Preface

IN writing the history of the "Warren, Jackson, and Allied Families, being the Ancestry of Jesse Warren and Betsey Jackson," it has been my object to gather together all the family records attainable, in order to gratify the desire of the present generation to possess in book form a record of the lives of those they have revered and the ancestry in which they have been taught to feel a justifiable pride. In doing this, original research has been made in town, county, and probate records wherever such has been possible.

I wish to thank the family for their hearty co-operation in my work, especially my uncle, the Reverend Samuel Mills Warren, and my sister, Mrs. Louis F. Benson. I am also deeply indebted to the following friends for the great assistance they have rendered me: Mr. Augustus A. Galloupe, of Beverly; Mr. Ezra Stearns, of Fitchburg; Mr. Emerson, of Chelmsford; Mr. William Olin, of Boston; Miss May Atherton Leach, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Edwin H. Warren and Mrs. George Parkhurst, of Chelmsford; and especially Colonel J. Granville Leach, of Philadelphia, to whom I am indebted for the comprehensive article on the Warren Family, and also the sketches of the lives of Edward Jackson, Esquire, General Humphrey Atherton, and Major Simon Willard.

The Warren Family

FEW patronymics have been more distinguished in Anglo-Saxon annals than that of Warren. Its earliest representative was William Warren, the first Earl of Surrey, whose surname was derived from his father's fortress situated on the left bank of the Varenne, and called after that river, and whose family, it is claimed, were earls in Normandy. William Warren was a knight at the battle of Mortimer in 1054, and one of the Norman lords who attended the great council at Lillebourne, and fought at Hastings, where he had a considerable command, and his name appears on the famous Roll of Battle Abbey. Duke William munificently rewarded his services, and his holdings of the great baronies of Castle Acre in Norfolk, Lewes in Suffolk, and Coningsburgh in Yorkshire, besides grants in nine other counties,—in all about three hundred English manors,—made his possessions resemble those of a sovereign, and gave him power beyond most of the followers of the Conqueror. He was one of the chief justiciars of England in 1074, and held other civil appointments within the gift of the crown. He was wounded at the siege of Pevensey, and died 24 June, 1088, and was buried beside his wife, Gundrada,* in the priory of St. Pancras at Lewes, of which he was the founder.

During the troubled reigns of the first centuries of Norman rule in England, the Earls of Warren and Surrey were foremost characters in all that made this period heroic, and their deeds of arms and state-craft are alike chronicled in song and story.

William, the second Earl, commanded the great army of Henry I. at the battle of Tinchebray in Lower Normandy, where Duke Robert, brother to the king, and a claimant to the throne of England, was defeated, and, according to some authorities, taken prisoner by Earl Warren.† He was one of the five earls who, with other great men, attended the demise of King Henry at Lyons, 1 December, 1135, and settled with him the succession of the crown of England, and he was then appointed governor of Rouen and the district of Caux, by the chief men of the duchy. His wife was the beautiful Isabel of Vermandois, granddaughter of Henry I. of France.

* According to some authorities, Gundrada was the daughter of William I., the Conqueror. She was probably, however, his step-daughter, as otherwise the words of Earl Warren, in the foundation charter of Lewes Abbey, cannot be understood,—“pro salute Domine mee Matildis regine matris uxoris mee.”

William, third Earl Warren, followed his kinsman Louis VII. of France in the holy wars, and was slain in the service of the second crusade, 13 January, 1147, when his heart was returned to England and given burial at Lewes.

William Plantagenet, sixth Earl Warren, was one of the little group of nobles closely allied to the royal house, who adhered to King John in the baronial quarrel which led to the vindication of national freedom and the consolidation of constitutional life as embodied in Magna Charta, and with the king he met the twenty-five confederate barons at Runnymede, and was a party to the consummation of that act, which was at once a revelation of the possibility of liberty to the mediæval world and the promise of freedom to the future.

John, seventh Earl Warren, whose long life was spent in the business of war, made such an uncompromising resistance* to Edward I.'s proposed right of inquiry into the tenure of the baronage to their estates, under the statute of quo warranto, that the crown was forced to modify its attempt to replenish the royal exchequer by the contemplated confiscation of weak holdings, and perhaps no argument in favor of the claim that the family were Earls of Warren in Normandy before the Conquest is so strong as this Earl John's answer in the quo warranto proceedings, that his ancestors were earls in Normandy, and that they lost their lands there for adhering to the kings of England against the kings of France. It was this Earl John who bore on the reverse side of his great seal, conies or rabbits, in allusion to his name. The conies are running in and out of their holes, surrounded by deer, swans,

* When in 1219 the king's justices asked the Earl by what warranty he held his franchises, he unsheathed an ancient and rusty sword, saying, "Here is my warranty. My ancestors who came with William conquered their lands with the sword, and with the sword will I defend them against all who desire to seize them. For the king did not conquer this realm by himself, but our ancestors were his participants and helpers." This scene originated the motto, which was inscribed about some ancient seals belonging to the Warrens of Poynton, in Cheshire,—"Gladio vici, gladio teneo, gladio tenebro,"—and furnished the subject for a fine historical painting by Pine.

and various birds, indicative of the sports of the field, forming a view not only of a warren, but of an ancient park. On the obverse of the shield appear the ancient bearings of the Warrens, chequy or and azure.

In the great dispute between Robert Bruce and John Baliol for the crown of Scotland, Earl John was a staunch supporter of Baliol, prompted thereto, no doubt, by the fact that his daughter Isabel was the wife of the latter claimant. Henry, Lord Percy, had married his daughter Eleanor, and she through this marriage was the ancestress of the Earls of Northumberland. Through the male line of Earl John descend the Warrens of Poynton in Cheshire, of whom was Sir George Warren (17—-1801), knight of the Bath, in whose interest was compiled the "Memoirs of the Ancient Earls of Warren and Surrey and their Descendants to the Present Time," by the Reverend John Watson, fellow of Brazenose College in Oxford and rector of Stockport in Cheshire.* The intent of this, the most sumptuous and unique genealogical work produced in England during the last century, was to prove the right of Sir George Warren to the earldom of Warren as the head of the Poynton family. The Warrens of Poynton bore for arms chequy or and azure, on a canton gules a lion rampant argent, and, according to Dr. Watson's deductions, the Warrens of Thorpe Arnold, Leicestershire, and Stapleford, County Notts, also descend from the same stem. Arthur Warren, Esquire, of Thorpe Arnold, settled after 1640 at Stapleford, and his son Arthur was one of the prominent men of the county and the ancestor of Admiral Sir John Borlace Warren (1753-1822), to whom, as his cousin, Sir George Warren bequeathed all his manuscripts relating to the Earls of Warren. On the enlargement of the manor-house at Stapleford the arms of the Warrens of Poynton were painted and carved there as they had been at Thorpe Arnold.

Sir Ralph Warren,† born about 1486, was twice Lord Mayor of London, his first election to the mayoralty being at the instance of Henry VIII., who, on the day of the election, 13 October, 1536, sent a letter to the assembled citizens requiring them to elect his choice. He was also one of the principal mercers of his time, and belonged to the two great mercantile corporations of Merchant Adventurers and Merchants of the Staple. William Warren flourished as a poet from 1598, and his most considerable poem, "A pithie and pleasant discourse and dialogue between a wealthy citizen and a miserable soldier, briefly touching the commodities and discomforts of war and peace," was licensed to Richard Jones, in the Stationers' Register, 7 November, 1578, but no copy thereof is known to exist. Arthur Warren, also a poet, wrote two poems descriptive of the pangs of poverty while imprisoned for debt in 1604,—“The Poore Man's Passions” and “Poverty's Patience,”—which were published as a quarto volume, and entered on the Stationers' Register, 14 January, 1604/5. He wrote in six-line stanza, and with considerable force and feeling. Copies of his work are exceedingly rare, though the British Museum at London and the Bodleian Library at Oxford have each one. Another English writer, Samuel Warren (1807-1877), fellow of the Royal Society, is widely known for his vivid word-painting and delineation of modern life, in his greatest works, “Ten Thousand a Year” and “Passages from the Diary of a Physician.”

