992 is quietly observing the gods and goddesses, trying to understand what it takes to dominate the entire civilization. The juniors are swift learners with a positive attitude, preparing to be the ruling class.

The Class of 1992 is ready to reign. They have had three long years of experience, complete with the typical highs and lows, fulfillments and disappointments. Many mythological heroes have surpassed their expectations and have risen far above their limits. The success of the heroes is as clear as the view from the top of Mt. Olympus. The panorama that unfolds from that pinnacle will belong to the Class of 1992. The future is as sparkling as the setting sun that follows the present gods and goddesses. The heroes will await the coming year in full realization that the best is yet to come.

HEROES

MORTALS

The mortals are the Class of 1993. Compared to a god or goddess, a mere mortal seems quite average and nondescript. On the contrary, the sophomores enjoy the simple pleasures that life has to offer. This class knows that being a god or goddess can be glamorous and rewarding, but there are certain pressures that go along with it. Higher classes are expected to be civilized and mature, while the mortals can be a bit more laid back. The mortals use their time wisely, getting used to the surroundings and gaining experience as they go.

The Class of 1993 has successfully survived their freshman year, which is perhaps the most difficult of all. They have been slowly acquiring prestige from the moment they stepped through the doors of CHS. The mortals are beginning to feel at home, and they are less intimidated by higher beings. Their sophomore year brings an opportunity to spend more time with friends. The mortals are becoming increasingly aware of the opportunities that CHS presents. They are starting to realize that CHS is a pretty good place after all.

Because they are not the lowest of the underclasses, the mortals can saunter down the halls with confidence. They are no longer afraid of being trampled on the stairwell or getting lost in the never-ending hallways. The mortals follow the lead of the gods and goddesses, in hopes of one day attaining the power to rule. The sophomores are capable of achieving their goal, because man at his noblest is "almost godlike." However, the mortals still realize that at CHS, the gods and goddesses have the last word. The high school is under their direction, and they are the ones who issue the orders; "men ought to obey . . . because every law is an invention and gift of the gods."

The freshmen view the mortals as their own role models. The freshmen can better relate to mortals than they can to gods or goddesses. The Class of 1993 is slowly learning that hard work does pay off, and the mortals are the perfect examples. They entered CHS timid and afraid. Now, they have earned the respect and admiration of an entire class. The mortals can enjoy the luxury of having precedence.

Now that the mortals are aware of all of the activities that CHS has to offer, they will become more involved. They are looking forward to junior year, when they will advance to the rank of heroes, and they will be that much closer to becoming gods and goddesses. But for now, the mortals are content to sit back and enjoy one of the best years of their lives. There is a peaceful coexistence between man and the gods and goddesses.

The mortals know that they have two more fun-filled years at CHS. With time, the summit will be within their grasp.

DEMONS

The demons of 1994 is the class that is furthest from the gods and goddesses. They are the newcomers to the land. The demons are amateurs with little experience, yet, they stand strong in their efforts to fit into everyday life at CHS.

As demons, the Class of 1994 is subject to endure the occasional wrath from gods, goddesses, heroes and mortals. They must put up with the upperclassmen, who do not make their lives easy. Despite the fact that others attempt to make the demons feel unwelcome, the freshmen are in awe of those above them. They salute their idols.

The demons deserve praise and recognition for surviving their first year in high school. CHS is a lot different from the restricting and confining ways of junior high. The demons had to adjust to a larger building and many new people. They encountered a wider curriculum to choose from, in addition to brand new teachers. The demons met every challenge with grace. They have perfected their routine, mastering the basic skills before moving on. The demons have pushed themselves to the limit, striving to achieve their personal best.

Long ago, the Olympians believed that demons were "malevolent spirits" with supernatural powers. However, here at CHS demons are not regarded in that sense. In order to ensure that CHS has a solid, stable future, the demons are "extremely powerful in their own right." They observe upperclassmen and follow their lead. Although the demons still occupy a subordinate position, they will never stop trying to rise in status.

Chelmsford High represents a new beginning for the demons. Just one year ago, the demons controlled the junior high school. The other classes worshiped them, and looked to them for guidance and leadership. The Class of 1994 dominated, doing anything they pleased. "Mankind stood perpetually on guard against the attempts of demons." Now, the demons are the lowest class in the school. They are ordered around, virtually defenseless. The demons must tolerate the setback of being put on freshmen teams instead of varsity or junior varsity. They need to get used to a whole new way of life. The demons discover CHS traditions, such as fund-raisers and awards nights. They will become more involved with the school, and their help will be an asset.

The demons are off to a good start. The experience gained will be useful in their next role as mortals. Some day, the demons will rise.

We give up! Whose locker?

The Inside Scoop

Did you ever come to school to find your locker decorated? No matter how much you yell at your friends not to decorate, they always do it anyway. It's embarrassing, because people you don't even know wish you a happy birthday. However, secretly, you are thrilled to see your friends care enough to make a fuss over you.

Lockers at CHS aren't decorated just for birthdays, though. They also let people know what's going on in school. For instance, during the various sports seasons, the members of the spirit club spent hours decorating the lockers of team members to psyche them up. It's obvious when sports have important games or meets; maroon and white streamers cascade off the lockers. These decorations tell about the spirit of CHS. However, if you want to know CHS on a more personal basis, you should check out insides of lockers.

For instance, most students decorate his or her own locker with favorite pictures. Usually, the back-sides or locker doors are plastered with photos of friends and times gone by. Lots of messages are written on those little sticky pieces of yellow paper. By the end of the year, many lockers are fire hazards and deserve to be condemned by the Board of Health.

Students also tape up pictures of popular sports stars, the most recent sex symbols, the latest music groups, and the coolest cars. However, these are fads. One month it's Mel Gibson, the next month it's Tom Cruise. Many of the guys' lockers are covered with posters of Michael Jordan, Ray Bourque, Herschel Walker, and other sports favorites, sexy women posing on expensive cars, and the latest heavy metal group. A lot of girls may be into sports and heavy metal, too, but it's frequently because of cute guys on the team or in the band. Also, girls tend to have pictures of the newest Hollywood hunk, guys with great tans and huge muscles; they usually have photos of their best friends, too.

CHS lockers are known to contain message boards, mirrors, stickers, comic strips, old gum, and even answering machines. Some students don't decorate their lockers at all; they just add their mess to the confusion of someone else's.

In many ways, lockers make a statement. They announce birthdays and important sports events, but they also tell a lot about the individual. Whether covered in maroon and white or colorful balloons or even if its bare, never judge a locker by its door. Inside tells the real story.

Melissa and Linda, did you forget how to spell "Happy?"

THE DAILY CHAOS

Chelmsford High School, Volume MCMXCI

WAR IN THE PERSIAN GULF

In the early morning hours of August 2, 1990, Iraqi forces invaded and conquered its small, Middle Eastern neighbor, Kuwait. Since then, international officials worked around the clock trying to restore peace to the unstable region. However, their efforts were fruitless as, on January 16, America engaged in its first war since Vietnam.

Signs of Iraqi aggression could be seen as early as April 12, 1990, when Iraqi President Saddam Hussein made clear his vehement opposition to a Voice of America broadcast which denounced "police states" such as Iraq. About this time, Senator Bob Dole pointed out an unusually large Iraqi weapons build-up. Later that month, the CIA discovered plans for an Iraqi invasion of Kuwait. These reports were dismissed.

Further into the year, at an Arab League meeting, Iraq announced the shortness of time to solve its problems with Kuwait. According to Iraq, Kuwait had been defying OPEC regulations by overproducing oil, thereby seriously depressing an already failing Iraqi economy. Connected with this was the claim by both sides to the small yet remarkably oil-rich Rumalia oil field. On top of this, there was Baghdad's insistence, and Kuwait's refusal, that Kuwait forgive half of the $20 million debt incurred by Iraq during its war with Iran.

Also noticed were Iraq's new terrorist ties and their Scud missile modifications towards Israel, both foreshadowing potential Iraqi aggression.

During mid-July, Middle Eastern tension grew, as well as Iraqi paranoia, as Hussein lashed out against Arab nations for their support of Kuwait. July 20, Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney received warning from Israeli intelligence sources of a possible Iraqi attack, supported by Iraqi troops massing at the Kuwaiti border. As Iraq became noticeably more aggressive, there was an Egyptian appeal for more time to influence Iraq. By July 27, there was a motion in the United Nations to set economic sanctions against Iraq, but the US State Department resisted.

On August 1, the CIA issued a warning to Iraq but, on August 2, in the space of about twelve hours, Iraq had taken Kuwait. In immediate response to this, Washington banned all trade with Iraq and froze all Iraqi and Kuwaiti assets, followed by a statement on August 4 by the European economic community that they would boycott oil from Iraq and Kuwait. On August 6, the UN Security Council imposed mandatory trade embargoes on Iraq, while Dick Cheney received permission to base troops on Saudi Arabian soil.

Saddam Hussein officially announced his annexation of Kuwait on August 8, as Britain pledged to send troops to Saudi Arabia. In an effort to gain support in the Middle East, President Bush invited Jordanian King Hussein to his summer home in Kennebunkport, ME. However, nothing was accomplished, and King Hussein returned home later to establish an alliance with Saddam Hussein. Shortly following this, Saddam Hussein declared a Jihad, or Holy War on the United States and its people, especially George Bush.

On August 14, Saddam suddenly issued peace proposals, starting with a surprise offer to arch-enemy Iran to return land and prisoners captured during their eight-year war. Shortly thereafter, Iran and Iraq established diplomatic relations.

Later, in the landmark change of events, most foreign diplomats were ousted from Iraq and Kuwait, followed by a retaliatory ostracism of Iraqi diplomats from Washington.

Events proceeded rather slowly for several weeks, against a constant backdrop of massing international forces in the Middle East, including the US, the Soviet Union, France, Britain, and later, troops from the United Arab Emirates. The only major development occurred when the UN trade embargoes were expanded to include air trade, signifying an increased military outlook.

This outlook was confirmed over the course of the following months as the international troop levels for "Operation Desert Shield" continued to increase.

Hopes for peace further dwindled as Resolution 661 was passed by the United Nations. This action went beyond sanctions and set a January 15 deadline for Saddam Hussein to pull his troops from Kuwait. If, by midnight of this date, Saddam Hussein did not comply, the United Nations was authorized to take whatever action necessary to force Iraqi troops from Kuwait. The United States Congress followed suit shortly thereafter by allowing the use of force against Iraq.

Days before the scheduled deadline, US Secretary of State James Baker met in Geneva, Switzerland with Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz for one last attempt at peace. Things looked grim as neither diplomat seemed eager to budge in his position, Aziz even refusing a letter directly from Bush to Hussein. At the end of the short meeting, both diplomats left, having accomplished nothing in avoiding a war.

January 15 arrived and the whole world waited expectantly as the clock counted down to midnight. Midnight came and went, Iraqi troops still occupied Kuwait, and thoughts turned to if and when action would be taken against Iraq.

Most of New England was eating dinner at 7:00 PM EST, when the first reports of allied air sorties hit the airwaves and Operation Desert Shield became Operation Desert Storm.

CNN was on top of the news, its journalists courageously reporting from what had suddenly become a war zone.

12,000 of these sorties were flown in the first few days of the invasion. In response, Iraq launched Scud missiles, not at allied forces, but at the Israeli cities of Tel Aviv, Jerusalem, and Haifa, intending to draw Israel into the war and destroy an already fragile Arab coalition.

Scuds continued to be launched, but they no longer reached their targets. The Patriot anti-missile systems, manufactured by Raytheon, had been put into operation and were tracking down Scuds with deadly accuracy.

In an attempt to divert allied efforts, Saddam Hussein ordered the piping of millions of gallons of oil into the Persian Gulf. The spill spread to ten by 135 miles but, through strategic bombing of the pipelines, the flow was stopped and the spill could be cleaned up.

Events took an unusual turn as Iraqi planes began to take refuge in Iran, where they are said by Iranian officials to be "impounded" until the end of the war.

Just when the war will end is the question locked in the hearts and minds of Americans. Hopes for a quick, decisive war have disappeared. Further, an impending ground war could lead into an all-too-bloody land-based battle. Whether this war in the Persian Gulf will turn into another Vietnam is of concern to all Americans. Only time will prove the validity of this concern.

Editor's Note: Shortly after this article was submitted for publication, the Soviet Union introduced a peace proposal to Iraq. As of yet, no significant developments have occurred in regard to this. Regrettably, due to the essence of time, we cannot wait to determine this action's repercussions.

FEAR OF TERRORISM CANCELS EXCHANGES

Many students had high hopes for the various exchanges scheduled for this year. But, as the threat of war with Iraq approached, these hopes dwindled. Due to a war with Iraq, there could be increased terrorist attacks. The possibility of being a victim of an attack on an airplane or in an airport became very real to these students.

As of January 18, 1991, the Spanish and French Exchanges were cancelled by the school committee and Dr. Moser, Superintendent of Chelmsford Schools. Other exchanges, such as the British, Italian and Japanese, were temporarily cancelled due to the fact that their departure dates were scheduled later in the school year.

There was still the question of whether or not the money would be refunded. Since the plane tickets, the major part of the total cost, were non-refundable, there was still doubt as to whether or not the airlines and School Partnerships International, the organization responsible for the exchanges, would refund these costs.

There was a great deal of disappointment among all the students who had intended to travel abroad this year. But in the eyes of concerned parents, teachers, and other school officials, it was a small price to pay for the safety of the students and advisors.

A NEW KIND OF "OIL WAR"

Oil gushed into the Persian Gulf from Sea Island, just ten miles off the coast of Kuwait. Saddam Hussein had opened the pipelines, spilling oil into the fragile ecosystem and with it, he had hoped to open a floodgate of problems for the allied forces. With this one fateful move, he had changed his war against an opposing army into one against the planet itself.

As a deterrent to allied bombings, the maneuver was a failure. Days after the spillage was first detected, strategic bombing missions were flown which successfully destroyed the manifolds that connect the pipelines to the refineries, thereby stopping the flow.

One problem the spill did create occurred when Hussein's troops attempted to light the spill on fire. Rather than engulf the area in flames and deplete the gulf of oxygen, the slick had spread too thin, allowing only a smokescreen to be formed, disabling some of the heat-guided "smart" bombs.

Although it was not an issue in this incident, an oil spill if not contained theoretically could have been disastrous to the troops stationed in Riyadh. Oil could have contaminated allied drinking water and chemical weapon wash-stations, both proving to be serious health hazards.

Soon after, the United States government sent out teams of experts, many of whom had served in the cleanup of the Exxon Valdez spill two years prior. Despite their efforts, major damage had been done to the surrounding environment. Unlike Prince William Sound, the sight of the Exxon Valdez disaster, the Persian Gulf is virtually enclosed and natural dispersal of water is very limited. Within days, the spill had spread to cover 250 square miles. It had contaminated sea grass beds, poisoning the birds and fish that fed upon it.

Regardless of its tactical failures, the act succeeded in one end. With this new kind of modern technological warfare, Saddam Hussein introduced into the formula the factor of the environmental consequences of war. When a soldier is hurt, his commanding officer summons a medic. Who answers the call when a world screams?

Control of the air held a major part in the first month of conflict.

TIE A YELLOW RIBBON . . .

They're on car antennae and hood ornaments. They're tied to backpacks, worn as bracelets, or pinned on clothes. They're tied in bows to mailboxes or trees and hanging from houses. They're yellow ribbons, and anywhere you look people are showing their support of Operation Desert Storm with them.

The ribbons come in several varieties. Some are quite large; others are small. No matter the size the yellow ribbons serve the same purpose: to express general concern and support of our troops in Saudi Arabia. On occasion, one can see a simple yet poignant ribbon, usually with a small American flag visible. From the unobtrusive way it is displayed, one knows that particular ribbon is in support of someone special stationed in the Gulf.

Such support for armed action is rare. Hopefully, the yellow ribbons of support will be soon exchanged for the white ribbons of peace.