There is still another group of Warrens, a little band of individual adventurers who sailed away from the home-land, like the ancient Argonautæ, to find across strange seas the golden fleece of civil and religious liberty, and touching some of these there is an American work of importance, entitled “Genealogy of Warrens with Historical Sketches,” by John C. Warren, M.D., Emeritus Professor of Harvard University, and published at Boston in 1854. One half of the work relates to the English Warrens, and the author not only deduces the Warrens of Poynton from the Earls of Warren, but also derives the Warrens of Hedbury, Devonshire, from those of Poynton, and various of the American families from those of Hedbury.

The earliest of the American adventurers was Richard Warren, one of the “Mayflower” passengers of 1620, whose descendant, General James Warren, was a prominent figure of the Revolutionary period, and the friend and correspondent of the immortal Washington. He is also said to be the ancestor of Major-General Gouverneur Kemble Warren, a distinguished officer of the Civil War and a military writer of eminence.

Peter Warren, another of the early comers to the new world, was of Boston in 1659, and the progenitor of General Joseph Warren, the wise and ardent patriot and the hero of Bunker Hill. His brother, Dr. John Warren, a graduate of Harvard in 1771, occupied for forty years the foremost place among the surgeons of New England, in which he was succeeded by his sons and grandsons.

John Warren, who, according to Dr. Warren, descends from the Warrens of Hedbury, was of Watertown, Massachusetts, in 1630, where his name was continued by a numerous posterity, who have rendered substantial service to the country in her various times of need.

Another pioneer of New England was Arthur Warren, of Weymouth, Massachusetts, of whom hereafter.

While the Warren name achieved greater distinction in Massachusetts than elsewhere in America, it was also represented in some of the other colonies. In Virginia, by Lieutenant Radcliffe Warren, who was killed in Claiborne's raid on Kent Island, in 1635; and by Thomas Warren, Esquire, many years a burgess of James City and Surry Counties. A son of the latter, Lieutenant Thomas Warren, removed to Kent County, Maryland, and called his estate there "Poynton," after the ancestral seat in Cheshire, England. In Maryland, the name was also represented by John Warren, of St. Mary's County, who was slain by Captain Cornwallis and party in 1644, and by Colonel Humphrey Warren, commander of a regiment of foot in Charles County, and a signer of the celebrated "Remonstrance" of the Maryland colonists, under date of 27 March, 1689. All of the latter descend from Sir Edward Warren, of Poynton, Baron of Stockport, and high sheriff of Cheshire, and knighted in 1599 while serving in the Irish wars.

A later Warren of much prominence in the historical annals of the new world was Commodore Sir Peter Warren, R.N., the son of Captain Michael Warren, of Warrentown, County Meath, Ireland. After the death of his father, in 1712, he entered the naval service under his uncle, Matthew, Lord Aylmer, rear-admiral of Great Britain, and gradually rose to distinction, and in 1742 was commissioned commander-in-chief of the West India Squadron, with which he captured many prizes from the Spanish. Fresh from these victories, he was appointed, in 1745, to command the armament intended for an attack on Louisbourg, and his fleet of transports being joined with the provincial land forces, under Sir William Pepperell, the famous siege was begun on May first of that year.* For his successful service at Louisbourg, Commodore Warren was commissioned, 8 August, 1745, rear-admiral of the Blue Squadron, and for subsequent distinguished services was made vice-admiral of the Red Squadron. "Few men ever attained or better deserved so great a share of popularity as Sir Peter Warren. He had the singular happiness of being universally courted, esteemed, and loved." While in America Commodore Warren purchased a large section of the Mohawk Valley, New York, and placed his nephew, Sir William Johnson, in charge of it and of the Scotch-Irish colony he had induced to settle therein. He died in Dublin, 29 July, 1752, in his forty-ninth year, and was buried in the church at Knockmark with his parents, and honored with a monument in Westminster Abbey.

Warren Lineage

Arthur Warren and His Descendants

---

ARTHUR WARREN<sup>1</sup>, the founder of one branch of the Warren family in America, emigrated to Massachusetts prior to 1638, and located at Weymouth, which, next to Plymouth, is the most ancient town in New England. No effort has been made to ascertain his immediate lineage, but the Christian name Arthur, an uncommon one at that period, suggests that he may have come from the Nottinghamshire branch of Warrens, where that name appears in several generations. The earliest mention of his name in the Weymouth records is under date of 1638, and he is next mentioned, in 1645, as one of the petitioners to the General Court of Massachusetts Bay Colony, "for a grant of the Narragansett lands supposed to have been rendered forfeit by the heresy of Gorton, Holden, and other just proprietors."

His name does not appear in the earliest known list of landowners at Weymouth, but it is fourth in the list of 2 February, 1651/52, although the extent of his holdings is not given. Some of his possessions there, however, are noted in the town records under later dates, and are thus described:

"Ten acres of Upland and Swamp first given to himself, bounded on the East with Mr. Glover's Marsh, on the West and South with Mr. Barnard's land, and on the north by the Sea."

"Ten acres in the Mill Field given to himself, bounded on the East and South with Hingham Line, and on the north by the land of Walter Harris with the common on the West."

"Six acres in the Plaine, three of them first given to George Allin, three to Arthur Warren bounded on the East with a highwaie, on the West and North with highwaies, on the South with the land of John Osborne."

Arthur Warren was one of the substantial citizens of Weymouth, yet his name is not among those who were admitted to freemanship, and the records do not disclose any activity on his part in public affairs, from which it is inferred that he was not in harmony with the religious tenets of the Puritan church. The date of his death has not been ascertained. An inventory of his estate is on record at Boston, but it is without date. That he died before 1663 is evidenced by the records of the town of Weymouth, during which year land was granted to "Widow Warren." "In 1668 Samuel Pratt bought land of Arthur Warren's children." *

Arthur Warren married, circa 1638, Mary —, whose maiden name is not known.

Children of Arthur and Mary Warren, born at Weymouth:

2. ARTHUR WARREN<sup>2</sup>, born 17 November, 1639; died at Chelmsford, 25 April, 1671; married Abigail Rogers, daughter of John Rogers, of Billerica; she died at Billerica, 15 June, 1671. Issue: Arthur, born September, 1668; died November, 1668. Arthur Abigail, born prior to 1671.*
3. ABIGAIL WARREN<sup>2</sup>, born 27 October, 1640; died 6 April, 1726, at Woburn, Massachusetts; married, 10 May, 1661, John Wright.
4. JACOB WARREN<sup>2</sup>, born 26 October, 1642.+
5. JOSEPH WARREN<sup>2</sup>, living in 1671.*
6. FEARNOT WARREN<sup>2</sup>, born June, 1655.*

4. JACOB WARREN<sup>2</sup>, son of Arthur and Mary Warren, was born at Weymouth, 26 October, 1642, and died at Chelmsford, Massachusetts, prior to the tax assessment in 1723, as he was last assessed in September, 1722. He removed from Weymouth to Chelmsford prior to 1667, and became at once active in the public affairs of the town, his first appointment being that of fence viewer, 1667/68. He was one of a committee for laying out land in 1673, 1687, 1688, 1709; tithingman in 1679, 1694, and 1697; selectman in 1683, and surveyor of highways in 1686, 1687, and 1690. He served as member of the "Garrison in the West Regiment, in Middlesex," at Chelmsford, 16 March, 1691/92, under Lieutenant Ephraim Hildreth.

On 12 December, 1677, Jacob Warren received a grant of land in Chelmsford, "adjoining to Richard Hildreth's land on the south side of the bridge, for him to build a house for his subsistence." This, together with the other early grants made to the Warrens, was in the part of Chelmsford now known as Westford. In 1711 he was granted land on "Thomas Henchman's right," and probably moved into the village of Chelmsford, where his son [8] Joseph<sup>3</sup> already resided, having received a portion of the same right by deed of gift, * Both Arthur and Abigail Warren, his wife, left wills; the former, dated 7 March, 1671, bequeaths all of his property to his wife, whom he appoints guardian for their child. The latter, also dated 1671, pertaining to the disposition of her property and her wishes in regard to her "poor fatherles and motherles babe," committing it to "my father John Rogers to be cared for by him, according to his best wisdome," etc., provides that, in event of the death of said child, half of her property go to "my husband's two bretheren Jacob Warren and Joseph Warren, and their Sister Abigail wright." Fearnot evidently died prior to this date.

"Mem. Admistraccone was granted to J<sup>no</sup> Rogers, her father in behalf of her daughter, Arthur Abigail Warren at last octob. Court in Cambr. and the Inventor was then exhibited & burnt in the fire th<sup>t</sup> was kindled at the time & therefore he againe presented this on oath 13 November 1671."

There are numerous other interesting documents and inventories of interest in connection with the estate which show them to have been people of considerable affluence for the time.

at the time of his marriage with Ruth Wheeler, the heiress of Major Thomas Henchman. (See Wheeler Lineage, page 88.) This son became the founder of the Chelmsford branch of the Warren family. Of Jacob Warren's other sons, [7] Jacob<sup>3,*</sup> who moved to Plainfield, Connecticut, about 1698, became the founder of the family in that place; his son [10] Ephraim<sup>3</sup> was the founder of the family at Killingly, Connecticut, where he moved between the years 1702 and 1707, and his grandson [13] Jacob<sup>4</sup>, who afterward lived in the part of Westford which became Littleton,—presumably on the original Warren grant,—was the founder of the Littleton branch of the Warren family.

on an old deed now in possession of Mr. Joseph E. Warren, of Chelmsford, as witness to a transfer of property from [8] Joseph<sup>3</sup> and [17] Ruth (Wheeler<sup>3</sup>) Warren to their son [12] Joseph<sup>4</sup>, dated January, 1722. She died at Chelmsford, 17 December, 1730.

* It has been presumed heretofore and so published, that the Jacob Warren, founder of the Plainfield branch of the Warren family, was [4] Jacob<sup>2</sup>, the son of [1] Arthur<sup>1</sup>, but careful research in the Chelmsford records has revealed the following facts: In 1692 Jacob Warren and Jacob Warren, Jr., were members of the "Garrison in West Regiment in Middlesex," stationed at Chelmsford.* In 1693 Jacob Warren, Sr., was tithingman; in 1694 "Jacob Warren, Jr.," was surveyor of highways and appointed to run the line between Chelmsford and Concord, and in 1695 chosen constable. In 1697 "Jacob Warren, Sr.," was appointed tithingman, and after this date, which is that of the Plainfield emigration, only one Jacob Warren appears until 1722, when [13] Jacob<sup>4</sup>, the son of [8] Joseph Warren<sup>3</sup>, was of age and was assessed for taxes, in which year the elder Jacob is again recorded "Jacob Warren, Sr."

[7] Deacon Jacob Warren<sup>3</sup>, one of the founders of Plainfield, is recorded there in 1699. That he was undoubtedly a citizen of Chelmsford prior to that date is proved, because the births of his first four children are recorded both in the Chelmsford and Plainfield records. He became a prominent citizen, and one of the earliest appointed deacons of the Plainfield church.

† Sergt. Richard Hildreth, b. 1605, was the founder of the Hildreth family of Massachusetts. He was one of the petitioners for the incorporation of both Charleston Village (Woburn), and Concord. He afterward moved to Cambridge, where he was made Freeman in 1643. In 1653 he was one of the original grantees of Chelmsford, where he became a large landholder, and where he died in 1688. His gravestone, still standing in 1825, read, "Richard Hildreth, Sergeant of Militia, died 1688, aged 83." His will, dated 1688, is probated at Middlesex County Register. His first wife, Sarah, d. at Cambridge, 15 June, 1644, and his second wife, Elizabeth, at Malden, 3 Aug., 1693. He is the ancestor of Richard Hildreth (1807-1865), eminent writer and historian, and also of the writer Dr. Samuel Prescott Hildreth (1783-1863). His children by his first wife were: 1. James, m., 7 Jan., 1659, Margaret Ward; d. 14 April, 1695. 2. Ephraim. 3. Jane, m. Robert Proctor. 4. Mary.† By his second wife he had 5. Joseph, b. 16 April, 1658; m., 25 Dec., 1683, Abigail Wilson. 6. Persis, b. 8 Feb., 1660; m., 23 May, 1682, Samuel Cleaveland. 7. Thomas, b. 1 Feb., 1662. 8. Isaac, b. July, 1663; m., 12 Nov., 1685, Elizabeth Wilson. 9. Abigail, m., 19 June, 1684, Moses Parker.

Children of Jacob and Mary (Hildreth) Warren, born at Chelmsford:

7. JACOB WARREN<sup>3</sup>, born circa 1668; died at Plainfield, Connecticut, 3 September, 1727; was one of the founders of Plainfield; deacon of the church and Town Recorder, 1707; married Sarah —.
8. JOSEPH WARREN<sup>3</sup>, born 25 October, 1670.†
9. ELIZABETH WARREN<sup>3</sup>, born 3 March, 1674; married, 17 July, 1695, Nathaniel Blodgett.
10. EPHRAIM WARREN<sup>3</sup>, born 24 June, 1680; died at Killingly, Connecticut; will proved 4 May, 1747; was one of the founders of Killingly; captain of Killingly train-band, 1729 until his death; married, before 1702, Abigail Burnham.

8. DEACON JOSEPH WARREN<sup>3</sup>, son of Jacob and Mary (Hildreth) Warren, was born at Chelmsford, 25 October, 1670, and resided there until his death, 16 April, 1740. In 1699 he was chosen constable, an office of consequence in the early colonial period, and in 1719 he was elected tithingman. In 1718 he was one of the contributors toward the building of the school-house. He was deacon of the church at Chelmsford. Three years after his marriage he received by deed of gift from his wife's kinsman, Major Thomas Hinchman, the property on the Boston Road in the town of Chelmsford, upon which still stands, in 1902, the family homestead. It has been the birthplace of successive generations of Warrens to the present time, being inherited by the eldest son of each generation until it passed into the possession of [26] Jeremiah Warren<sup>6</sup> upon the removal of his elder brother [25] Jeduthan<sup>6</sup> to Westminster, and is now owned by Mr. Joseph E. Warren, of Chelmsford. Successive generations have left their mark upon the homestead, it being altered from time to time to meet the requirements of its occupants until now it is a rambling farm-house, with numerous wings and L's, one of which was added about 1730, at the time of the marriage of Ephraim Warren and Esther Parker, and another in 1836, upon the marriage of Joseph Warren, but, through all these changes, the old kitchen remains as in the original house, with its large fireplace and ovens, while the sitting-room retains its fine old wainscot of the colonial period.