WAR ENDS IN THE GULF

February 27, 1991. President George Bush stood before a rare joint session of Congress and, with head held high, declared, "Kuwait is liberated."

On February 23, a mere five weeks after the start of the devastating air campaign, the ground offensive into Iraq and Kuwait was initiated. Termed by the media "The 100-Hour War" because of its efficiency, the main thrust of the attack met little resistance. Allied troops found underarmed and underfed Iraqi soldiers surrendering to the prospect of receiving food and medical attention.

Of course, war was not simple. The largest battle of the ground war took many American lives, but the cost to Iraq was 90% of their tanks. In all, approximately 240 Americans lost their lives as opposed to the many thousands of Iraqi soldiers who died.

The fighting is over, but the real task lies in the period after. Diplomats work around the clock, trying to maintain peace in the region. The issues are many, but within them lies an opportunity to resolve the twenty-year-old Palestinian question. The war may have been short, and American pride may have been on an all-time high, but the war's consequences are far-reaching.

Protests of the war were reminiscent of those of the 1960s.

FREEDOM!

November 9, 1989 — A day which all Germans, as well as the rest of the world, will forever remember as the day the Berlin Wall came crashing down, the fallen icon of the Iron Curtain which has overshadowed Eastern Europe for the past four decades. In a year of historic changes, we watched with amazement as the Eastern Bloc nations underwent major political strides towards democracy. November 9th was hardly the beginning, nor was it the end, of the changes that were to sweep Europe.

In Germany, the breaking down of the wall began months earlier as the discontentment, growing among the population, revealed itself in mass demonstrations in major cities. Coupled with the strong, yet peaceful, protests was a mass exodus of East Germans to the West as the neighboring countries of Hungary and Czechoslovakia opened their borders, allowing refugees to cross to freedom. These events precipitated the downfall of Erich Honneker, the East German Communist president, and led to his replacement by Egon Krenz, who later made the historic decision to open all borders and allow unrestricted travel. Signs of Communist defeat were evident soon after when the entire party leadership resigned on December 3rd.

With new government officials, East Germany debated the issue of reunification, faced with the controversy of Germany's past. With the majority of its population urging unification, the East German parliament made the historic decision on August 23, 1990 of reunification under the West German constitution. On October 3rd, "Unity Day," East Germany — the German Democratic Republic — officially ceased to exist as its territory of 5 newly reconstituted states joined those of the Federal Republic of Germany. As celebrations erupted throughout the united country, concerns continued to pour steadily over the economic problems of unification. Nevertheless, the year ended with a final historic event — that of all-German elections on December 2nd, which elected Helmut Kohl to the post of Chancellor of a united Germany.

However, Germany was not the only nation to celebrate in Eastern Europe. The Domino Theory ironically held true in reverse — when one country "falls," its neighbors "fall" as well. Remarkably, the unification of Germany had hardly been expected to occur within this decade, for East Germany had been the most prosperous of the Eastern Bloc countries and had been expected to endure.

June 4, 1989 — The country foremost with political changes in Europe was Poland, whose leading opposition group, Solidarity, was finally legalized as a union in early 1989 after being outlawed for seven years. Registering itself as a political party, Solidarity led negotiations with the ruling Communists to introduce reforms into the nation. In June, the Polish population showed its support for reform by electing Solidarity members to all but one of 261 contested seats in Poland's unprecedented parliamentary elections. The Communist leadership had little alternative but to form a new coalition government; and as a result, Tadeusz Mazowiecki, a member of Solidarity, was sworn in on August 24th as the first non-Communist Prime Minister in Eastern Europe since Joseph Stalin first gained control four decades earlier. Other changes were also in the making as the country prepared itself for its first national presidential election on November 25, 1990. After campaigns that rivaled those of the West, Lech Walesa, the chairman of Solidarity since its conception, emerged as the leading candidate against a foreign business man, Stanislaw Tyminski. Victorious in a run-off election on December 9th, Lech Walesa was finally inaugurated as Poland's first non-Communist president after years of Communist repression.

November 24, 1989 — Czechoslovakia's turnaround occurred in only a matter of days in late November, but, evidently, the move towards reform in policy had begun earlier. In fact, it was Czechoslovakia's opening of its borders that prompted the East German exodus in early October and contributed to the real breaking of the wall. A purge of Communist leaders in November soon led to the formation of a new Cabinet, with eleven out of twenty-one members being non-Communist. An even more astonishing event was the election of playwright Vaclav Havel, just released from jail in May, to the highest post in government, the first non-Communist president since the Iron Curtain originally covered the land. As new leaders were entering the political arena, old tyrants were being cast aside.

December 25, 1989 — Romanians rejoiced as the reign of terror by dictator Nicolae Ceausescu finally ended in his execution by the temporary government of the Front for National Salvation. However, the death of this Communist tyrant hardly ended the violence erupting throughout the country. Scattered incidents of fighting continued between Ceausescu's secret police force and supporters of reform. After reaching a ceasefire, the troubled country, like others of the Eastern Bloc, faced numerous economic and social problems as they plan ahead, hoping to determine their fate in upcoming free elections.

March 11, 1990 — The tumbling of Communism occurring throughout Eastern Europe can be seen largely as a result of the changes that took place in the Soviet Union. Since the selection of Mikhail Gorbachev as Soviet party chief in 1985, the political climate of the world has thawed as this unique leader pursued a policy of reform — “glasnost” — in his country. However, in loosening the reins of Communism in Russia by allowing more political freedom and elections, Gorbachev has failed to solve the major social and economic ills plaguing his nation. Growing cries for independence from several Soviet Republics has created a state of unrest that affects not only the Soviet Union, but also the Eastern Bloc nations and the rest of the world. Gorbachev's reforms has brought Communism in Russia to the breaking point while leading the Soviet satellite nations to question their ties to the union. The disintegration of relations within the union has been especially apparent in the conflicts between the central government and the Baltic states. The Lithuanian declaration of independence and secession from the Soviet “Union” on March 11th led to similar actions in other republics. The open defiance of the Baltic states in various acts throughout the year bespoke of a greater conflict to come. While most of the world's attention was turned towards the Persian Gulf in late 1990, the Soviets sent military troops to the Baltic states, an action which culminated in the military's seizure of buildings in Latvia and Lithuania on January 2, 1991. Such a demonstration of force showed a harder line in Soviet policy that may be the result of the social chaos in which the country is wallowing. With the great uncertainties overshadowing the Soviet Union, whether or not Mikhail Gorbachev will keep his country united at any cost is a concern that will focus us towards future events in that nation.

December 20, 1989 — Not only in Eastern Europe was the collapse of the Communism and oppression evident. In Panama, people showed their opposition to the despotism of dictator Manuel Noriega by electing Guillermo Endara to the presidency in their May 1989 elections. Yet, despite such evident discontent, Noriega refused to remove his hold on power and remained in control of the country through his military. Such acts of injustice and corruption led to the December 20th invasion of Panama by U.S. troops, which ended in Noriega's ouster from office and extradition to the United States on drug charges. Though the people of Panama are finally free from his violent dictatorship and under their own elected government, the future success of their country's “democracy” will depend upon the aid of other nations in reviving their poor economic and social conditions.

June 4, 1989 — We return to this historic date, this time, however, not to rejoice, but to look with horror, at the events that unfurled in China. In the country that first stirred the hope for reform, the seeds of change were crushed in a massive show of force in the early morning hours of June 4th. Just as the Poles were celebrating the overwhelming victory of Solidarity, the students of a peaceful seven week demonstration in Tienanmen Square were being massacred, ironically, by the “People's Army.” The hopes of a population were quickly and ruthlessly swept away by the storm of artillery in the night; one can only wonder if the wall of repression in China will ever be destroyed. But despite the brutality shown by the Chinese government against the demonstrators in Beijing, the longing for freedom and prosperity continues on in the country. Luckily, some student leaders escaped to form nationwide underground movements which may rise again someday when the anger of a people can no longer be suppressed by their fears. Nevertheless, the courageousness shown by the Chinese activists in the Tienanmen Square confrontation was an impetus to the voices of discontent in the Eastern Bloc nations.

A lone protester halting tank maneuvers in Tienanmen Square

Although we look with sadness upon the outcome in China, we can only rejoice and wonder at the amazing transformations in Eastern Europe as well as other parts of the world that are continuing today.

Senior Citizen Prom

Chelmsford High's Dining Room I bustled with activity as everyone awaited the arrival of some very important guests. Outside, the balmy night breeze added to the allure of the early twilight.

One by one, the limousines pulled up to the school. Passengers were stylishly escorted into the building. Greeted with corsages, the senior citizens were the perfect example of elegance and grace. Thus began the Senior Citizen Prom — May 9, 1990.

Upon arrival at Chelmsford High School, each guest was offered the opportunity to have a professional photograph for free. It would serve as a happy reminder of this special occasion.

The senior citizens were treated to an evening of dining and dancing. The theme of the prom was "Memories." Everyone held their own personal memories deep in their heart, and some new ones were created that spring night. Local nursing homes participated, along with the Chelmsford Senior Center, which sold tickets.

The prom was organized and run by the Thomas Jefferson Forum, under the direction of Mr. Battle. Forum members and other student volunteers were kept busy all day, decorating the cafeteria and serving dinner.

A one-man band provided entertainment for the entire evening. The songs included Golden Oldies, turn-of-the-century classics, and "Old Time Rock and Roll." The dance floor was packed for every number. Some senior citizens got up out of their wheelchairs to do the polka!

The highlight of the evening was the crowning of the king and queen. After their names were drawn from a hat, the radiant couple proudly displayed their crowns. They were Pauline Santirre, from Palm Manor, and James Wamsely, from Sunny Acres. The news of their success was met with deafening applause.

As the evening wore on, it became apparent that the so-called "generation gap" was virtually nonexistent. Some student volunteers were leaning against the wall, exhausted, while the seniors were still full of energy and raring to go. The students learned some classic dances, while the seniors learned some modern ones.

The Senior Citizen Prom was a tremendous success. It is sure to become an annual event. New friends were made, old acquaintances renewed, and a good time was had by all.

Senior Citizen Olympics

When student volunteers from Chelmsford High School encountered senior citizens from area nursing homes, the result was a fun-filled day of smiles, laughter, and new friends. The occasion was the Senior Olympics — June 6, 1990.

The Olympics were coordinated by the Thomas Jefferson Forum of CHS and the Greater Lowell Chapter of LIFE (Living is for the Elderly). Thirteen local nursing homes participated; 120 residents were in attendance. The Olympics were made possible by the 140 freshmen and sophomore volunteers from CHS.

Upon arriving at the gym, each resident was greeted by a student (their companion for the rest of the day). The students assisted the residents in each of the eleven games. They participated in events such as golf, badminton, basketball, and bowling. Each area was worth a maximum of twenty points, but the residents acquired five points just for trying. The sponge throw seemed to be a favorite, with both the students and the residents. In this, a resident had to hurl a sopping wet sponge at the face of a student.

Lunch was held after the residents completed the events and tabulated their scores. This was an opportunity for young and old to get better acquainted. The residents told tales of school days way back when, and they learned about modern education and how times have changed. While the residents were reflecting upon "the good old days," the students were experiencing them.

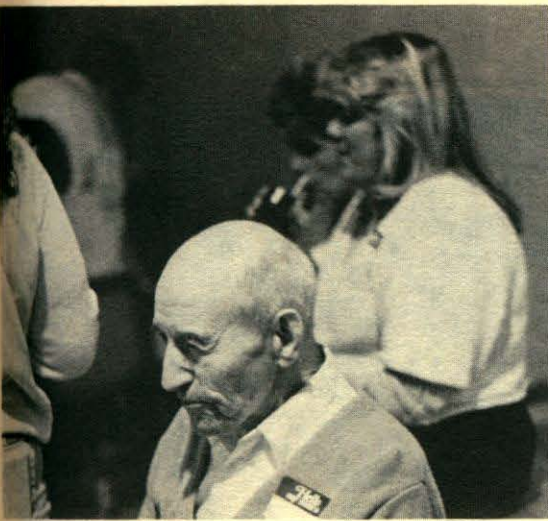

Throughout the day, harmonica music was provided by a resident, Leon Rynn. His lively tunes were a main attraction.

All of the activity received much attention from the media. Local newspapers and television stations were well represented. Many residents were interviewed, and their comments about the Olympics were full of optimism.

Later in the afternoon, while waiting for the scores to be added up, the students began a friendly game of softball. The residents were on the sidelines, cheering. Soon after, there was a resident pitcher, catcher, and batter. Before long, the students were the ones who were cheering. They were encouraging the residents to swing the bat and go through the bases. Even the most experienced senior, who was 97, gave it a run. In the end, it was a tie because everyone was having too much fun to keep score.

The awards ceremony was the conclusion of the day. The top three wheelchair and ambulatory contestants were presented with trophies. There were also prizes for the senior with the most enthusiasm, most spirit, and cleanest sneakers. All of the residents who participated received a blue ribbon.

From outside the CHS gym, it appeared to be a normal school day. Loud cheers of encouragement erupted from within. As always, Chelmsford High school was full of teachers, students, and the young at heart.

Dr. Troughton, who are you talking to?

Sylvester Ingeme: Business Manager

This year brought new personnel to our administrative positions. Sylvester Ingeme, our new Business Manager and David Troughton, Assistant Superintendent, have both joined what they both call, "a great, brand new team."

Mr. Ingeme is from the South Shore, having held other Business Administration jobs in the past. He likes the size of Chelmsford, because it "has a lot of identity, it's country, but also a small city."

He enjoys working with the new team. He says they work, but also have a lot of fun. He sees a great opportunity "when people start fresh."

Even though his job doesn't give him a lot of opportunity to meet many teachers and students, he "enjoys working through the buildings," and tries to touch base with as many people as possible. In closing, he said that he is familiarizing himself with his responsibilities and is enjoying the cooperation of the quality Chelmsford staff.

Mr. Ingeme has brought new insights to Chelmsford. He will be an asset in determining the school system's bright future.

The Superintendent hard at work.

Dr. Moser and Quang have a deep, literary discussion.

Dr. Richard Moser, Superintendent of Schools

"Our greatest contribution is to be sure that there is a teacher in every classroom who cares that every student every day learns and grows and feels like a human being." These words hang in the office of and are treated respectfully by Dr. Richard Moser, Chelmsford's new Superintendent of Schools.

Dr. Moser comes from Vermont, where he explains that the structure of schools is very different. There, each school has its own School Committee, so he was heading up seven committees rather than Chelmsford's one. He prefers our more traditional format.

About being visual and attending school functions, he says, "Anytime, any place. I think it's very important to set an example by relating with people." And he has been true to his word. His overall feeling is that "everyone . . . should be treated with respect, (he'll) help all kids do well no matter what."

Dr. Moser likes Chelmsford, and is impressed with the students and teachers. He sees the most important part of education as working together.

Dr. Moser says that the three most important qualities in a teacher are, "investment in children, relationships with students, and the willingness to take a risk. Be innovative and different."

With a new superintendent with a positive attitude, Chelmsford is destined for great things. Working together, caring, motivation, and visuality are all a part of excellence. Dr. Moser promises to do his part to make that happen.

Dr. David Troughton, Assistant Superintendent

Dr. David Troughton has lived in Chelmsford since 1976, and has been an educator for a long time. He has been a teacher, Assistant Principal, and Director of Curriculum in other towns. He is very excited about being part of the new team in Chelmsford.

Dr. Troughton is working with the teachers at McCarthy Middle School and sees technology and education being more integrated. He sees his role as helping to determine the future of the system: "what to keep, change, and what it needs."

At the reception held at the high school for the new administration, he was "overwhelmed by the spirit." He was impressed that there are so many activities to involve the students. He sees the extra curricular program as a chance for every student to find opportunities to explore their interests.

He is delighted to find teachers who "treat kids as young adults." In Chelmsford, "kids feel good" about themselves. Spirit is high, and that is important to Dr. Troughton.

The students, teachers and parents of Chelmsford welcome Dr. Troughton's expertise. He is bound to have a positive influence of our schools.