Many interesting traditions attach to the "Old Warren House." One is, that in its early days the Indians used to come and peep in at the windows, another, that the patriot troops who marched to Lexington and Concord, in April, 1775, mustered at the "Warren Farm." The following are extracts from the deed of gift and the will of Major Thomas Hinchman in reference to this property:

Dated 1 January, 1699/1700. "I Thomas Hinchman of Chelmsford, for divers Causes and Considerations, me thereunto Moving, Especially for the good affection which I bare unto My Kinsman Joseph Warren, have given to the sd. Joseph Warren, his heirs and assigns forever, my house, now leased

In 1723 he was surveyor of highways; in 1726, tithingman, and in 1741-42-43, assessor and selectman. Living in the troublesome times of the Indian wars, he was active in protecting the town from the savages. In 1721 the strained relations between the colonists and the eastern Indians culminated in the fourth Indian war, commonly called the “Three Years’ War,” or “Lovewell’s War,” so named from John Lovewell, a well-known scout, whose occupation was bringing in to the settlement the so rash in his adventures that he fell into an ambush laid for him by the Indians, and was slain by them. These warlike Indians were incited to hostilities by the French rulers and the Jesuit priests, and their depredations of the outlying settlements on the English frontier made it necessary to organize snow-shoe companies in all the towns lying upon the Merrimac River. These companies were composed of "minute-men," equipped with snow-shoes, fire-arms, etc., and held themselves in readiness, at a moment's alarm, to go on scouting parties in pursuit of the Indians. Mr. Warren was a member of the Chelmsford company in 1724, under the command of Captain Robert Richardson.*

He married, 18 July, 1721/22, [15] Tabitha<sup>3</sup>, daughter of Benjamin and Sarah (Howard) Parker, of Chelmsford. (See Parker Lineage, page 67.)

He married, 15 April, 1752, [32] Joanna<sup>5</sup>, daughter of Josiah and Joanna (Spalding) Fletcher. (See Fletcher Lineage, page 54.) She died 3 March, 1763, and he married (2), 23 February, 1769, Sarah, daughter of Joseph and Sarah Osgood, of Billerica, born 31 January, 1749/50, died 7 October, 1815.

Children of Captain Joseph and Joanna (Fletcher) Warren, born at Chelmsford:

24. JOANNA WARREN<sup>6</sup>, born 6 April, 1753; married, 1777, John Spalding.
25. JEDUTHAN WARREN<sup>6</sup>, born 24 November, 1756.†
26. JEREMIAH WARREN<sup>6</sup>, born 23 February, 1763; died 20 September, 1810; married, 1 October, 1789, Rachel Spalding.

Child of Captain Joseph and Sarah (Osgood) Warren:

27. JOSEPH WARREN<sup>6</sup>, born 7 December, 1769; died 9 February, 1858; married, 27 February, 1794, Mary Spalding.

25. JEDUTHAN WARREN<sup>6</sup>, eldest son of Captain Joseph and Joanna (Fletcher) Warren, was born at Chelmsford, 24 November, 1756; died at Westminster, Massachusetts, 28 October, 1841. He was in active service in the Revolution, from 30 September, 1777, until 8 November, same year, as a volunteer in Captain Ford's company, in the regiment of Massachusetts militia under command of Colonel Jonathan Reed, which was engaged to reinforce the Northern army. About 1779 he removed to Westminster, where he occupied the lands previously purchased by his father, of which he eventually became the owner, and upon which he built the house, still standing, well known as the "Warren Farmstead." The house was occupied by members of the Warren family until the death of Mrs. Adeline Warren Bruce, in 1893. It is located in the Whitman River Valley, some distance out of the village on the North Common road, beyond the fork near Scrabble Hollow, and is still a spacious farm-house, with a thrifty farm about it.

In the summer of 1899 Mr. Forbush, an old gentleman living at Westminster, thus described Jeduthan Warren: "He was a fine old gentleman, and in my boyhood we were great friends. He had marked peculiarities. He would bathe in the creek through the severest winter weather. On Sundays I frequently saw him walking into town alongside of his horse. He always walked, and I think must have brought his horse because they were such good friends he did not want to leave it behind."

Mr. Warren and all of his children were raised in the strictest Calvinistic faith. He married, 22 July, 1779, [5] Joanna<sup>3</sup>, daughter of Simeon and Joanna (Thorndike) Moors, of Chelmsford. (See Moors Lineage, page 48.)

30. JESSE WARREN<sup>7</sup>, son of Jeduthan and Joanna (Moors) Warren, was born at Westminster, 23 January, 1784, and died at Fitchburg, Massachusetts, 18 June, 1854. His early life was spent in Westminster, where, after his marriage, he established himself in his business as an iron-worker. In 1809 he removed to West Dedham, Massachusetts, where he lived and carried on his trade on what was called "the street," until, in 1821, he moved to a large farm which he bought, a little out of the village, on Fox Hill, where he built a commodious house, with farm buildings and workshops, commanding a beautiful view of the Blue Hills and the Dedham Valley.* Here, in addition to farming, he carried on an extensive business in wrought-iron work, and in the manufacture of ploughs. Soon afterward ploughs first began to be made of cast iron, and he was one of the earliest makers, if not the inventor of the cast-iron plough, obtaining castings from his own patterns, at Alger's furnace in South Boston.† In August, 1829, he removed to Peru, Bennington County, Vermont, at the top of the pass over

Mount Bromley. The public road over the mountain, which was and has always been a turnpike, had just been moved half a mile or more down the mountain-side. At the very summit of the mountain pass was a tavern, "a stage tavern," barns, etc., very good buildings, which were left deserted on the old road. Mr. Warren, having bought the place, moved the house, called "Butterfield Tavern," down the mountain-side, over the stumps of the newly cleared ground and over huge boulders, and set it up on the new road. This was quite a remarkable engineering feat, though he was not a professional engineer. In the new location the house stood on the banks of a small stream, by which he built a plough-shop and foundry. During the time of moving the old house Mr. Warren lived in one he had built on the new road, which afterward became the home of Mr. Hiram King Messinger, his son-in-law.

In 1837 Mr. Warren removed to Springfield, Vermont, where, in company with his son Joseph, he bought a foundry, which was burned to the ground the following year, the insurance on the property having expired three days before the fire. He then built a foundry below the town, which was picturesquely situated on the river bank, and which is still standing. Here he manufactured, as he had done at Peru, agricultural implements, among which was the side-hill or swivel plough, of which he was the inventor; this is an indispensable implement for mountainous countries, and is now used in hill regions all over the United States and in foreign lands. The original drawings of this plough are in the possession of the present owner of the foundry, who states that there has been no improvement in the patent, and that ploughs marked "Jesse Warren" are still frequently brought to be repaired. He also invented and manufactured the cast-iron hub for wagon wheels.

IRON-FOUNDRY, SPRINGFIELD, VERMONT

In the winter of 1839/40, Mr. Warren moved to Keeseville, New York, and from thence, in 1841, to Brandon, Vermont. In 1844 he settled at Glens Falls, New York, where he remained until 1851, when, his sons desiring him to retire from business, he returned to the environments of his boyhood, and passed the last years of his life in Fitchburg, Massachusetts.

He married, at Westminster, 20 September, 1807, [49] Betsey<sup>r</sup>, daughter of Oliver and Mary (Peirce) Jackson, of that town. (See Jackson Lineage, page 132.) Their eldest child was born at Westminster, the two youngest at Peru, Vermont, and the others at Dedham, Massachusetts.

At the time of their marriage Mr. Messinger had been engaged in business for some years with Mr. Warren, under whom he had completed his education in the working of iron, which had been begun under his uncle, Mr. Jason Messinger, at Connecticut Corners, Dedham. A year after the Warren family removed to Peru, Vermont, Mr. and Mrs. Messinger also went there to live, and occupied the house formerly known as the "Butterfield Tavern,"* but later exchanged houses with Mr. Warren. In 1842 they moved into the village of Peru, removing the next year to the adjoining town of Winhall, and in 1845 to Fitchburg, Massachusetts, and from thence, in 1852, to Detroit, Michigan, residing, until their decease, at 124 Cass Street, which, for over forty years, was the home of this branch of the family. Mrs. Messinger was educated at the Young Ladies' Seminaries at Saugus and Framingham, Massachusetts. She was remarkable for her progressiveness and mental alertness, and even in her advanced years few were more in touch with the progress of the times or could more intelligently discuss the vital topics of the day; to those of the younger generation who had the good fortune to know her, the recollection of her personality was that of a woman of an especially discerning mind, and a Christian, true to her Puritan ancestors.