"Overwhelmed by the spirit."

Vote "YES" for Chelmsford!

Proposition 2½ Affects CHS Activities and Athletics

In 1981 the state of Massachusetts passed a law giving voters control over their own tax rate: Proposition 2½. The law meant that town property taxes could not be raised more than 2½% per year; unless the voters overrode the law by popular vote, the tax cap would remain and no additional money could be raised through taxes. For Chelmsford this idea worked well during the first seven years of the law — a prosperous time for Massachusetts.

However, during the past four years Massachusetts has faced a fiscal crisis, and state aid that Chelmsford usually received stopped coming, meaning that part of the town's budget money was gone. In May of 1990 Chelmsford faced a $1.4 million deficit, of which the School Department was responsible for reducing $840,000. To the students at Chelmsford High School, this was not a new story, yet it was a serious one. In other years the town was warned about lack of money, but funding was always raised at the last minute.

Throughout the 1989-1990 school year students at the middle school and high school were asked to pay fees of all kinds: sports fees, transportation fees, activity fees, and user fees. Athletics and activities were barely kept alive by these fees and by fundraisers. Rumors flew within the school system at the beginning of the winter season as to whether or not there would be winter sports. Emotions were high at several school committee meetings as students and parents voiced their opinions, pleading to keep the regular sports schedule. After many assurances from Mr. Jack Fletcher, Athletic Director, that stipends for coaches could be paid through fees and fundraisers, the committee voted to let the season continue. At the start of the spring season the committee was faced with the same problem, but again trusted Mr. Fletcher to come up with the funding. The season was paid for by fees, a cabaret night, a spring carnival, and a wrestling event.

On the special election day of May 1st, voters were faced with a $1.4 million override question for general town operation. Unfortunately, it was defeated. At the next school committee meeting input from the community lasted for over two hours. Students, parents, and faculty voiced their concerns over the inevitable cuts. Most who attended were relieved, however, when the committee voted for partial funding for athletics and activities, with the difference being made up through more fundraising and fees. A special committee was organized to create a fair and equitable fee system for the schools.

Another threat to Chelmsford's budget in 1990 was "Question 3" during the November election. This question endangered the limited aid towns received from the state by cutting state fees and tax increases, therefore reducing state revenue. After fierce campaigning against it, the question was defeated throughout the state.

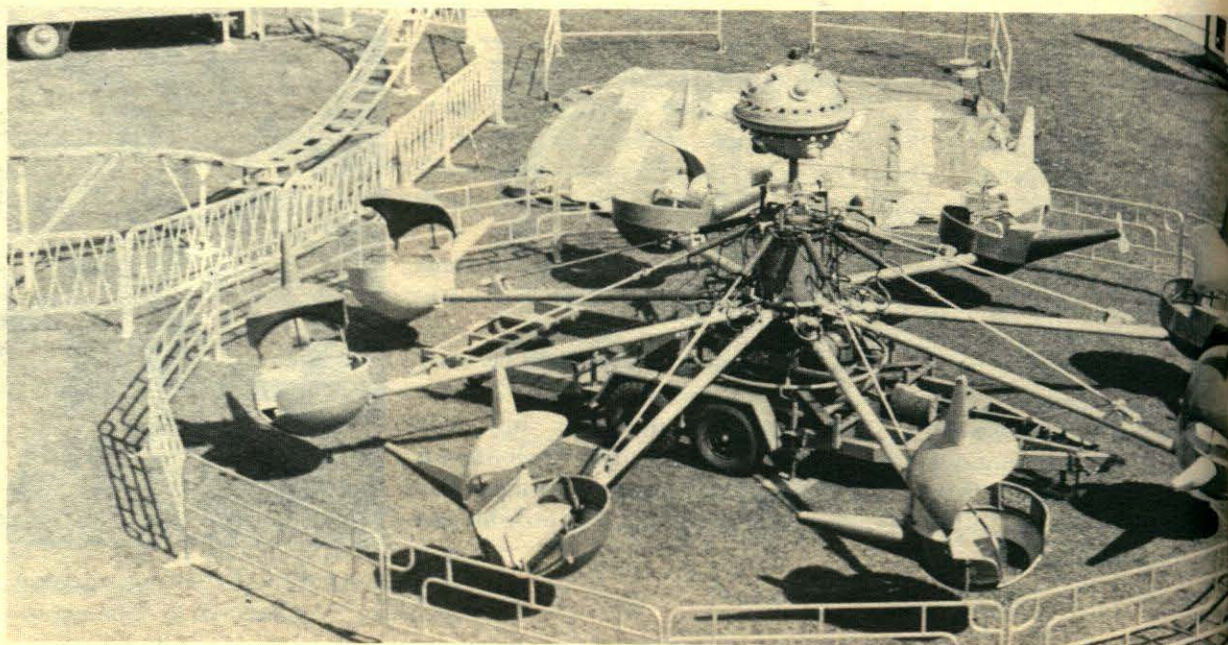

The fee system during the 1990-1991 school year was a moderate success. Activity, athletic, and parking fees were established at $35, $100, and $20 respectively. Parking fees were grudgingly paid, and athletic fees were paid in full. Throughout the year, however, advisors to clubs were required to chase down students who had not yet paid their activity fee.

Chelmsford's financial situation has had a huge impact on the school system. The reputation the Chelmsford schools have held for strong academics, athletics, and activities is declining in the face of more budget cuts. The Dalton Trophy, won by Chelmsford athletes more than seven straight years, may not be recaptured. The Calculus team's first place national standing, the Drama Club's state level performances, and the art department's Boston Globe Blue Ribbon winners are at risk due to a lack of funding. Chelmsford and its students have held together in the past, but the future looks grim. Some say it will take having no football team to make voters realize that town government is not lying when they say they need money. Others say a determined student body and a team of parents and other caring individuals are the key to attaining an override. But whatever it takes for an override, students at Chelmsford High know that it is their futures at stake. It is the students who will have to pay the most and work the hardest to keep their school, the basics and the extras, intact.

Fundraising at CHS

The 1990 Spring Carnival ran from May 9 through May 13 in the back parking lot of Chelmsford High School. The carnival, run by LMC Amusements, took place to raise money for the Athletics programs. The carnival featured rides, such as the Sizzler, the Casino, and the Rock-a-Plane, as well as various games and food stands. Additional money was made from the dunking tank, run by high school athletes. LMC Amusements guaranteed CHS $5000 no matter what the success, plus 25 percent of the ticket sales. After all the receipts were counted, a total of $6500 had been raised for the Athletics program.

On June 9th, Northeast Championship Wrestling was presented by the Athletic Department as another fundraiser. Title matches were held between Johnny Rodz and Iron Sheik, and Misty Blue and Linda Dallas; The Mighty Midgets, S.D. Jones, and AFA the Wild Samoan were also there. Tickets were $10 and proceeds went to the Athletic Department.

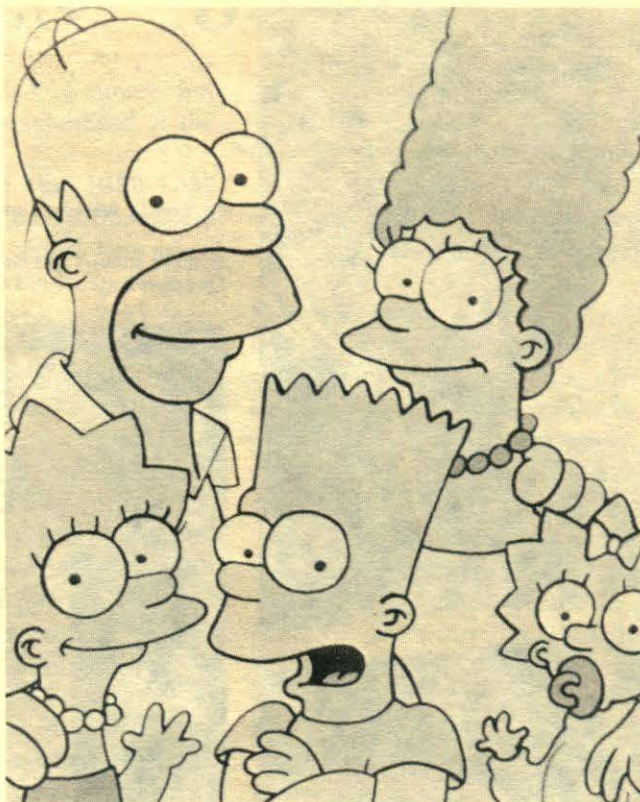

CENSORED!

(No children under 17)

As the final decade of the 20th century opened, one word, one idea, was the single-minded focus of all Americans; 1990 was the year of censorship. From music to television, movies to art, no form of artistic expression was left untouched or unchallenged by the politics of censorship and the First Amendment rights.

In January, a campaign against the graphic language and X-rated raps of 2 Live Crew's album 'As Nasty As They Wanna Be' was begun in Florida. By summer, the group's album had been ruled obscene by a federal judge and the group was arrested for performing material from it. This series of events set the tone for the rest of the year. The Recording Industry Association of America announced that it was voluntarily producing a parental advisory label to be used by all member recording companies. Controversy over the Robert Mapplethorpe photo exhibit resurfaced time and again in 1990, raising the debate over what is art and what is obscene. Madonna's video for 'Justify My Love' was banned from MTV for its sexually explicit material. The movie ratings board, in reaction to films containing sexuality and violence too strong for R-ratings, created a new category, NC-17 (no children under 17). And Senator Jesse Helms led the attack on the National Endowment for the Arts, which debated over 26 new amendments concerning federal funding and censorship. The question of censorship continues . . .

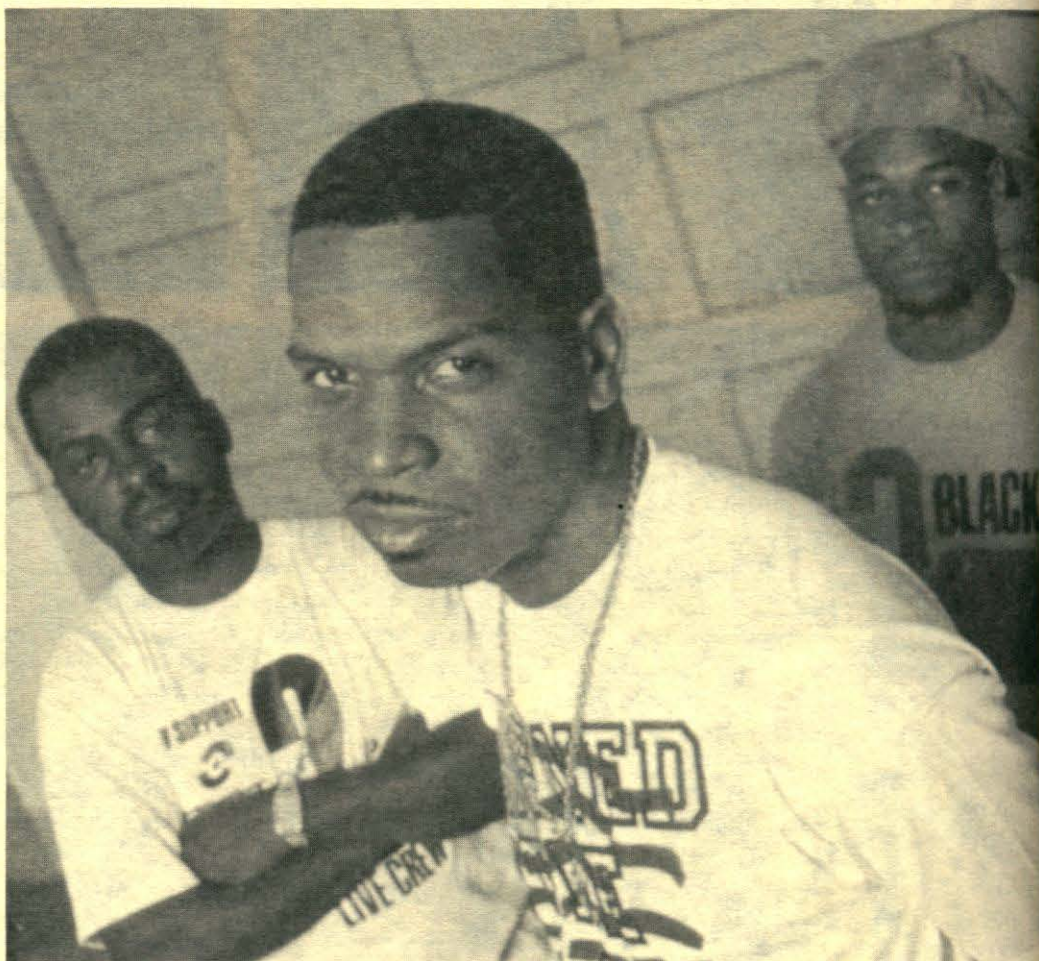

Despite the ultra-conservative mood of 1990, it was a banner year for the Arts and Entertainment Industry. 1990 signified the rebirth of rock & roll music of all types, some of the year's best music coming from the rap and heavy metal genres. Sinéad O'Conner took the world by storm, selling out concerts and staking residence at number one for several weeks with her album 'I Do Not Want What I Haven't Got'. Madonna was the queen of the dance floor in May with her hit 'Vogue', and she traveled the globe with her 'Blond Ambition' world tour. With his album 'Please Hammer don't Hurt 'Em', M.C. Hammer made rap music mainstream, selling six million copies and topping the charts with his hit 'U Can't Touch This'. Former New Edition

The Simpsons, headed by child-rebel Bart, captured America's attention . . .

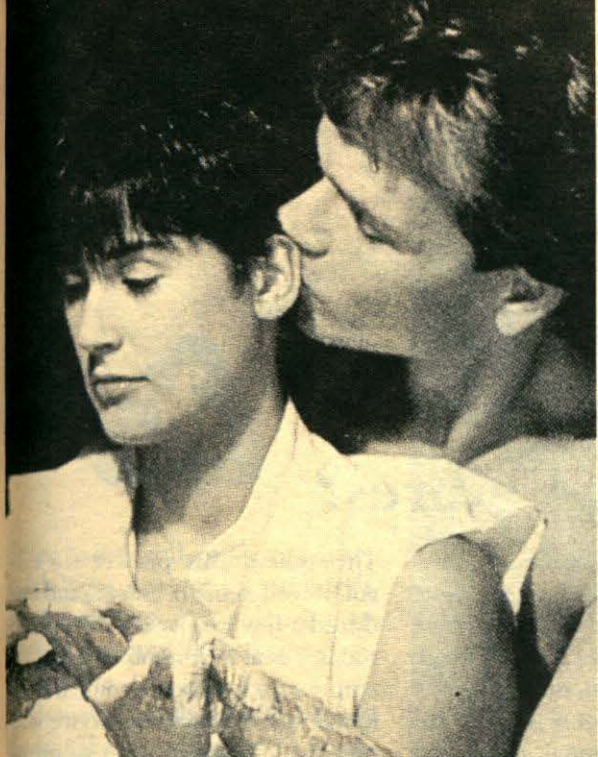

. . . while Pretty Woman grabbed hold of its heart.

The 2 Live Crew tested the nation's definition of free speech.

Ghost stimulated people's imaginations while T.V.'s Twin Peaks kept them mystified.

members Bel Biv Devoe, Johnny Gill, and Ralph Tresvant followed in the steps of Bobby Brown, hitting MTV and sweeping pop radio, and Janet Jackson continued riding a wave of success with her album and tour 'Rhythm Nation 1814'.

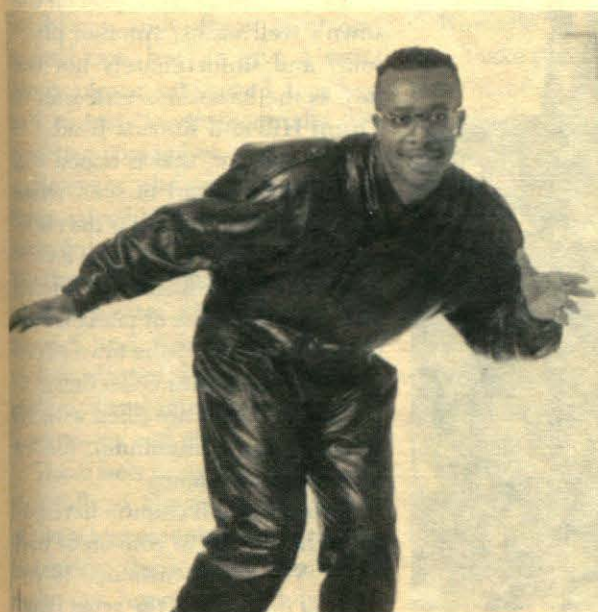

The television industry played it safe for the '89-'90 season, making for tame programming and low ratings. Finally, in 1990, the networks introduced a few groundbreaking programs which became the surprise hits of the season. David Lynch's surrealistic drama 'Twin Peaks' had viewers on the edge of their seats eating cherry pie and wondering who killed Laura Palmer. ABC's 'America's Funniest Home Videos' gave its viewers a chance to win money for their silly home videos, and the very first prizewinners were residents of Chelmsford. Fox Network introduced the season's biggest hit, 'The Simpsons', and a cult star was born. The show's feature character, Bart Simpson, spawned everything from jeans to coffeemugs with his trademark quotes, "Cowabunga, dude!" and "Don't have a cow, man!"

In 1990, the movie industry had much the same problem that television did: tried-and-true formulas of sequels and star vehicles had little substance and disappeared in record time. The surprise hits of the year were two modest, unusual romantic comedies — 'Ghost', starring Patrick Swayze, Demi Moore, and Whoopi Goldberg, and 'Pretty Woman', starring Richard Gere and Julia Roberts. 'Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles' was the kid hit of the summer and the third biggest moneymaker for 1990. Kevin Costner's epic western 'Dances With Wolves' won rave reviews and restored dignity to the western movie genre, and was one of several successful year-end releases, 'Home Alone' and 'Edward Scissorhands' among them. And David Lynch won the Palme d'Or at Cannes Film Festival with his bizarre hit 'Wild at Heart'.

1990 marked a noteworthy year in the Arts and Entertainment industries, a year in which artists and performers challenged the boundaries of their work and challenged their audiences with new and innovative ideas, viewpoints, and means of expression.

Milli Vanilli's scandalous fraud quickly ended their fifteen minutes of fame.

M.C. Hammer paved the way for rappers on the pop charts.

Madonna showed more than just "Blonde Ambition" on her World Tour.

Is it Worth Trashing Our Futures?

The 90's may be referred to by historians as the environmental decade. The '60's had the Civil Rights movement, the '70's had the political scandals and the '80's main focus was economic improvement. The beginning of the concern for the environment began in the '60's and resulted, in 1970, with the creation of the Environmental Protection Agency. Since then, numerous legislation and regulations have been enacted dealing with all aspects of environmental clean-up. Among the enactments are the Clean Water Act, the Federal Motor Vehicle Control Program, the Toxic Substance Control Act and the two Asbestos Protection Acts. Now, in the beginning of the '90's, accomplishment is apparent nationally and locally. Simultaneous with President Bush's billion dollar project to clean Boston Harbor, Greenpeace's boycott of tuna companies who use driftnets and Hollywood's new craze of incorporating environmental dialogue in their scripts, the town of Chelmsford and Chelmsford High School are doing their part in cleaning up Mother Earth.

When concerned people get together, ideas are put into action. In the spring of 1990 the first phase of Chelmsford High's recycling program was initiated. The school already recycled aluminum cans in the cafeterias and at the gym, but students felt styrofoam should be included in the project. People were concerned that the amount of styrofoam used was not only harmful to the ozone layer but was a significant component of the gigantic amount of trash that the school disposes of daily. Through combined efforts of S.A.G.E. (Student Activist Group for the Environment), the Student Council and in liaison with the town's environmental consultant, styrofoam recycling receptacles were placed in the cafeterias. Now in its second year, the project is our first environmental success.

The next project S.A.G.E. and the Student Council undertook was recycling the school's paper supply. The task seemed overwhelming and there was apprehension about tackling such a large project. Following initial planning, talks with Mr. Betses, and a multitude of conversations with the custodians, the project became feasible. An educational video was made showing a representation of the student body discussing reasons for recycling. Boxes for the paper collection were acquired from local stores and distributed to the classrooms. A room was obtained for storage, pick-up service was arranged and volunteers were assigned to collect the recycling boxes weekly.

Throughout this project we encountered many problems and endured a few headaches. A storage room was at first unobtainable, an ample supply of boxes could not be found and the pick-up service was unreliable. Finally, after all problems were overcome, the project turned out to be a fabulous success. Teachers have been most helpful by encouraging recycling in the classroom and the results have been so great that we're constantly running out of boxes. The participants have also developed a great sense of satisfaction in knowing that Chelmsford High School's paper will not be contributing to the town's landfill problem.

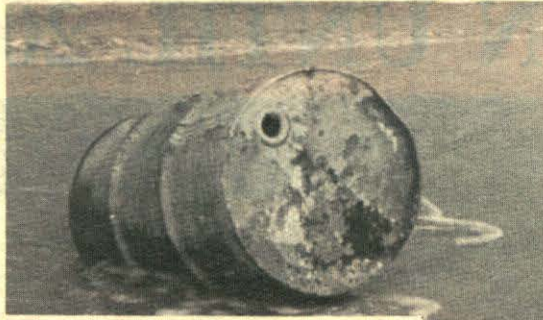

Like many communities, Chelmsford has its share of environmental problems. Among these is the methane secreted from the Charles George landfill, which is larger than Nashoba Ski Mt. Controversy has raged between the advocates and opponents of the Lamplighter Greene affordable housing project: what will be its impact on the town's well water? Another problem, and unfortunately not the last, is the hazardous toxic sites at Drum Hill and Katrina Road.

One solution that is hoped will lessen the amount of solid waste dumped at the landfill is the curbside recycling program. Every other week Chelmsford residents put out either blue or maroon bins to be picked up by the town's contracted recyclables collecting service. These bins are filled with all types of glass, aluminum, plastic jugs and newspaper.

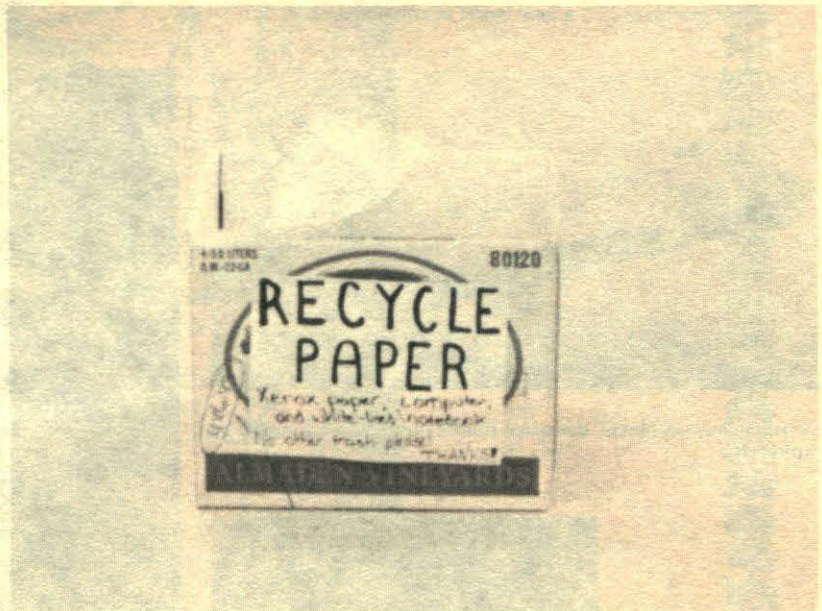

Citizens of this country have become hardened to consistent bad news. We are accustomed to reports of oil spills of the same magnitude as the Exxon Valdez. We are not surprised that lead and Environmental Ideas take to the road.

Recycling begins in the lunchroom.

Chelmsford High School pitches in.

other toxins still exist in households. The state of the country's environment is declining so rapidly it seems the little good we do is futile.

However, each little thing we do to aid our environment is important. Individually, we might take our soda cans back to the supermarket, shut the water off while brushing our teeth, or buy recycled paper goods. Collectively, organizations play a large role in reversing or inhibiting destruction done to the Earth. For example, the EPA banned any unnecessary usage of ozone damaging CFC's in the Montreal Protocol. In addition they reduced lead levels in urban air 87% from 1977, began the restoration of the Chesapeake Bay, included more coastal waters in their national Estuaries Program, made recovery efforts of the Great Lakes' condition, established tailpipe standards and began the clean-up of Denver air. Greenpeace, a non-profit organization, not only informs the public of environmental problems and offers environmental tips, but, to give a sampling, cleans oil-slicked beaches and protests environmentally destructive companies.

However, the problems are far from solved. Sixty cities do not meet federal air quality standards. Wetlands are disappearing at an alarming rate. Our oceans, estuaries and coastal waters are victims of intensive coastal and upstream development and runoff from towns and cities.

These facts sound alarming, and rightfully so. However, realization of the achievements made towards bettering the environment can make one hopeful. Giftshops sell cards made of 100% recycled paper. Perhaps Chelmsford

High's recycled paper is a gradient of a card. Clothing manufacturers sell sweatshirts with slogans like "Protect Our Planet" and for each box of "Save the Earth" pins sold, profits go to tree replanting. Media and producers have displayed concern for the environment and have begun working environmental precautions and tips into their script. The Frosted Lucky Charms commercial and the recent release "Look Who's Talking, Too" are examples.

However, T-shirts and buttons only make people aware of the environment's poor condition. Environmental improvement is dependent upon future actions of Chelmsford High's students and those all over the world. People can talk about the environment's problems, but action is needed to solve them. We made it happen at Chelmsford High by recycling a styrofoam tray or putting a piece of paper in the recycling bin. Continue and elaborate upon these practices to ensure an environmentally sound future for yourself and generations in the next century. "Save the Earth, It's the Only One We Have."

Businesses respond to new and creative ideas for recycling.

ORACLES

In mythological times, an oracle was a person who was divinely inspired. It was a voice of superiority and, therefore, looked upon with awe. The goal of the oracle was to endow the seekers with a bounty of knowledge to be used as they wished. The oracle was able to answer perplexing questions or to make prophecies to visitors in their quest for guidance.

During the times of the ancient Greeks, passersby often stopped to hear the teachings of the oracle. This tradition has been continued by the teachers of Chelmsford High School. They have passed along their knowledge to students who have stopped in their classroom for a brief time before continuing their individual odysseys.

The quest of the students at CHS was that of preparing for their futures, be that continuing education or employment opportunities. Having recognized the goal of each student, the teachers took the role of the oracle by advising students regarding which path they should follow. Aided by the CHS guidance counselors and other members of the faculty, the teachers continually helped students realize their individual potentials.

The CHS students are given the knowledge by the staff. It is up to them to do with it as they wish. The "oracles" at CHS can only hope that the knowledge they convey is used wisely.

The CHS oracle had four years to turn barbaric demons into majestic gods and goddesses. This was no small task! It entailed hard work and patience beyond mortal capability. It required a dedicated group of people whose vocabulary never contained the words "give up."

The teachers provided assistance in many aspects of the students' lives. Their dedication was exemplified by their willingness to aid students with academics even after the close of the school day. Also, their hard work could be seen through the success of the activities program. Finally, the athletic program would not be so successful without the CHS faculty.

Like the oracles, the teachers at CHS have been instrumental in guiding the students in their individual odysseys. They have been pillars of strength through these years. Thank you, Staff for helping us fulfill our quest.

Through the Years

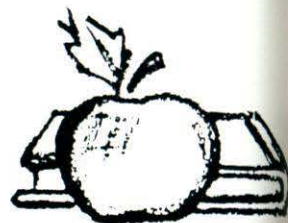

"Millie" Hehir will celebrate the start of her fiftieth year of serving Chelmsford High School's students in February 1991. She has been one of the two guidance counselors since the establishment of Whittier House when the high school opened in September 1974. Prior to that time, Millie was a guidance counselor for fourteen years, a French and English teacher for nineteen years, and she started the first six months of her career at the Princeton Street School as a history and English teacher. During her tenure as a foreign language teacher, she was named the Department Head of foreign languages. During her teaching career, Millie has also played a leading role in extracurricular activities, serving as a cheerleading coach, a Student Council advisor, a talent show organizer, and President of the Chelmsford Teachers Association.

Millie graduated from Regis College as a A.B. Latin major, with Greek and French minors. She earned her Masters Degree from Fitchburg State College. She has taken additional courses at the University of Lowell, Boston University, and Fitchburg State College.

Millie is remembered by her students as a dedicated person, willing to go to extremes to get them into the college of their choice. She constantly updates herself by attending conferences, workshops, and reverse college days.

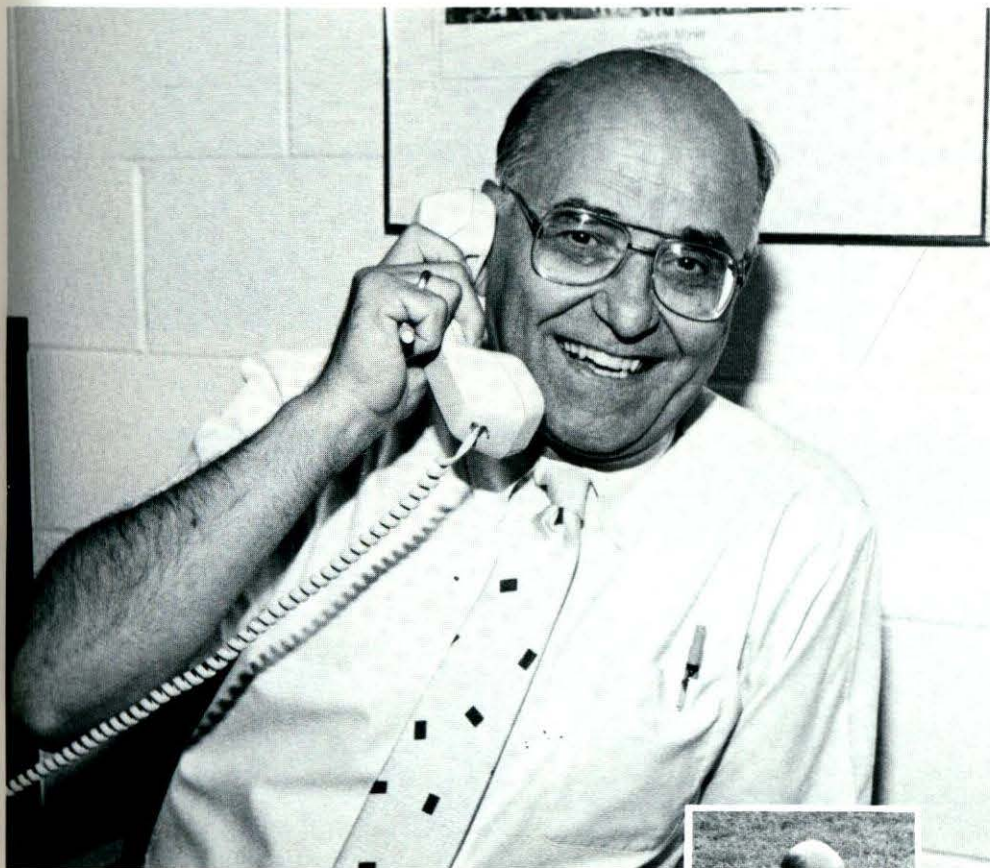

Millie enjoys her work and her students. She carefully watches their academic performance, encouraging students to do their best.

Congratulations for your outstanding work on behalf of the students and for the celebration of fifty years of service to Chelmsford. You'll always be a part of us, Millie Hehir!

MUSES

Like the early Greeks who looked to the activities of the muses for their source of pleasure, the students of Chelmsford High School also look to extra-curricular activities as their source of fulfillment. The muses were the nine daughters of Zeus and each Muse presided over a different attribute of the arts and sciences: history, poetry, astronomy, choral songs, dance, and comedy. The Muses inspired poets, philosophers, musicians, and scientists.