41. ELVIRA WARREN<sup>8</sup>, third daughter and fifth child of Jesse and Betsey (Jackson) Warren, was born at Dedham, Massachusetts, 10 February, 1817; died at Springfield, Vermont, April, 1891. She married, at Brandon, Vermont, in 1843, Aaron Bisbee, son of Elisha and Mary (Grant) Bisbee, born at Springfield, 21 January, 1815; died there, 14 September, 1882. Mrs. Bisbee was educated at the Young Ladies' Seminary in Westminster, Massachusetts, during which time she resided with her uncle, Mr. Jonas Cutting, the husband of [53] Elvira Jackson Cutting<sup>7</sup>. (See Jackson Lineage, page 132.) After their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Bisbee resided in Springfield, and there remained until 1849, when they removed to Buffalo, New York, where Mr. Bisbee had accepted a position in the firm of S. M. & C. M. Warren. In 1855 Mr. Bisbee took charge of the Warren Chemical Works at Hunter's Point, Long Island, and made his home at Ravenswood, a suburban district near Hunter's Point, the house itself overlooking Long Island Sound. He lived there until about 1880, when, upon retiring from business, he returned to Springfield, Vermont, and spent the last years of his life in a country place on the banks of the Black River. Mrs. Bisbee's declining years were spent in this beautiful home, every detail in the management of which she attended to with the energy and capacity which were the marked characteristics of her life, and here she was visited, from time to time, by her brothers and members of the younger generation of the family.

69. FREDERICK WARREN BISBEE<sup>9</sup>, born 1848; died at Ravenswood, 29 December, 1872.

42. JOHN WARREN<sup>8</sup>, third son and sixth child of Jesse and Betsey (Jackson) Warren, was born at Dedham, Massachusetts, 11 September, 1819; died at Lodi, Ohio, 18 October, 1889. During his boyhood he lived at Peru, Vermont, and upon the removal of the family to Springfield, in 1837, he became an assistant in the foundry and machine-shop of his father, and after the burning of his father's foundry he pursued this occupation at St. Johnsbury, Vermont, and Stanstead, Canada, until about 1841, when he obtained a position in a foundry at Wadsworth, Ohio, and shortly afterward established a foundry of his own in that place. In 1849 the gravel roofing business established by his brothers, Samuel and Cyrus, having become very extensive, he moved, at their request, to Buffalo, New York, to take charge of that Branch of the business. The brothers were also deeply interested in the development of coal-tar, and, after numerous experiments, the first distilling of coal-tar was done at their Buffalo works.* About 1861 they purchased oil lands near Oil City, Pennsylvania, and Mr. Warren left Buffalo to develop these lands. While there, he invented and put in operation the first pipe-line to convey oil from oil-wells to the shipping-point. This line ran from Plumer, over the mountain to the Alleghany River, and overcame the great difficulty formerly experienced in hauling oil by wagon over rough mountain-roads. Later, they sold their interest in the oil region, and established a large oil refinery at Hunter's Point, Long Island, which was operated in connection with the Warren Chemical Works. A few years later this refinery was destroyed by fire, and some time after rebuilding was sold to the Standard Oil Company. During these years Mr. Warren had a country place at Flushing, Long Island, where, in his leisure-hours, he interested himself in fancy farming and in the incubating of chickens, then an industry in its infancy. In 1872 he retired from business, and removed to a farm at Lodi, Ohio, that he might have an opportunity to work out his ideal of a model farm.

He married, at Springfield, Vermont, 6 December, 1839, Mary, daughter of Silas and Olive Cutler. She died at Omaha, Nebraska, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Wallace Drake, 16 October, 1897.

Davis :

" MILTON ROAD, BROOKLINE, MASSACHUSETTS,

" In 1837, the year that my father moved from Peru to Springfield, Vermont, I was apprenticed to a farmer, Stowell Barnard, of Peru, under a verbal agreement, that, in compensation for my services from the age of fifteen till I was twenty-one, I was to receive at the end of the time the sum of one hundred dollars and a suit of broadcloth clothes. I was also to attend the winter sessions of the common district school. Not having been myself much of a party to the agreement, and having had about enough of it at the end of a year's service, the prospect also not seeming to me a brilliant one, it is said to be recorded in an historical magazine published in Burlington, Vermont,—I think it was called the Vermont Historical Magazine,—that one day when I was digging potatoes, Abigail, one of the farmer's daughters, picking them up, I stopped, laid down my hoe, and said I would never dig another potato, and I believe I never did, except my own. I had forgotten the circumstance, but Abigail herself told me of it and of the publication of the anecdote, when I met her, toward the evening of her life and mine, some years ago. I very well remember her father's parting words to me when I left,—‘ Well, Mills, you'll rue it. When you are one-and-twenty you'll think of that hundred dollars and suit of broadcloth clothes.’ I presume I did think of them, and have thought of them many a time since, but I have never ‘rued it.’

“ Thus I began as a farmer, and perhaps shall end as a farmer, but I have been many other things than farmer between. Following the family to Springfield, about a year after the removal there, I arrived not long before the fire which destroyed the foundry and with it my father's books and all evidences of debts due him. He tried to recover by building another foundry about a mile below the village, chiefly with borrowed capital, I think. This he ran for a while,—how long I don't remember,—and then was obliged to give it up, and moved to Keeseville, New York, near the Ausable Chasm, where I and my brothers used often to go (then an almost unknown and unfrequented place). It was soon after the fire that I left home with a Mr. Perkins, of Perkinsville, near Springfield, to take a place in a retail shoe-store which he established on Fulton Street in Brooklyn, Long Island. A few months afterward I left this for a situation in New York, where I was taken ill of typhoid fever in 1840, and barely escaped with my life. During my severe illness my mother came to New York to nurse me. The family had not then left Springfield. As soon as I was well enough to be left, but still too weak to travel, my mother returned home. When I became strong enough for the journey I also returned home, making a visit to my relations in Westminister, Massachusetts, on the way.

“ It was almost immediately after my arrival at Springfield that my father's misfortunes culminated in the removal to Keeseville, where he had made an arrangement with Goulding & Peabody, a firm of iron-founders, for the manufacture of the castings for his patent ploughs, of which he himself made the woodwork and the wrought-iron work. His were undoubtedly the best ploughs that had yet been invented; and one of them, the side-hill plough, has come to be the only plough now used on the sloping fields in hilly and mountainous countries. I even saw them in Norway, a few years ago (in 1895). This plough was invented while my father lived in Peru; and I remember holding the candle for him while he was working on the patterns of it. Candles and whale-oil lamps were the only lights then in use. Your cousin, Henry Jackson Warren, told me that when some of his father's effects were sold, at West Newton, after his death, among a lot of old odds and ends was one of these ploughs, of my father's make, with the brand 'JESSE WARREN, PATENT.' Nothing was thought about it at the time, but it was remembered afterward when too late. What would your father be willing to pay for that old plough to-day? It ought to be in some museum. There are many things less interesting in such collections. As things are to-day, with the competition of level countries, mountainous and hilly countries could not be cultivated at all without the side-hill plough. Perhaps some time, when your father is in Washington, he might be able to discover his father's old model of the side-hill plough among the vast collection at the Patent Office.

The Warren Family

"But to take up again the thread of my narrative. Up to the time of my illness in New York I had not given much, if any, serious thought to the future, but had simply been content to live on, to get a living, with such enjoyment out of life as I could; but during my convalescence I was led to reflect upon my want of definite purpose, and that I ought to have some aim and plan of life. Some circumstances, to which I need not refer, had led me to think I might have some talent for public speaking; and the legal profession offering a fine field for the exercise of such a talent, I decided to work my way up to the bar. But first, I thought I ought to obtain a good collegiate education. With that view, after having been a short time clerk in the post-office at Keeseville,—in the mean time brushing up my somewhat rusty common school attainments,—I applied for and obtained an appointment as teacher of one of the district schools near Keeseville; and while teaching, I used to work evenings, and before daylight in the morning, at my Latin and other branches that would help me on toward my goal. At the same time I somehow found opportunity to read some excellent solid books, from out the district library; for at that time the State of New York provided a very good though small library for every school district in the State.