The activities of the Muses were a way for the early Greeks to escape their tedious and repetitious laboring. The students join the activities at CHS to escape the tiresome task of school and homework, ranging from the Voice and Mosaics to chorus, band, and orchestra, to foreign exchanges, to S.A.G.E., and Student Council. Being involved in these groups allow students to pursue their special interests. Since there is such a wide variety to choose from, students can usually find an activity that suits them.

Activity is an important part of life at Chelmsford High School. The students have almost fifty different extra-curricular activities from which to choose. Students are often encouraged to join activities that appeal to them.

With all the activities that CHS has to offer, it's easy to become involved. Activities help students acquire skills, which are needed outside of school. Whatever muse a student may choose to follow, participating in one of the activities at CHS is an important part of everyone's High School career.

The Lion

The LION is published in the spring of each year followed by a supplement in the fall. Students of all classes produce the yearbook, and learn techniques of photography, layout, editing, gathering copy, collecting advertising, and selling the book. Each book develops a theme that reflects the personality of the class and its history.

The Voice

The VOICE is the Chelmsford High School student newspaper. Yearly, five to six issues are printed, and are made available to students throughout the school, depending on staff availability and budget. The students on the staff are responsible for the paper from information gathering to distribution.

S.A.G.E.

S.A.G.E. is the Student Activist Group for the Environment. It offers students an opportunity to work at some of the complex social, political, and environmental issues that face us today. Weekly meetings are concerned with educating ourselves on the issues as well as planning for specific actions such as the Walks for Peace and Hunger, rallies for peace in Central America and against Apartheid in South Africa and demonstrations for disarmament and against the exploitation of the tropical rain forest.

Speech and Debate Club

The Debate and Speech team involves students of all grade levels in interscholastic forensic competition. Students participate in various categories of three main speech divisions: interpretive readings, original events, and memorized events. Students also participate in researching, organizing and presenting affirmative and negative arguments.

OLYMPIANS

The Athletics at Chelmsford High School are an allusion to the ancient and modern Olympic Games. They play an important role in the everyday life of the students — they help to build a strong moral and physical character through the rigorous training and discipline. They promote friendship throughout the community. The athletic department at Chelmsford High is outstanding, having frequently won the Dalton Trophy, symbolizing its excellence in sportsmanship and leadership.

Like the Olympics, the sports at Chelmsford High are divided into seasons — fall, winter, and spring. Within these divisions there are sub-divisions — varsity, junior varsity, sophomore, and freshmen.

In the fall, there are eight sports in which the students can participate: football, girls' field hockey, girls' swimming, soccer, cross country, girls' volleyball, and golf.

The winter sports include: basketball, wrestling, girls' gymnastics, boys' swimming, and track.

The spring sports include: track, boys' volleyball, softball, baseball, and tennis.

Like the Olympic Oath, the CHS athletes promise to "take part in fair competition, respecting the regulations which govern them and with the desire to participate in the true spirit of sportsmanship for the honour of "their school" and for the glory of the sport."

Together captain Kerry White and Coach Lang did a great job keeping this young team on the right "track."

And they're off!!

Even though it was her first year, Tara Greaves was still a strong performer.

Senior Kerry White has the finish line in sight.

Senior Tessa Spillane always gives her 100% effort and it shows when she breaks away from her opponent.

The Chelmsford High School Girls' Cross Country Team had a successful 1990 season. The team was led by senior captain Kerry White, juniors Becky Cox, Kara Beauchesne, Tara Greaves, sophomore Libby Palm, and freshman Jen Long. They finished with a 7-2 record, placing them third in the Merrimac Valley Conference. Although the team had a couple of disappointing losses, the girls came together to run some great races. An example of this was at the state meet where Jen Long, Becky Cox, Tara Greaves, Kara Beauchesne, and Libby Palm gave top-notch performances. Although the entire Cross Country Team did not qualify for the prestigious All State Meet, Jen Long and Becky Cox did. With the leadership and talent of our female runners and the excellent coaching of Mr. Jack Lang, the 1990 Girls' Cross Country team made great strides.

Junior Becky Cox completed an outstanding year for the squad.

Kara Beauchesne provided tremendous depth to the squad as a harrier.

Freshman Jen Long proved that she was just as good as the four year veterans.

Coach Lang points out the course to these underclassmen. Don't get lost girls!

CROSS COUNTRY

The seniors this year were Capt. Jon Grange, Ryan Hunt, Sanjay Hegde, Capt. Jeff Maycock, Will Nolan, and Jeff Fuller. Great job guys.

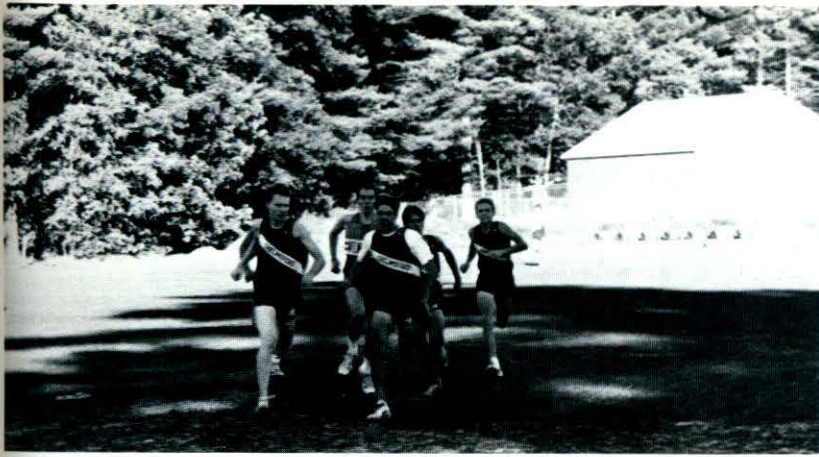

Senior Jeff Maycock wins the race.

Stretching is very important.

Senior Ar. Nigam is determined to win.

Senior and co-captain Jon Grange comes out on top.

Ready? Set? Go!!!

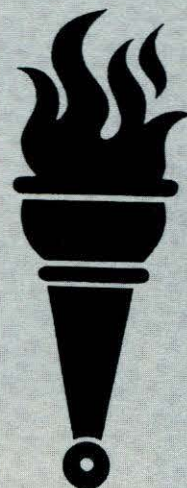

Ryan Hunt always knows the answer.

Once again the C.H.S. boys harriers had a successful season finishing second in the M.V.C with a 10-1 record. The only element keeping the Cross Country Team from a brush with greatness was found in key injuries to seniors Josh Andresen and Ryan Hunt. These injuries manifested themselves in a regular season loss to Central Catholic and a tenth place finish in the state.

Throughout the season, senior captains, Jeff Maycock and Jon Grange, led the team to victory. Jon's best race came at the Northern Area Meet where he placed fourth overall, leading the team to a third place finish. Jeff's best race came in the Eastern Area Division I Meet, where he led the team to the All-State Meet with an impressive eighth place finish. Throughout the season, sophomore Owen Evans was a strong contributor to the team, consistently placing in the top five. Ryan Hunt was able to join the team at mid-season and was an instant impact. Josh Andresen made it back with four weeks left but was still contributing to the team's success.

The future of Chelmsford's distance running lies in the hands of coach Jim Durkin. With Juniors Keith Curran and Mark Trainor, sophomores Owen Evans and Dan Nolan, as well as upcoming freshman Rob Therrien, Chelmsford should remain among the top distance running powers in the state.

The 1990 Varsity Field Hockey Team ended their season with a record of 3-10-5. The season was a lot of fun for the girls and their new coach, Ann Prairie. She was lucky to have such a great group of girls who became very close friends.

The team had a lot going for them; they were hardworking and dedicated players. They practiced everyday except for Sundays for most of the season. Running, dribbling, and shooting down the field were common drills.

Tri-captains — Krista Mater, Cindy White, and Leslie Caito — led the team, believed it was going to be a great year, especially since there were nine returning lettermen: Kerry McLaughlin, Linda Mulkigian, Michelle Smith, Katie Weeks, Kristen McNaught, Jenn Roy, and the captains. The new varsity players also contributed: Vicky Warren, Kristen Hearn, sophomores Courtney Finnegan, Alison Blain, Kelly Gleason, Heather Rubian, Erica Rondina, and Darlene Riley.

The girls were disappointed by the outcome of their record, but that can't take away from the friendships made and the very valuable memories that will always be theirs.

Senior Michelle Smith and Katie Weeks look to steal.

Junior Leslie Caito takes the ball down the field.

Senior goalie Cindy White is all smiles.

Jason Harris makes his way down the field to score.

Why are you two so happy? We still have three drills left.

Closing the season at 6-4, the fighting football Lions experiences its share of ups and downs. Led by quad-captains Craig Marinella, Rick Bolander, Brian Wagner, and Mike Nickerson, the Lions spent much of the season overcoming adversity and facing each opponent anew.

Starting off with a bang, the breathtaking victory over heavily favored Andover helped the Lions to a record of 4-1 midway through the season. The only blemish was a disappointing loss to Dracut in the final minutes of game three.

After back to back losses to Haverhill and Tewksbury, the Lions proceeded to hold true to the exemplary Lion athlete, putting it together for the last three games of the season to compile a winning record.

The final contest was played against arch rival Billerica on a warm Thanksgiving morning in front of a sold out crowd at Alumni Stadium. Lion seniors were sent out in fashion with a 14-7 victory over the Indians in one of the more memorable games of the rivalry.

Highly notable senior performances were by Pat Hayes, Bert Pimentel, Mark Sawicki, Jared Yoder, John Rega, Russ Linstad, Peter Dionne, Jonathan Frobese, Jeff Sihpol, and Bob Reid. Special thanks go to Charlie Harold for the "Mirror Drill."

Good luck to all Lion Seniors and the 1991 Lions. Congratulations Coach Caito for 200 wins!

The 1990 Golf Team was a positive experience. Not only for the school but for the players. Being one of the youngest teams in school history, and the youngest in the league, made this year incredibly difficult. The team, in order to make up for the lack of experience, had to work harder than past C. H. S. teams to achieve the same winning results. And work hard they did. After breaking out to a 9 and 1 start, the team levelled off to a 10 and 5 final mark, leaving them third place in the M.V.C.

The team was led by senior co-captains Eric Hanson and David Carlson. Both individuals showed their leadership ability from day one. Hanson shot a nine hole school record 30, on this way to a one under par 67 on the first day of team qualifying. Carlson was invited to play at the American Junior Golf Association Tournament at Cape Cod. The team was also helped tremendously in the leadership department by returning junior letterman P.J. Dowd. He demonstrated great games throughout the season, showing his ability to lead next year's team. The strong inclusion of sophomores helped strengthen the team, and the unexpected addition of two freshmen had a positive affect. The 1990 Golf Team was head-manned by Coach Jim Moriarty who in his inaugural season developed this young team into a future dynasty.

This year's Girls' Varsity Soccer Team was a young one. Although the season was not high scoring, it was still a winning experience for the girls. There were many new faces, led by two captains, Kate Curran and Christine Hutchins. Everyone worked hard to make this team a successful one. On the defensive line there were two returning seniors, Laurie Jackson and Karen Duggan, making the defense solid. Michelle Amerson and Jacki Gamache helped by playing very well in net. The teams offense worked well with seniors Alyssa Dineen, Tracey Laflame, and Kate Buswick. Coach Rondina was always trying new strategies and different people in different places. Manager, Shannon Kirk, helped the team also. The 1990 Girls Soccer Team suffered disappointment, but also achievements, tying Westford and coming in close to Tewksbury. Even though their record was 5-10-2, the girls pulled together, always psyched and willing to do their best.

Senior and co-captain Mike Rea proved to be a star even with his leg injury.

We all had great aspirations from the very first day of double sessions, the day is clearly remembered. Coach Scott Thomas' first comments to us were that he had high hopes for this year's team; that he had never been so excited about a season in all his years of coaching. He told us that we could win the State Championship, so that's what we set out to do.

Throughout the season, we had our ups and downs, our highs and lows. From the losing almost every preseason game to capturing our third straight Merrimack Valley Conference Championship, we never lost sight of our ultimate goal — to win the State Championship.

From the start of the season, we were confronted with many hurdles and setbacks: the loss of senior tri-captain Mike Rea in the preseason and the season-shortening injuries to seniors, John Lennox and Jason Worcester.

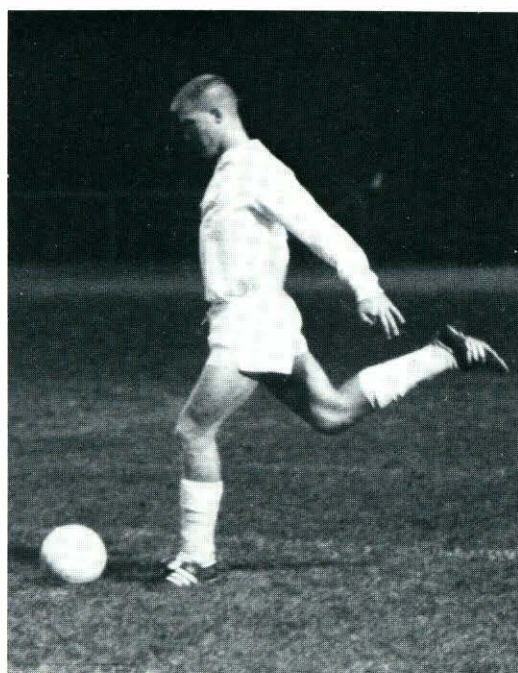

Yet, we always found a way to persevere and overcome the challenges thrown at us. Much of the credit for our fine season goes to conference All-Star Raj Prasad, and All-Conference players Tom Killmon, Dave DiGiovanni, Captain Rich Forcier, and Captain Andy Lynch. Lynch was also Conference MVP and a Boston Globe All-Scholastic player.

The most important element that urged us on during the season was dedication, from the fans as well as players: No one will ever forget the support that the Cross-country team gave to us or the die-hard fans from the girls' soccer team who came to almost every one of our games. As the season progressed, one player in particular became a model for the rest of us — Mike MacQuarrie. He didn't get as much playing time as many other players, he went out every day and gave it his all at practice as well as at games.

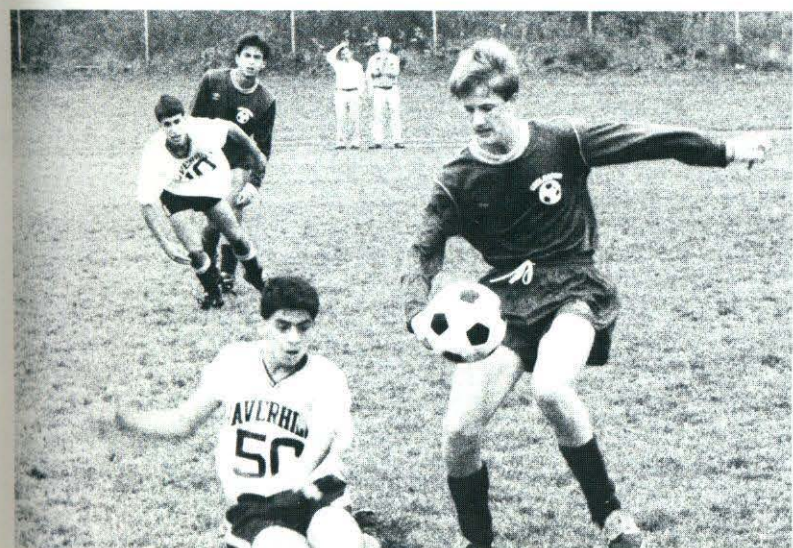

Although the season ended disappointingly with a second round overtime loss to Medford, no one will forget the elation we felt one game earlier, when Mike Metivier scored in overtime, against Peabody to advance the team to the second round of the playoffs. Even though we did not reach our high expectations, our season will be remembered fondly by the coach, the fans, and, especially, the players.