"With the small money I earned by teaching I went for several terms to the Keeseville Academy, one of the teachers in which, and my tutor in Latin, was Mr. I. N. Gregory, who afterward became a New Churchman, and whom your father must have known. I had a copy of Virgil, with Latin notes, which I bought of Mr. Gregory at that time. I don't know what has become of it; but I would give a trifle for it to-day. While at Keeseville Academy, or, rather, between the terms of study there, I taught school for a considerable length of time—I don't remember how long—at Union Village, a wealthy and intelligent Quaker settlement a few miles from Keeseville, and thus lived for a while among the Quakers. Your Uncle Cyrus also taught school in neighboring districts, and attended the Keeseville Academy at the same time that I did. He was also for a time clerk in one of the stores at Keeseville; and there one of his familiar companions was 'Joe Gary,'—now Judge Gary, of Chicago, the judge who at the risk of his life presided at the trial of the Anarchists there, some years ago. I knew 'Joe Gary,' and remember him well, but was not so familiarly acquainted with him as my brother Cyrus was. 'Joe' was also at that time clerk in one of the stores in Keeseville. When my father—not doing well with Goulding & Peabody—moved to Brandon, Vermont (or soon after), there being an academy there, I also followed and attended the academy. My brother Cyrus was a student at this academy at the same time. I attended the school in the winter, and hired out at farm work, haying, etc., to neighboring farmers in the summer. In that way I struggled to support myself in my course of study.

“Up to that time it was my purpose to push right on into and through college as rapidly as I could, but one of my tutors at the Brandon seminary, which had the high-sounding title 'The Vermont Literary and Scientific Institute,' the Reverend William G. Brown, an Abolitionist poet of some local distinction, who took a good deal of kindly interest in my ambitious purpose, advised me not to go to college until I had gone out into the world and made some money to start with. He said if I pushed through college as I proposed, I would certainly come out more or less in debt, and then would have another period of struggle to get through with my course of law study; and then, to begin the practice of the profession, I should need books, all of which would get me more in debt. Then he said I should find myself in such straits that I would be compelled to do the 'dirty work' of the profession in order to get a living. This reasoning appeared sensible to me, and I acted on his advice. I first opened a small 'Academy' in Bennington, Vermont. But I only had a few pupils, and the prospect of money making was not promising. While I was in this doubtful position there came along the agent, or proprietor, I forget which, of an excellent system of graduated penmanship, which he wanted to introduce into my school. He appeared to see that I was not flourishing, and invited me to call and see him in the evening at his hotel. This I did, and he made me a tempting offer of an agency for the introduction of his system into the schools of some of the northern counties of New York State.

“I closed my 'Academy' as soon as I well could, bought a horse and sleigh, and started off on my agency, in Saratoga County, in the dead of winter, the winter schools being yet in session. It would have been a profitable thing for me if only I could make it go. But I soon found that the introduction of school-books did not then, any more than it does now, depend so much on their merits as on the 'pull' that publishers are able to get on school committees and other school authorities. And so they didn't go; and I was at sea, ready to try anything that seemed to offer me an opportunity to make an honest dollar; for it was a guiding and governing principle with me to have no money that I could not get honestly. But I found that my friend's advice, to 'go out into the world first, and make some money,' was a good deal easier said than done. It was easy enough to 'go out into the world,' but to make money was quite another thing. Well, I tried quite a number of things to make money by, and when they didn't succeed I dropped them; and I got the name of being unsteady,—a rolling stone that would gather no moss. But I held to my purpose,—to get hold of something by which I could get money to pay my way through college and into the legal profession. I met very kind friends here and there, and much encouragement. But sometimes I found myself in sore straits. Once, for example, I went the distance from Philadelphia to Albany, New York, where I had promise of something to do,—at a time when it took longer to make the journey than it does now,—without tasting food, because it took all the money I had to pay fares and a cheap lodging in New York, and I hadn't a penny to buy food with. This, however, was only an incident.

“Not long after, in 1844 or 1845, I found a man putting on roofs in Newark, New Jersey, with square sheets of ship sheathing paper and a mixture of pine-tar and pine-pitch, covered with sand. It was becoming quite a popular cheap roof in Newark. It struck me that I might do something with this. The man, whose name was Bacon, called it 'Bacon's Patent Composition Roofing.' I called on the man and made arrangements with him to buy his patent for the State of Massachusetts, paying him by royalty,—so much on each square of roofing; and I went to work with him to learn the trade. In the mean time I wrote a letter of inquiry to the Patent Office, and learned in reply that there was no patent on the thing. I also found that Bacon was not the inventor of it; that some roofs of the kind had been put on in Boston many years before, and he had picked it up from there. I said nothing of this to Bacon, but kept on working for him until I felt that I knew the trade. Just at this time Mr. Nicholas Longworth, an enterprising and wealthy citizen of Cincinnati, who while visiting relations in Newark had seen and was taken with the roof, wrote to a nephew in Newark, asking him to find and send him a young man of good character, well acquainted with the new roofing, to put it on in Cincinnati, and offering to find the necessary capital to start with, and to use his personal influence in its favor. By some inquiry Mr. Longworth's nephew, Mr. Marcus Ward, was led to offer this opportunity to me. This was the beginning of the roofing business which gave us all a start in the world. Soon after my first start in Cincinnati (in 1845) I wrote to my brother Cyrus, who was working in father's plough-shop at Glens Falls, to come and help me in Cincinnati. This led, after some months, to a partnership between us, under the firm-name of S. M. & C. M. Warren. But my goal was still the legal profession, and one of the conditions of the partnership was, that as soon as the business would admit of it, I was to be at liberty to leave the business in his hands, retaining my interest in it, and go on with my studies. This I did, in the office of Storer & Gwynne, Cincinnati.

“Improvements were made on the roof from time to time. First, in 1847, coal-tar—then a refuse of the gas-works, which they were glad to give away to anybody who would take it off their premises—was tried, as a substitute for pine-tar, to soften the pitch with and for saturating the paper. This worked well and was a great economy. Then it was found that a fine gravel was better than sand for an outer covering of the roofs. After this, paper or felt in rolls (continuous sheets) was substituted for the square sheets of ship sheathing paper,—a very great improvement,—which involved the invention of machines for saturating the rolls of felt with tar. The square sheathing paper had to be dipped into the tar by hand, sheet by sheet, and then the excess of tar pressed out of it. Finally, at our branch in Buffalo, we began to distil coal-tar down to the right consistency for a roofing pitch, and substitute this, as a roofing cement, for the more expensive mixture of pine-pitch and tar which we had been using. This was the first utilization of the waste product, coal-tar, on any considerable scale in this country, if not in the world. Gradually uses were found for the volatile products distilled from the tar, and thus arose the great coal-tar distilling industry in this country. This briefly was the origin and is the history of the ‘gravel roof’ which forms so extensive and important an industry, now in a multitude of hands, all over the country.