Mike Bartel is determined to throw the ball in to a teammate.

Senior Rich Forcier boots the ball towards the goal.

Mike Metivier gains control of the ball as the opposition falls to the ground.

The Girls' Swimming and Diving Team had a very successful season. Led by Captains Stephanie MacDougall and Shelley Jones, the team had an overall record of 9-1, which entitled them to the M.V.C. crown. The lone loss came midway through the season, to the undefeated Acton Boxborough Colonials, but didn't affect the Lady Lions' standing in the conference because it was a non-league meet.

The big meet of the season came on October 26 against the Lowell Raiders. There had always been a rivalry between the two teams, but this year the swimmers were even more pumped up. Before a standing room only crowd, the Lady Lions won the meet, completing their 9-0 league record. The victory was sweet for the seniors, Suzanne Leblanc, Michelle Richard, Melissa Quigley, Jen Lamontagne, Shelley Jones, Stephanie MacDougall, Jen Sheehan, Beth Lurvey, Laura Hohmann, and Kristin Sullivan, because it was their last high school dual meet.

The following week, the two teams swam in the conference meet at Haverhill High School. All the other teams were there, but once again, the meet came down to the Lady Lions and the Lowell Raiders. The Lions proved that the desire to win and the team strength were a winning combination.

Once the dual meet season was over, the sectional and state championships were around the corner. The Lady Lions placed very high, the final standings being better than ever before. The team placed third in the North Sectional Meet and fifth in the State Meet. Outstanding performances were put in by all the swimmers and record breaking swims by senior Jen Lamontagne, sophomore Heather Donahue, and freshman Kelly Goudlson. The divers, Suzanne Leblanc, Melissa Quigley, and Lisa Galpin gave the team the extra boost to put them over the rest of the competition throughout the season.

The team was coached by Al Thomas (BIG AL) and Pat Peterson (STREAMLINE PAT). This year, there were two new managers: John Fischer, and Curtis Eckelcamp, who helped the team by cheering them on, timing, or gathering equipment. This was one of the best seasons the Girls' Swimming and Diving Team has ever had. Best of luck to the 1991 team!

The Girls Varsity Volleyball Team proved to be one of the best teams in the Merrimack Valley this season by posting a regular season record of 15-5 to capture the large School title under the coaching of Dana Howe. The team was co-captained by seniors Kathleen Gillis and Donna Sullivan. Jen White, Amy Paletta, Jen Erickson, Julie Corcoran, and Karen Gilet rounded out the rest of the seniors on the squad. Juniors Shannon Kelly, Allyson Nicoli, Angie Goldman, Becky McCarthy, and sophomore Tracy Syria also played key roles in the Lion's success. In the first half of the season, the team posted a 9-1 record with a lone loss to Dracut. Although the second half of the season didn't go as well, with consecutive losses to Dracut, Billerica, and Andover, the Lions qualified for the state tournament. In the first game of the tournament, Chelmsford hosted Andover and moved on to the next round with a 3-0 win. In the following match, they went in against an undefeated Dracut team, hoping to avenge their two regular season losses to the Middies. The underdog Lions came out on top with an exhilarating 3-2 win and went on to beat Lawrence three games to nothing to capture the Division I North Sectional Championship. Chelmsford finally lost in the state semi-finals to Case High School (who went on to win the State Championship). The Lions finished their successful season with an overall record of 18-6.

The cheerleaders do a nice job showing off one of their many pyramids.

The 1990-91 Cheerleading Squad had a very exciting year, full of enthusiasm. The squad was coached by Eileen Fletcher and led by Captains Joanne Brown, Julie Odom, and Jenn Witts. Special spirit was encouraged by our Lion, Marion Russo, and male cheerleaders: John Mac Phee, Frank Soracco, and Josh Safdie. New pom-poms were donated by Sandy and Doug Lawson. They added a great deal of spark to the routines. The squad attended summer camp and again qualified for Nationals, sponsored by Cheer Limited.

The Colorguard consists of two categories: flag twirling and rifle twirling. Under the direction of Maureen Dunn, and along with the majorettes and marching band, the colorguard participates in the pre-game and half-time shows at football games. They also march in the Fourth of July and Memorial Day parades.

In preparation for the opening and half time shows at football games, the majorettes practice each day after school. The girls twirl everything ranging from batons to hoops, and sometimes even flaming batons. It takes a lot of effort to prepare these routines and a lot of time is put in by Captains Kim Monahan and Christi Capogna and the rest of the squad.

Senior Julie Hentschel encourages the team to win.

Co-captain Christi Capogna entertains the crowd during half-time.

Though plagued by the loss of seven seniors to graduation in 1990, the Chelmsford High Lady Lions came out as one of the top teams in the Merrimack Valley Conference once again. Led by tri-captains Jen Erickson, Kathleen Gillis, and Amy Paletta, these seniors were joined by their three classmates Laura Hohmann, Linda Mulkigian, and Jen White. Juniors Abi Ferner and Katy Weeks and the sophomore pair of Lynn Erickson and Leigh Johnson rounded out the lineup. Despite losing two tough overtime matches to Andover and Methuen and a well fought battle against M.V.C. champion Haverhill, the team finished with a winning record in its last three games under new head coach Judy Victory. The girls placed third in the conference with a respectable record of 13-5. An even split of one win and one loss in the championship round of the Winnacunnet Holiday Tournament in Hampton, N.H., gave C.H.S. an overall record of 14-6 and a Division I state tournament berth for the sixth year in a row.

Senior tri-captain Jen Erickson looks to keep the ball away from her opponent. She was a great force on the team.

Senior tri-captain Amy Paletta looks to take a shot. She helped lead the Lady Lions in many exciting games.

BOYS' BASKETBALL

The 1990-91 basketball team was a great surprise in the Merrimack Valley Conference. While trying to contend for the Division I State Tournament, the team was led by tri-captains Pat Hayes, Rich Forcier, and Roger Legrand. Also major contributors to the squad were talented seniors Rick Bolander, Craig Marinella, Mike Metivier, and Brian Krueger. The excellent talent of the team proved that these Lions could contend with any of their opponents. This year's squad was coached by Fran Ryz, who was assisted by Dan Roche.

With the promising juniors of this year's squad, including Dan Petulle, Kevin Branco, Dana Olson, Rom Killman and Mike Murray, and the upcoming underclassmen, next year's team will be a force in the M.V.C. The 1990-91 boys basketball team wishes to express special thanks to Brian Bell for his hard work and dedication.

The C.H.S. gymnastics team had yet another successful year. They began the season by breaking three high school records and achieving a new high team score of 132.5. Beaten only by Dracut, they came in second place in the league and a 9-2 finish overall. This will be their fourth consecutive year qualifying to the sectional competition where they hope to place in the top four teams and move on to states.

The team was led by all-around performer Captain Emily Lueck, who set a new team record with a score of 9.2 on the beam. Captain Stephanie Incatasciato greatly helped in the all-around and also tied with Emily for a high score on the vault, with an 8.6. Lisa Fabbri was a top performer on bars, beam, and floor. Angie Rapone added high scores on beam, vault, and floor. Freshmen Becky Harris and Danielle Day competed in all four events and proved to be valuable additions to the team. Sophomore Erica Gaudette and sophomore Michelle Martel competed well on the beam and vault. Captain Tracy Laflamme added high scores on bars despite a knee injury which kept her from competing in the other three events.

Coupled with a talented team, coaches Lisa Fairburn and Trisha Ruddy guided the girls in their successful season.

Seniors and co-captains Ed Wetterwald and Mark Yetman had high hopes for the 1991 season.

Coach Fletcher is always giving pointers to the players.

When the season began, we had high hopes. Ten seniors were leading the way. But tough competition at the beginning made it hard to gain momentum and put together a string of wins. Although victories were hard to come by, we were never far out of any game. Most of our losses came from only one 2 goal deficits. Despite a disappointing record, we worked hard and always looked ahead.

Our greatest challenge came when senior captain Mark Yetman had to undergo emergency surgery and missed the rest of the season. Injuries to other key players, such as seniors Jeff Parks and Bill Chevalier, were also difficult to overcome. Helping to pick up the slack were seniors Ed Wetterwald (captain), Jared Luskin, Brian Woolard, John MacPhee, Brian Taranto, Mike MacDonald, and Peter Gorham.

Under the strict supervision of Coach Fletcher, we did have some exciting competitions, including a thrilling win over Andover with only four seconds left in the game. Although we were hard to put up with, Mr. Fletcher persevered. We were a winning team. The scoreboard never told the whole story.

Senior and co-captain Josh Blagg glides through the water races.

Seniors Keith, Joe, John, Mark, Curtis, Josh, and Todd are ready for anyone to try to take away their MVC crown.

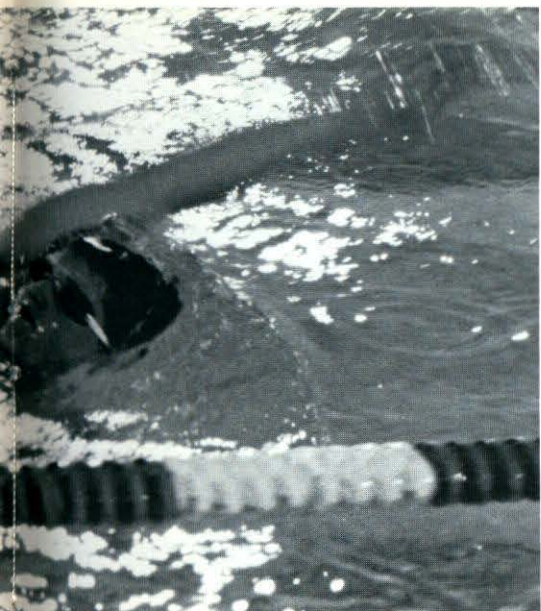

The captains Josh and Todd are tough to beat in and out of the water.

Senior John Fischer always streamlines into the water to get the better edge against his opponents.

Led by captains Josh Blagg and Todd Lawrence, the aqua-lions continued their streak of consecutive Merrimack Valley Conference titles. Along with conference meets, the Lions swam a few non-league meets, the most exciting being against the Acton Boxborough Colonials. Although it was an upsetting loss for the team, there were many excellent swims that day, once again proving that the Lions were one of the best teams this area has ever seen.

The Key senior performers this year were Kurt Leslie, Josh Blagg, Todd Lawrence, Curtis Eckelcamp, Mark Juhola, and John Fischer. They set the tone for many meets, showing that they can swim any event and still do their best. This year the divers were a key asset to the team. Led by Junior Bryan Goldie, the divers worked hard at perfecting each dive.

The Lions finished with an overall record of 7-1, while placing high at the sectional and state meets. Much of the success earned by the team is accredited to Co-Head Coaches Allen Thomas and Pat Peterson.

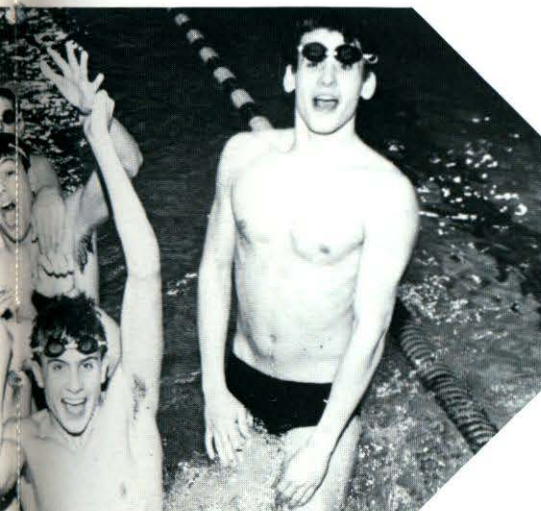

The future once again looks bright for the aqua-lions, with superstars Garrett Burke, Bryan Goldie, Beau Lamontagne, and Jeremy Quimby leading the way.

Senior and co-captain Todd Lawrence keeps all of the swimmers in line with his evil eye.

With a look of determination, junior Bryan Goldie prepares for the dive.

outs co-coach Pat Peterson requires them to finish.

Kerry!!! Why are you bowing to Mr. Quinn?

Senior Jen Balsler takes time out to rest and think about her events.

Senior Kerry McLaughlin flies out at the gun.

Holly Eng waits patiently for the sound of the starting gun.

With the determined look on her face, senior Jen Balsler hurdles over the last one to go on to win the race.

This year, the girls' winter track team consisted of a small unit who worked extremely hard during the season. They went far beyond the coaches' expectations, losing only to Andover and Lowell in close meets that came down to the relays. The team topped last year's record of 3-3 and concluded 4 and 2 in the MVC.

There was a nucleus of talent leadership from senior captains Jen Balsler, Jackie Gamache, Shannon Kirk, Kerry White, and Kerry Hocknell. Everyone worked well as a team, consistently supporting one another. The tireless efforts of Coach Lang and assistant coach Jeff Doherty paid off with a triumph over Billerica.

The younger team members experienced "big meet" competition, building a strong foundation for next year's team. They have the makings of championships.

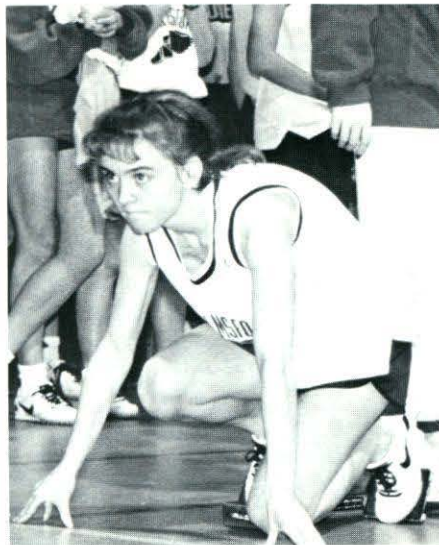

Jen Outwater, Coby Kozlowski, and the rest of the team are always there to comfort their teammates.

Kerry White takes a breather before she prepares for her race.

Don't let Coach Lang see that happy face Kim Lane.

Junior Erin Ready waits for the starter to say "GO!"

Senior Jeff Maycock looks at ease with himself as he heads toward the finish line.

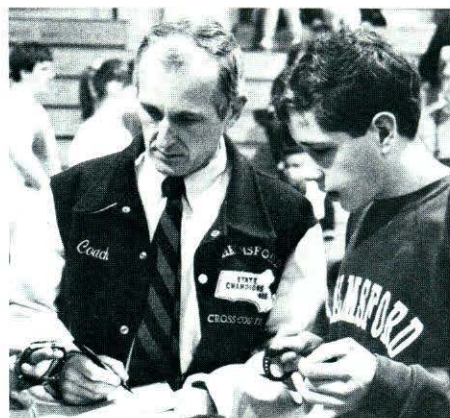

Owen Evans relaxes after a hard day of races that he should be very proud of.

Senior Lee Monks did well this year . . . his farthest throw was 40 feet.

Jason Rose is determined to get out of the blocks first.

Coach Christman helps his team with their strategy.

Dan Casey is all set and ready to "GO!"

Senior Dave Luro listens to the advice that is being given to him.

Jason Harris and Brian Veth are off to a great start with Haverhill falling behind early.

With their arms flailing, Ken Stuart and Rob Craig fly over the hurdles.

The 1990-91 boys' indoor track season at C.H.S. was another very successful one. The boys' Lions went 7-0 and yet again won the Merrimack Valley Conference. The tracksters did this despite a young and upcoming team and having lost many great athletes to graduation.

Senior Jon Grange, captain Mike Bartel, and Josh Wallace have led the distance crew all year. In the middle distances Dave Luro and Dave Digiovanni have been the key performers. Senior distance runners Jeff Maycock and captain Josh Andresen have been sidelined by injuries and sickness most of the year.