“The Mr. Storer of the firm with which I began the study of law was Belamy Storer, afterward Judge Storer, whose son, then a little boy, is now United States minister at the Belgian court. After a term of study in their office I entered the Law School at Harvard University, in 1847. At the close of my term of study there, I returned to Cincinnati and completed my legal study at the Cincinnati Law School, and was admitted to the bar. But I never practised. You will see that I had given up the plan of going through college before studying for the bar. About this time the discovery of gold was made in California, and the gold fever ran high in Cincinnati. It found me in a very unsettled state of mind, and a susceptible subject for it; for I had become interested in the doctrines of the New Church, and they had taught me, what I had never seen nor suspected before, that the motive which had governed me and pushed me on all these years, mere personal ambition, was a selfish and evil motive. I had not looked upon the legal profession as a sphere of usefulness, in which I could perform public service for the good of others; and I could not all at once feel my old interest in the profession with the motive under condemnation which had led me to it. Under these circumstances I caught the gold fever, not so much for the love of gold as from the love of adventure, which most young men have, and as a relief from my then state of unsettled purpose. The arrangement I made with your Uncle Cyrus was, that I was still to retain my interest in the business in Cincinnati, and he was to share equally in any good fortune I might have in California. I joined a number of my acquaintances in forming a company to cross the great plains and mine for gold in California. The outfit for the company and my personal outfit were complete, even to the saddle for a mule. But I had many good friends in Cincinnati—in the New Church and out of it—who pleaded strongly with me against my adventure; and finally, just as the company were on the eve of departure, I yielded to their earnest persuasions and gave up the project. The company went without me. I have always looked back upon this incident as a remarkable intervention of Providence. The company never got to California. The flood of adventurers over the plains that year was so great that the grass along the river valleys—where only there was grass, for vast distances—was all consumed, and there was absolutely nothing for the animals to feed upon. The poor beasts were therefore left to starve, as they became too weak for use; and leaving all their outfit except such stores of food, etc., as they could carry on their backs, the members of the company went their way on foot, until they also were exhausted, and laid them down, one by one, to die in the desert, as their animals had before them. Only two or three of the company, so far as I ever heard, reached California. Such was the fate of great numbers who set out to cross the plains that year. Among the articles which composed the company's outfit was a press and dies for stamping gold in the form of coin, which it was thought would be a convenient form for their precious metal. I had something to do with getting up the devices which were engraved on the dies. It is a curious fact that these dies did get to California, and I saw a coin that had been stamped with them, with a liberty cap on one side.

“Not long after this escape, I decided to give up the law and study for the New Church ministry. I began to study with Dr. N. C. Burnham, to whom I feel greatly indebted as a most excellent tutor. In 1850 Dr. Burnham moved with his family to Peoria, Illinois, and I went with them to continue my study for the ministry. He was pastor of the New Church Society in Peoria, and at the same time practised as a homœopathic physician. I continued with him there until, in 1852, they moved to Philadelphia; and with the same purpose I followed them there. Soon after arriving in Philadelphia I began to preach, under license, to the society that then existed in Darby, near Philadelphia. It was there that I preached my first sermon. For a considerable time I had been becoming more and more a victim of dyspepsia, and was so great a sufferer from it that I felt compelled to make some change in my manner of life. Just then I became acquainted with a young relative of Dr. Burnham, by the name of Fisk, who had lately been making the tour of Europe on foot, after the manner of Bayard Taylor, and also I read Taylor's 'Views Afoot.' Fisk's conversation and Taylor's book together convinced me that this would be the thing for me,—would give me just the rough experience that my health required, and at the same time be mentally improving. I accordingly planned such a tour, including a period of study at one of the German Universities, to partly make up for my want of college training. I wrote to my brother Cyrus, informing him of my plan and purpose; and he replied, trying to dissuade me from it. One of his chief reasons against it, and apparently one of the best, was that I was getting old enough to think of marrying and settling down in life; that it was not at all likely I should meet anybody abroad whom I should wish to marry, and, at least, I ought not to put myself out of the way of it. He had himself been happily married about three or four years. I wrote him that I did not think such a thing would best come about by seeking; that I thought the proper thing for a man to do was to keep right on with his purpose in life, according to his best judgment, and Providence would bring such an event to pass, perhaps when least expected. I had as little belief that I should meet with anybody abroad whom I should marry as he had.

“ Well, I sailed for England about the 1st of May, 1853, and had not been a fortnight in the old country before I met my wife,—a better wife than whom no man ever had. The circumstances were so remarkable that I have never felt a doubt that Divine Providence directed my steps across the Atlantic to find the wife designed for me. My marriage to her has been the great blessing of my life. But this unexpected turn in my fortunes changed my whole programme. I did, however, have a delightful tour, partly on foot, in Switzerland only, in the summer of 1853, and spent some time in scientific study at the Owens College, Manchester, England. But in 1854 I returned to the United States to make some preparation for my marriage; and was married to Sarah Anne Broadfield, at Manchester, England, on the 12th of May, 1855.

For several years I lived in Manchester; afterwards in London, ministering to the Cross Street (now 'Camden Road') Society of the New Church there, and at intervals made several long visits to my own country. In 1864 I became minister of the society in Brookline, Massachusetts, living at Hillside, Roxbury, which was near to Brookline. In the spring of 1865 I bought the place at Hillside, which has been my home—save a number of years sojourn in Europe—ever since until the spring of 1898, when I sold it, and bought a farm, for summer residence, in Dorset, Vermont.

44. CYRUS MOORS WARREN, S.B.<sup>8</sup>, fifth son and eighth child of Jesse and Betsey (Jackson) Warren, was born at Fox Hill, West Dedham, Massachusetts, 15 January, 1824; died at Manchester, Vermont, 13 August, 1891. A memorial of his life, written by Professor F. H. Storer, of Boston Institute of Technology, is published in the Proceedings of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, Volume XXVII. Professor Storer, after stating that Mr. Warren was a remarkably well-defined example of a type of the American character, in his "boldness, readiness, persistency, intelligence, and unusual aptitude for business," gives a somewhat minute and extended account of his life, from which these facts are gleaned:

"Not having been pecuniarily very successful at Dedham, the elder Warren bought a farm at Peru, Vermont, in the very heart of the forests of the Green Mountains, when the boy Cyrus was five years old. The wilderness of the place may be conceived of from the facts that one night wolves killed a number of sheep in a field close to the house, and that trunks of sweet apple trees in the orchard were scratched by the claws of bears which came to gather fruit.

In doing so they left marks which made an abiding impression on the heart and the mind of the boy. When he was thirteen years old his father moved to Springfield, Vermont. Cyrus, as he grew older, together with his next older brother, Samuel M. Warren, became ambitious of obtaining a more liberal education, their education having been gained in such schools as the locality and the State could offer, and for a number of years they supported themselves as best they could, taught schools in the winters and worked in hay-fields during the summer vacations, pursuing their studies early in the morning and late at night, until the elder brother conceived the idea of improving the process of covering roofs with tarred sheathing, which was then struggling into existence. Samuel established works to this end at Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1846, and in the course of the next year asked his brother Cyrus to join him. The business succeeded so well that Samuel soon entered a lawyer's office at Cincinnati, and afterward studied at the Dane Law School in Cambridge, and was graduated from the Cincinnati Law School. Cyrus remained meanwhile in Cincinnati, and he was married there, in 1849, to Miss Lydia Ross. Other brothers had been called in to help carry on the roofing business, and in due course Cyrus, in his turn, found the purposed opportunity to devote himself wholly to study. He moved to Cambridge with his family in 1852, and entered the Lawrence Scientific School in the departments of Zoology and Chemistry. His first meeting with Agassiz at this time was an important event in his life. Agassiz quickly recognized the native force of the man, and sympathized with his thirst for knowledge. He took the degree S.B. with high distinction in 1855,* and immediately after graduation was elected an honorary member of the Phi Beta Kappa, on nomination of Benjamin Pierce, seconded by Louis Agassiz, being the first graduate of the Lawrence Scientific School to whom this honor was accorded.

“ Soon after, Warren took his family to Europe, studying first at Paris, then at Heidelberg under Bunsen, at Freiberg in Saxony, at Munich under Liebig, at Berlin under Heinrich Rose, and subsequently in London.