The main challenge for the year's team was to stay healthy and able to compete. With the absence of many key performers, some of the other younger athletes were able to move to the forefront. In the distance events, underclassmen Dan Nolan, Rob Therrien, and Pete Levaser made great advances. In the middle distances, Dan Casey, showed excellent promise but was sidelined with a knee injury. In the high jump, Dave Parks and Scott Carrier have brought Chelmsford back to the top. Coupled with the already proven underclassmen core of John Often, Paul Gillette, Brian Veth, Jason Harris, and Dave Leepage, the tracksters will continue to be among the best in the state. The future of this team looks very bright. More state championships are on the horizon. With Coach Christman, success for the team.

Senior Mark Mataliano does his best to try not to get pinned and lose the match.

Reigning state champ Matt Ciesluk listens to Coach Rich before he is called into the ring.

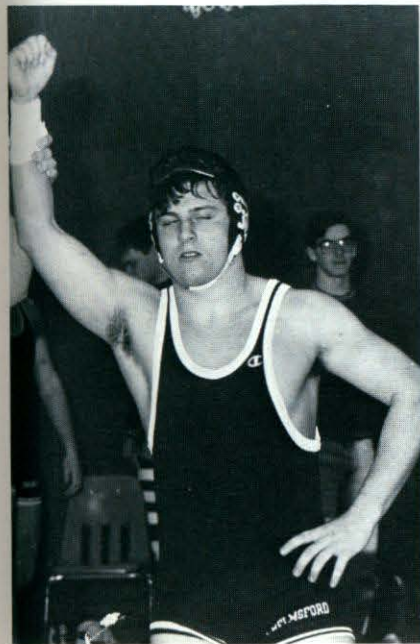

Senior Mike Rea counters his opponent with a struggle but soon will overcome him to win.

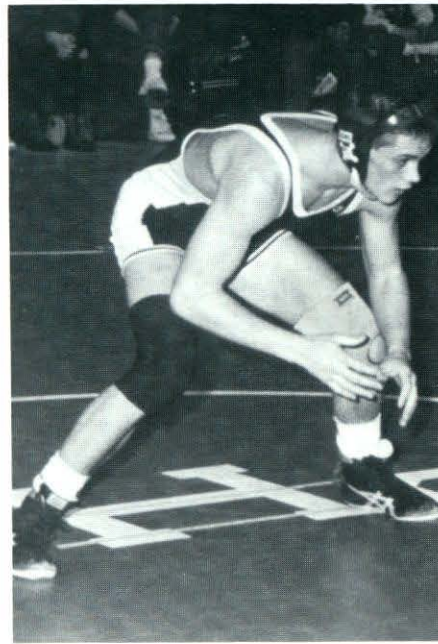

Steve MacArthur knows that a low center of gravity will help keep his balance.

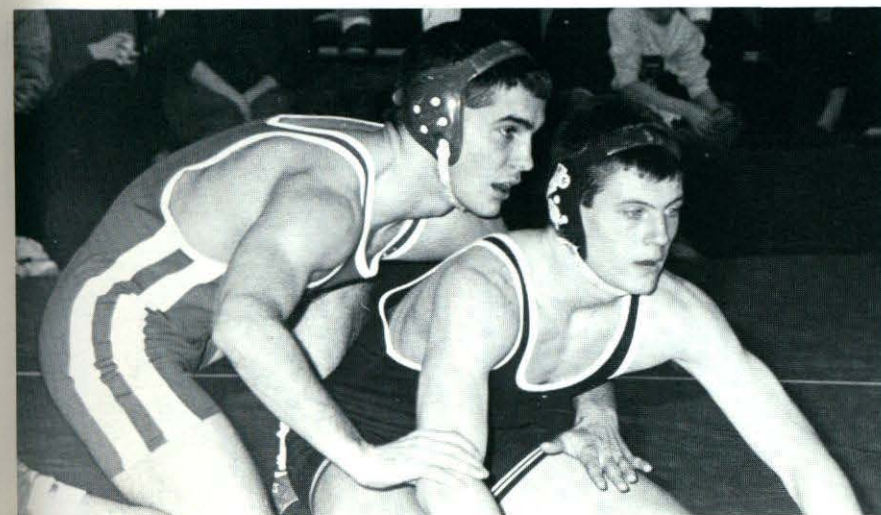

Eric Whitney attempts to force his way out of a tough hold.

Jamie Worth is the champion today.

Senior Steve Hughes is ready to pounce.

Adam Guthrie uses both strength and determination to defeat his opponent.

What would the wrestling season be like this year? Some of the very best wrestlers were lost to graduation. As a result, there were many gaps to fill. Returning to the team was senior tri-captain Matt Ciesluk who was the defending state and New England champion at 103 lbs. Senior tri-captain Bob Reid would also be a big contributor to the team. Senior tri-captain Mike Rea proved to be a team leader on and off the mat. He taught the younger wrestlers self-discipline and determination, two of the main factors of becoming a champion. The team was young this year, yet eager to take on any challenges.

As the season progressed, there were many changes. Senior Mike Rea moved down from 145 lbs. to 140 lbs. Junior Eric Whitney also went down from 140 lbs. to 130 lbs. Senior Steve Hughes moved up to 145 lbs. This season represented the first experience of losing weight for some of the wrestlers. Sophomore Adam Guthrie struggled to increase his weight to be able to wrestle at 152 lbs, while sophomore Chris Howard felt the hunger pains of cutting down to 125 lbs. Each wrestler accepted their role as a team member and each gave it their all.

As a team, their only accomplishment was winning the Wayland Holiday Tournament, but as individuals, the wrestlers did extremely well. Senior Matt Ciesluk won a tournament in New Jersey and was named outstanding wrestler at this tournament. He moved on to win at the sectional meet and take second place in states. For the second year in a row, Matt won the New England crown at 103 lbs. At 112 lbs., sophomore Scott Moreau did well with an excellent meet record and went on to place at sectionals. At 130 lbs., sophomore Eric Whitney placed second at sectionals while senior Bob Reid wrestled at 135 lbs., and placed third at the same meet. He also placed fifth at states. At 140 lbs., senior Mike Rea had a tough season. He was hampered by a nagging knee injury, yet he went on to place second at sectionals. At 145 lbs., Steve Hughes showed great improvement. Senior Mark Mattalino, who wrestled at 160 lbs., was named the most improved wrestler for the team. Senior Sean Mahoney showed a lot of improvement at 170 lbs. Together Mark and Sean went from losing records last year, to winning records this year. At heavy weight, the team lost a key factor in an injured Mark Sawicki, however senior Russ Linstead came up and filled his place nicely.

Wrestling is a sport that teaches the individuals on the team their own capabilities, while emphasizing team effort. With the strength in leadership of this year's team, the team worked hard, and they supported each other in times of victory and defeat.

The Year in Review

THE MIDAS TOUCH

This year began "in chaos." Gold was rarely seen, and Chelmsford High was slowly turning into another ruin. We had to do something.

We longed for the Midas Touch. We solicited local businesses, looking for money and advertisements. As we were turned away at the marketplace by the "goldless" merchants, we begged the gods for an answer. We were given our "curse" and told to work harder, so, during the hot summer months, we slaved to gather the gold needed to support THE 1991 LION.

King Midas received his wish — everything he touched turned to gold; yet it was a curse because it got in the way of his daily life. We were also looking for profit. We had to pound the pavement through the hot summer months. Unlike Midas, we were successful. In order to rid himself of his curse, he had to give up his treasure. We worked hard and earned the right to keep the gold.

What you see before you is our treasure. We now bestow it upon you, Gods and Goddesses. Appreciate the donors of your treasure.

Thanks to all the locals in the Forum of Chelmsford, who in these times of financial trouble gave of themselves for us.

Thanks to the parents who added to the treasure by leaving messages to their offspring.

And most of all, thanks to the members of the Class of 1991, the subscribers of THE 1991 LION.

Thanks also to all who have guided us through our time at Chelmsford High School. You have brought us from mere mortals to full-fledged Gods. The chaos has been resolved and we have worked together to form a world of order.

Go forth, and do not lose the godly rank you have been granted by the Class of 1991. It is truly a golden gift.

To Lisa Allee:

I've always been proud of you now more than ever! I wish you happiness, luck & success. Love you! Mom

To Jennifer Anderson:

CLASS

- I. Michelle Amerson, hereby leave Mr. Mac all my pencils and pens.
I. Jennifer M. Anderson, leave my sister Michelle four years of good luck at CHS — you'll need it!
I. Joshua P. Andresen, leave all my worldly goods to Ryan Hunt — Master of the Universe.
I. Julie A. Anstiss, leave Beth A. Adler no bananas!
I. John M. Apostolos, leave Mr. Taranto a box of tissues to cope with my graduation.
I. Michael S. Bartel, leave Mrs. Morrissey all my tardies to homeroom.
I. Kelly Barton, leave my best friends (the Dirty Dozen) love and memories!! and Jeff. I love my babara nose, yours is bigger!!
I. James M. Bean, leave the mystical Tablet of Shazmaa to the Lord of the Sith.
I. Robert Berling, leave the furthest parking spot to who ever wants to walk the farthest.
I. Karyn Bickford, along with Beth Lurvey, leave Ms. Micho two glasses. I leave my title as Queen of Leather to anyone!
I. Jonathan M. Biggs, leave all you wanna-be-yuppies to wallow in your own self importance.
I. Joshua T. Blagg, leave my brother Chris the tradition of having most triumphant parties!
I. Richard J. Bolanders, Jr., leave the voice of James Hetfield to anyone who can handle it.
I. David W. Bolza, leave my sanity to anyone who wants it.
I. Karen E. Boss, leave my sister Susan friends, fun, strength, success, and all our late night box-games. Love ya!
I. Angela M. Bourne, leave Inna enough kooshes, pineapples, z. cavs, and love for Godzilla to last a lifetime!
I. Kimberly A. Boyington, leave Dave Pacheco all of my muddy clothes from the Billy Idol concert, Sept. 22, 1990!
I. Matthew J. Brooks, hereby leave all my unaccomplished homework assignments to be recycled by the teachers who gave them to me.
I. James Brosnan, leave my forgery skills and horrendous attitude towards underclassmen to the Class of 1992.
I. Joanne M. Brown, leave the cheerleading squad hopes of another fun and exciting year!
I. Lisa A. Bruce, leave Mrs. Silva with the job of taking homeroom attendance.
I. Bridget A. Bue, leave to Pete the mysterious library note and to M, S, N, & A the rocky horror picture show and to CHS the money store number.

I. Meike Doyle, leave Petra Doyle Emerson House and the "Meat Locker."
I. Richard D. Doyle, leave Ben Ferrante one copy of every Rush tape there is for his listening enjoyment.
I. Karen B. Duggan and I, Alyssa Dineen, leave Tara M. Jewitt to deal with the Hot Pink Kitty Woman.
I. Tracey A. Dunnell, leave Dean Quinn much thanks and lots of luck in the future.
I. Shannon M. Dwinell, leave all my "cute" sneezes to everyone in the chorus room. I love you all!
I. Curtis L. Eckelkamp, leave my homeroom teacher Mr. Thompson to the poor freshman who gets him! Good luck!
I. Rebecca S. Edwards, leave John Lemox and Jason Worcester all of our good times. To Rachel DeYoung, I leave our wonderful library chats.
I. Melinda A. Eickel, leave Mr. Rondina a place for everything and everything in its place.
I. Teresa D. Eickel, leave Liz D. Hold-My-Hand-Pink Lipstick to wear instead of her other color.
I. Kathleen Enwright, leave Kerri Hocknell with shotgun and Kim Monahan in the back with a pack of gum. I also leave good luck to Jen.
I. Helena Erskine, leave my mess in the Art Room to the next Picasso in AP Portfolio.
I. Allison Feenev, leave Kerri W. hocknell Jeff Healy and the Open Road.
I. Jennifer J. Fenochetti, leave Mathew Fenochetti the best Senior year he could possibly have.
I. Yohan P. Fernando, leave locker #1200 to any and all faithful and devoted followers of the Cabal.
I. Benjamin Ferrante, leave Rich Doyle my tickets to the Kiss concert because I don't want to go.
I. Gregg J. Ferron, leave four years of unfinished homework in the bottom of my locker.
I. Marla E. Feuerstein, leave my brother the curse of our last name, and my best friend Jen all the luck in the world.
I. Wayne D. Fidler, leave my senior pictures to anyone who wants a good laugh.
I. Brian A. Field, leave the yack part to Mike D.
I. Jill Filosa, leave with all the optimism I'm known to have.
I. Victoria L. Firth, leave love to the Dirty Dozen, Kara a trip to the golf course, and Brusier Bob a new foot.
I. John C. Fischer, leave to Jen Sheehan my heart — March 19, 1990. To Kurt I leave the loaf award.
I. Stacey A. Fleming, leave to Mrs. Queenan the lecture she gave to me and Tracy Hall.
I. Rich Forcier, leave Raj Prasad my captain spot and my shoes to fill next year.
I. Adam P. Franks, leave Bumpus with all the luck he can muster up, and maybe a few ring-dings.
I. Deborah J. Frantz, leave Lauren C. a loaf of bread, Rachel D. a date, Chris M. a box of oreos, and the music dept. a lot of much needed luck.
I. Suzanne Freker, leave Rachel Riley as a role model.
I. Jeff Fuller, leave my parking space to anyone who has a yellow 1976 Cadillac.
I. Jacqueline M. Camache, leave Denise H. at the Circle (alone) and to Mr. Rondina a pillow for soccer nightmares to come.
I. Wendy M. Garnick, leave CHS with great memories. I also leave Mr. Pasquale my thanks, Jen a tent, and Elly the Wendy's Words Dictionary.
I. Melody Garrow, leave my best friend Tania DeCastro sadly to the rest of her "friends!" Love ya, Tania. I'll keep in touch!!
I. Nicole A. Gauthier, leave Mr. Rondina's office to the underclassmen in chorus, pookies to staz, geeks to Bicky, and cuteness and a half to Kario.
I. Christa M. Gehr, leave Rob Correia all the red lights I made him go through.
I. Laurie Gibson, leave my locker to my sister Lisa, who will be here in 1992.
I. Edward A. Gillin, leave nothing, for I am greedy!
I. Christine B. Godlewski, leave Mike Horan the thought of me being his sister-in-law.
I. Cindy L. Golubisky, leave an encyclopedia of smut to Mrs. Queenan.
I. John Gonsalves, leave the happiness of another year in Chelmsford High to all of my friends who should have graduated this year.
I. Peter Gorham, leave Mark Johnson with a map of the town.
I. Laurie A. Grandchamp, leave my colorguard captain sword to the junior on the squad who most wants gray hair.
I. Jonathan Grange, leave Christian good luck in his senior year.
I. Cynthia Graves, leave Erin S. a first class plane ticket to California.
I. Jennifer L. Griffin, leave Mr. Bettes, Mr. Quinn, Mr. O'Shea, Ms. Briand, and John Rega a big Thank You for helping me out for the past four years.
I. Kelly Jean Griggs, leave all of my teachers and underclassmates to Rebecca Griggs, my lovely sister.
I. Tracy L. Hall, leave Melissa Johnson "The Power."

I, Mark Mattaliano, leave gumb 04 to whoever gets my locker.
I, Charles S. McCormick, leave my car, with the keys in it, to anyone who is willing to take it. Just like I always do.
I, Kerry McGoldrick, leave Joe Bianco a red shirt, Mike "Roastbeef," Ding her boats, and Jen a camping trip to remember! Good luck Mikey!
I, Kerry McLaughlin, leave Krista, Jennie, Spaz, Dong, Bruisor, Julie, Jen, Christa, Kelly, Vicky, and Kara one wild time in Florida.
I, Wendy L. McLaughlin, leave Melissa Kennedy a black coffee with cream and sugar, and Paul Mueller one more year at Chelmsford High.
I, Walter McMahon, leave nothing.
I, Kevin A. McNamara, leave the remaining band members the secrets of bread, Quebec coke, and Vitteu.
I, Joseph L. McNiff, leave one computer disk to Mr. Hoover for all the times he bugged me. Hee hee!
I, David Merriam, before undergoing leave Larry Schmidt his ichy toothbrush.
I, Mike Metivier, leave to Jeff and Matt good fortune in the upcoming years.
I, Brian Miller, leave next year's football team and Coach Caito the Sisters of the POOR.
I, Andria E. Mitsakos, leave the CHS wrestling team the leadership to deal without me, the strength to carry on, and all the good times we had.
I, Kim Monahan, leave Kerri all our productive tutoring sessions and I leave Katy knowing what really happened at Burger King.
I, Douglas Moniz, leave my car audio equipment to Bob O., my Z24 to Mr. Kamal, and everything else to Jessica.
I, Chris Monroe, leave my stunning good looks to all the unfortunately ugly people.
I, Edward Morris, leave "Bubba's Flock" the strength to make it through Senior year without us around.
I, Linda Mulligan, leave Katie, Lynne, Laurel, and Jen "Endline" and the Superstar Drill.
I, Vik Murthy, leave the town of Chelmsford to future self-indulgent hedonistic adolescents.
I, Michael H. Nickerson, leave Hayes in the barn.
I, Anurag Nigam, leave the Green Bomber and the weapon to any new member of the cabal who wants to play frisbee.
I, Delanna A. Nolan, leave all the crazy and fun times to two of my good friends Lynn Roker and Gina Scozzari. Thank. Guys. I love you reard.
I, Will Nolan, leave and I'm never coming back.
I, Julie R. Odom, leave Kerry McGoldrick and Jen Wall a curfew.
I, Douglas A. Operach, leave this saying: As you venture into the real world, don't forget what you learned in the fake world.
I, David M. Pacheco, leave the best of luck to my brother and to the teachers.
I, Amy Paletta, leave the girls b-ball and v-ball teams all the happy memories I've had. Good luck L.E., B.M. Be good!! CHS — Live to laugh!!!! Smile!
I, Jill M. Papa, leave my position as Most Talkative to the girl of 1991 with the biggest mouth.
I, Tina M. Paradis, leave my little brother, Rob, three more fun years at Chelmsford high and better luck with a car than I had.
I, Keith E. Parenteau, leave all teachers who think they have authority a life long vacation!
I, Jorge H. Parreira, leave Liz Donelan tickets to O Positive and a soul craft to be carried with your hands held high.
I, Jennifer S. Pater, leave exactly what Jen P. left because that's what I was going to write! Good luck to my sister Lindsay in her days here!!!
I, Jennifer Patriquin, leave my almost sister Lindsay and my brother Matt my Hawthorne hall locker. May you have lots of lock with it.
I, Keith E. Patton, leave my chores at Cable 43 to Matt S.
I, Erik K. Paulsen, leave Mrs. Queenan an infinite number of "Shut up!"
I, Eric Pearson, leave to Bob Cruckshank accident report and auto insurance forms and the best of luck to the 1992 Lion Business Editors.
I, Brett A. Pelley, leave CHS all the Good times and bad times in the Z24.
I, K. Bebe Phanrsvong, leave all my junk in my locker to the newcoming Freshman. I will leave it up to them to scrape it out.
I, Tan-Quang Ba Pho, leave the grim shadows of angst-ridden high school existence for the grim shadows of angst-ridden college life. Yipee.
I, Todd A. Pitchall, leave a copy of the yearbook to Brian Krueger, wherever he is in California.
I, Bert Pimentel, leave Chelmsford High, knowing that all my teachers really love me more than themselves.
I, Amy Pitchman, leave my sister, Stacy Pitchman, three more exciting years in Chelmsford High School. Good Luck, Stacy!
I, Rick Ploof, leave all the good and bad times to the three T's: Tania, Tamara, Terri. I leave Ken S. and Andy F. all the luck in the world — at least one of them will need it!
I, Brad Prendergast, leave Alecia thanks for being a protective "sister."
I, Jackie K. Priola, leave my skinny locker to any unlucky freshman, but I am leaving CHS with a bigger smile than when I arrived. Adios, Betsy.
I, Christopher J. Priore, leave all the money in my "HUGE" bank account to my brother, Scott.
I, Amy Putis, leave Chris Howard and Adam Guthrie the best of luck and decorated lockers for the next two years.
I, Melissa Quigley, leave Matthew Quigley alone in the hallways of CHS.
I, Marie Raffaello, leave Shaun Griffin all the times I tried to talk to him. And I also leave Heather L. my looks.
I, Michael J. Rea, leave many memories of childhood to the upcoming generation on Park Road!
I, John N. Rega, leave a pack of rolos to all loyal members of the Rolo Liberation Front.
I, Bob Reid, leave Casey Moore a green tin.
I, Barbara Reynolds, leave purple dots down the hall of Whittier.
I, Michelle M. Richard, leave Chelmsford High with fond memories of good friendships with Kelly, Neha, Melissa, and everyone else I knew. Luv ya!
I, Brian S. Ritchie, leave all my friends four Great Years and many more.
I, Eric Roy, leave CHS with this thought: I never hated anyone. If you said hello to me once, you were my friend forever.
I, Marion L. Russo, leave Pat Hayes my nose as a reminder of good times.
I, Joshua N. Saldie, leave to Rachel Coffey the legacy that I gave up on two years ago.
I, Donna G. Sartz, leave my beloved Coke machine to Sara Goldreich and Mike Hass.
I, Greg Saunders, leave a haircut to one Mr. Glenn P. Serra.
I, Mark K. Sawicki, leave absolutely nothing to no one because I'm selfish!
I, Michael G. Sawyer, leave my jazz solos to John Pollard, not Leslie Smith.
I, Lee Schiff, leave this school for my one and only Becky.
I, Mary A. Schmidt, bequeath to M.M. STUNT VANS and other junk that only fools like us find amusing. To Mr. Meidell, I leave many thanks for caring.
I, Thomas Schmidt, leave future gym classes my prog shirt.
I, Gina M. Scozzari, leave all of my good memories and good times to Dee Nolan and Jen Tansal! I'll miss you guys! Jen — have fun without me!
I, Glenn P. Serra, leave extra loud cheerz and wahooz to all my friends and cool people I know. You know who you are.
I, Neha Shah, leave Michelle Richard all the great times we had at my locker.
I, Kristin M. Shaw, leave Melissa Kennedy two more years at CHS and all the good times I had here.
I, Jennifer L. Sheehan, leave John Fischer all my love, and also those ridiculous 600's to all underclassmen swimmers!
I, Jessica E. Shipley, leave lunch at Bainbridges to Jen, pain relievers to Krista, the Cucaracha and Mona Lisa to Kerry, and my love to Doug.
I, Jeffrey Sibol, leave Mike Nickerson many dazed Bruin's games with big Al.
I, Sara Silander, leave the Student Council my experience and hopes to achieve excellence but also the wisdom to evaluate mistakes.
I, Michael J. Silverman, leave Brenton A. Poppolizio caretaker of The Red Hot Love Machine.
I, Derek J. Simpson, leave all my friends in the band.
I, Sven E. Skoog, leave this plane of existence in search of a better one, wherever such may now be found; I take the axe of THANAS with me.
I, Kara M. Slattery, leave Vicky Firth great memories of how it feels to be a "missing person."
I, Michelle M. Smith, leave Christi Cobery, peace, love, and groovy times!
I, Kerry Sousa, leave Tammy and April good luck. I also leave Cindy memories of our locker. For Mrs. Mahoney, I leave many grateful thanks.
I, Teresa E. Spillane, leave my sailboats to Leha, my big mouth to my sister, and Denise alone at Discos Circle next year. Good luck!
I, Jennifer A. Stander, leave love to Drama Club and light crew. I also leave blonde hair and a knee brace to the next Drama Pres., '92. 8/15/87.
I, Colleen Stewart, leave all my locker pictures to anyone who wants them.
I, Ken Stewart, leave Jeff H. his hammer, those Friday nights at Pizza Hut, the Lanes, and Mrs. Shimer all the M&M's she can eat.
I, Donna R. Sullivan, leave Jeff Carignan and Dave Laro a Cadillac with no gas. To my baseball player in Maine, I leave my love and good luck.
I, Kristin Sullivan, with Emily Lueck, leave all our failed science labs to Megan Gaphardt.
I, Kimberly B. Sweetser, leave this school and my handcuffs to Michelle M.
I, Brian A. Taranto, leave Mr. Fletcher a pair of cement blocks to skate on, just like my pair.
I, Christopher K. Tarbox, leave the yack part to Brian's parents — Put em up!
I, Eric Therrien, leave the little I have to whomever wants it.
I, Jennifer A. Therrien, leave Jessica West our lasting friendship and to deal with our fathers. Good Luck!!
I, Mike Trainor, leave this school to the one and only Rich Trainor.
I, Amy K. Tsirovasilis, leave my tissues, gum, and hairspray to all my friends.
I, Ryan M. Tucker, leave my lunch, for the last time.
I, John W. Ullom, leave all the underclassmen all the fun I had on the day after the Prom.
I, Rebekah S. Varney, leave the caterpillar to anyone who understands what I am talking about.
I, Julio Vazquez, leave my reputation to anyone that can match it, but I severely doubt it.
I, Fabio Vidal, really don't know what I am doing here.
I, Tracey Vokey, leave nothing to anyone — I'm taking it all with me.
I, Victoria Vooys, just leave.
I, Brian M. Wagner, leave without ever going to homeroom.
I, Erin A. Waldron, leave Chelmsford High with good times and happy memories. I leave all the luck to my friends.
I, Jennifer Wall, leave an empty camper to Kerry McGoldrick, and love to the dirty dozen.
I, David M. Ward, leave nothing because I'd rather take it for myself.
I, Vicki Warren, leave next year's field hockey team to "assume the position."
I, Wayne C. Warren, leave all my homework from my senior classes to my girlfriend Stephanie.
I, Tracee E. Webber, leave Reeve Martel the best of luck next year in French all by herself!!
I, Andrea Weisman, leave Elena Apostolos a reminder: nobody lends money to a man with a sense of humor.
I, Bryan J. White, leave K.B. $800.00 for the job she never did.
I, Cynthia White, leave my Gumby glove to anyone who is willing to accept the challenge.
I, Jennifer L. White, leave to Jen, Amy, Kath, and Roger . . . nothin'!
I, Daniel A. Willman, leave the talking pit to Dave and Fish.
I, Jennifer Witts, leave cheerleading to whoever wants it. I also leave everything else to Julie and Therisa.
I, Heidi Wolfgang, leave Miss Kineen with the memory of the four chatter boxes.
I, Robert L. Woods, leave Mara, Michelle, Beth, and Miriam all of my obnoxious comments. And I want all the money they borrowed paid back!!
I, Brian Woolard, leave my varsity hockey #23 to the next goalie that is good enough to wear it.
We, at CHS varsity athletes, leave to our successors the task of regaining the Dalton Trophy!
I, Amy Zepeda, leave good times and lasting memories to my friends. To D.K. I leave my love for an almond joy to Mom Peace and quiet. Luv Yas!

GOOD LUCK TO THE CLASS OF 1991!!!

This is the time to remember . . .

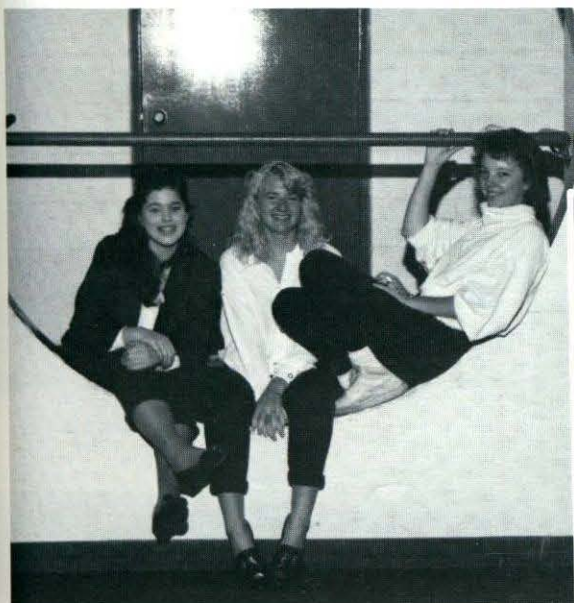

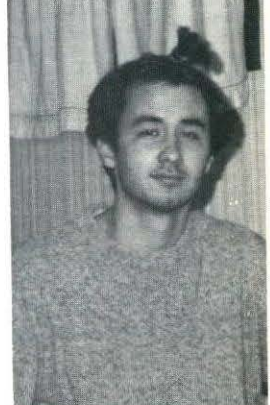

... cause it will not last forever.

These are the days to hold onto . . .

... Cause we won't ...

... Although we'll want to!

*The 1991 Lion Theme Song:
 "We Didn't Make the Deadline"
 (To the tune of "We Didn't Start the Fire")*

Many girls, token males, "Silva" bells, yearbook sales,
 Roman columns, Greek facades, all the themes of the Gods,
 Where's the cropper? No one knows. I must have my Orest!
 Red pens, Christmas lights, layouts due, sticker fights.

We didn't make the deadline,
 It was always looming
 Through Jack Conrad's fuming,
 We didn't make the deadline,
 No, we didn't beat it,
 But we tried to meet it.

Stuffed lions, Markisms, seminar on communism,
 Business, Sports, Activities, March first antcippees,
 Apple pie, "Sale it said," photo view overhead,
 Yearbook camp, "Dear Jan," Help! I need a good man!

We didn't make the deadline,
 It was always looming
 Through Jack Conrad's fuming,
 We didn't make the deadline,
 No, we didn't beat it,
 But we tried to meet it.

Mystery month, dream date, almost done, I can't wait!
 Open house, Ground Round, Photobanc, Waldo's found!
 Tessa's party, veggie dip, Where's the desk & how about Chip?
 "No-Doe"ing, Period 2, Seize the day! Get a clue!

We didn't make the deadline,
 It was always looming
 Through Jack Conrad's fuming,
 We didn't make the deadline,
 No, we didn't beat it,
 But we tried to meet it.

Guy Caron, layout sloppy, triangles, I need copy!
 Birthday cakes, ad tracts, puzzle thief, Get the facts!
 Rick's wall, illuminating, super study, Josten's waiting,
 Baby pix, survival kit, hope our yearbook's been a hit!

We didn't make the deadline,
 No, we didn't beat it,
 But we tried to meet it.
 We didn't make the deadline,
 And when we are gone
 It will still loom on and on and on . . . !

As our odyssey ends and this book draws to a close, we, the Class of 1991, embark on a new journey and begin a new volume in our lives. Yet our history is not forgotten, and on these pages lie our friends, inspirations, memories, and good times. We have crossed oceans, conquered cities, and become Gods and Goddesses. Together we have reached the peak of Mount Olympus and achieved our greatest dreams. Chelmsford High School is now in the past, but will always be remembered when we peruse the pages of The 1991 Lion.

The recording of our journey through Chelmsford High would not have been possible without the dedication and ideas of many hardworking and persistent editors: Stephanie MacDougall and Melissa Quigley, who made the Olympics a grand event; Teresa Spillane and Kerrin Hocknell, who brought the Muses to life; Eric Pearson and Karen Boss, whose Midas Touch with finances made the book possible; Angela Bourne, whose beautiful artwork adorned the Lion; and Elizabeth Shepherd, who chronicled the Heroes, Mortals, and Demons. Special thanks are extended to Mark Gilchrist and Robert Cruickshank for their heroic efforts during many a photographic jam. Each and every one of these people devoted enormous amounts of time and energy to making the 1991 Lion the best ever, and all deserve many thanks.

We give our greatest thanks and love to Mrs. Janice Silva, for without her guidance, friendship, advice, brownies, and cookies, the 1991 Lion would never have left the drawing board. Thanks also to Mrs. Mary Donovan, who gave so much support in order to earn the financial resources necessary for publication. Finally, thanks are extended to Mr. Jack Conrad for his enthusiastic encouragement.

We, the 1991 Lion editors and staff, have completed this literary epic of our journey through Chelmsford High School. We now present it to you, our classmates and friends, to enjoy, remember, and keep close to your hearts as the legend of the Class of 1991. It is your history and your Golden Fleece.

Thank you and Good luck,