“ The brothers Warren had used originally for their roofing purposes the pitch of pine-tar; but the great business success of the firm seems to have depended largely upon their having turned their attention to the coal-tar of gas-works at a time when this material was absolutely without commercial value. Thus it happened, long before any one had suspected that various

* In a letter of congratulation upon the success of the Lawrence Scientific School, written by Professor Pierce to the Hon. Abbott Lawrence, and published in the Boston Advertiser at the time of the graduation of the class of which Mr. Warren was a member, occurs the following :

“ If it were known that one of the students—his name was Warren—offered an original research to the criticism of the Faculty, which was received with unqualified approbation on account of the results and methods of investigation, and in which he succeeded in detecting agents which had escaped the scrutiny of some of the eminent chemists of Europe, would not men open their eyes?”

substances obtainable from coal-tar would ultimately be put to highly important uses in the arts, that the Warrens got control of all the tar produced in New York City and in several other of the larger cities of this country. Hence, when the aniline dyes came into use, and a great demand arose for those portions of coal-tar naphtha, from which these dyes were made, the Warrens were peculiarly favorably situated for producing the naphtha, and gained large profits by selling it.

“Cyrus turned his attention to the question how best to obtain these volatile products. His process of ‘fractional condensation,’ as published in 1864, in the ‘Memoirs of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences,’ was widely copied in scientific journals, and an expert travelling in Europe in 1870 found the process in common use there in the distilleries of tar. In some instances the managers of these works knew they were using Warren’s invention, while others professed ignorance as to its origin.

“One important result of these researches was the wholly unlooked-for discovery that the more volatile portions of Pennsylvania petroleum contained two distinct series of hydrocarbons, the members of the two series boiling at intermediate points, and the complete separation of them had been as good as impossible before the invention of Warren’s method of fractioning. His discovery was seen to be true the moment attention was called to it. Fortunately an elaborate statement of these results was found among Warren’s papers after his death.

“From 1863 to 1866 he had in Boston a thoroughly well equipped private laboratory, in which he gave himself up wholly to research; when he moved from Boston to Brookline he established another private laboratory there. He was appointed to the professorship of Organic Chemistry at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, but resigned after a year or two, as it consumed too much of his time.

“In the course of time, when their contracts for coal-tar had lapsed and competition between the distillers of tar became sharp, the Warrens turned their energies more particularly to the asphaltum of Trinidad, and to the rectification of the crude pitch as taken from the lake. The product obtained, and known as refined asphalt, is used for electrical purposes, as well as for paving and for roofing. In the carrying out of these changes Cyrus Warren took a lively interest and gave valuable aid, but it was characteristic of the man that during all the long period of business strain his mind was full of scientific interests and ideas. The burden upon him was much increased in 1880 by the death of his brother Herbert M. Warren, who was lost on the ‘Narragansett’ in Long Island Sound. In 1888, when much enfeebled physically by overwork, he had a paralytic stroke from which he never recovered.

Two winters passed at Nassau and a couple of summers spent in absolute rest in the Adirondacks and in Vermont failed to restore him, and he died quietly in the summer of 1891."

In recognition of his many years of pleasant association with Harvard University and the American Academy of Arts and Sciences of Boston, he left them each legacies to be used for the promotion of chemical research or the advancement of chemical science.

Mr. Warren married, at Cincinnati, Ohio, 12 September, 1849, Lydia, daughter of Ogden and Lydia (Ludlow) Ross, born at Cincinnati, 31 January, 1826. Mrs. Warren continues to reside at "Walnut Place," Brookline.

Massachusetts, 16 January, 1827; died 11 June, 1880. His childhood was spent at Peru, Vermont, where he remained with his sister and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Ballard, during the years that the remainder of the family lived in Springfield. He was educated at the "Vermont Literary and Scientific Institute," at Brandon, and after the removal of his father to Glens Falls, New York, he attended the Academy at that place. Upon completing the course of study at the Academy, he entered his father's plough manufactory at Glens Falls, and was employed there until about 1848, when he accepted a position in the gravel-roofing business of his brothers, S. M. & C. M. Warren, at Cincinnati, Ohio. About 1849, with the aid of his brother Cyrus, he established a branch of the business at St. Louis, Missouri, which continued in his name many years after he had ceased to be actively engaged in it. In 1853 he and Dr. N. C. Burnham, of St. Louis, entered upon the same business at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, where, two years later, E. Burgess Warren purchased Dr. Burnham's interest in the firm, and afterward that of his brother, Herbert Marshall Warren. The latter, about this time, removed to Brooklyn, New York, to take charge of the "Warren Chemical Manufacturing Company," which had come into existence through the experiments of the elder Warren brothers in coal-tar products. He resided in Brooklyn from 1856 until 1859, when he removed to Astoria, Long Island, and from thence, in 1862, to West Newton, Massachusetts, where he purchased a country place, which is still the homestead of his branch of the Warren family. The house had been built and occupied by Horace Mann, and it was here that Hawthorne lived at the time he wrote "The Blithedale Romance."

Mr. Warren continued his business interests at New York, and in 1866 temporarily removed to Jamaica, Long Island, but returned to his residence in West Newton in 1869. From this home he journeyed back and forth to New York as his business interests required, and on the night of 11 June, 1880, was a passenger on the ill-fated steamer "Narragansett," which, after colliding on Long Island Sound with the "Stonington," burned and sank, Mr. Warren being among those who were lost.

Mr. Warren was the first of his family to become interested in the doctrines of the Church of the New Jerusalem. He was a man of the loftiest motives, and of unblemished life, and the recollection of his personality has proved one of the most valuable inheritances of his children.

He married, at St. Louis, Missouri, 26 November, 1850, Eliza Caroline, daughter of James * and Caroline (Bigwood) Copp, born at Bath, England, 14 December, 1828; died at West Newton, Massachusetts, 29 March, 1879.

* James Copp was born at Exmouth, Devonshire, England, 10 March, 1803, and married at Bath, England, 12 January, 1824, Caroline Bigwood, of Swansea, Wales.

47. EBENEZER BURGESS WARREN<sup>8</sup>, seventh son and eleventh child of Jesse and Betsey (Jackson) Warren, was born 18 April, 1833, at Peru, Vermont, a town on the top of Mount Bromley, in the Green Mountains, whither his parents had moved from West Dedham, Massachusetts. He received his early education at Brandon, Vermont, and at the Glens Falls Academy, Glens Falls, New York.

Like his elder brothers, he much desired a higher education, but it was not until 1850 that, after filling several positions of trust in Cincinnati and Louisville for his brothers Samuel and Cyrus, he was enabled, through their co-operation, to attend Burr Seminary, at Manchester, Vermont, and afterward, in 1852, Harvard College, where he took a special course in chemistry under Professor Horsford.

Upon leaving Cambridge he lived in Baltimore, Maryland, until February, 1855, when he removed to Philadelphia to engage in business with his brother Herbert Marshall Warren, and four years later formed the firm of Warren, Kirk & Co. in that city, which has since been his home.

In 1865 Mr. Warren established a manufactory of hydrocarbons in Washington, D. C., and was one of the first to refine Trinidad Lake asphalt for paving purposes, and was interested in laying the first successful asphalt paving, which was laid and generally adopted in Washington, but has since been the principal paving material of the large cities of the United States.

In 1866, foreseeing that the section of Walnut and Spruce Streets west of Twentieth Street, in Philadelphia, would become the most desirable in the city for residences, he purchased real estate on Spruce Street above Nineteenth Street, and also west of Twentieth and Twenty-first Streets, and erected costly dwellings upon all this land, some of which had been given over to a most objectionable, even disreputable settlement of people, known as the "Schuylkill Rangers," which were a menace to the neighborhood. Four years later he purchased many vacant lots on Walnut Street west from Nineteenth to Twenty-second Streets, building also upon these, dwellings of greater value than any which have been built for sale in the city up to the present time. These dwellings numbered more than forty, and their total value was about two millions of dollars. This undertaking was considered at the time an enormous venture for a man of only thirty-two years, but the results have shown the wisdom of his foresight.

The constructive ability which was also thus demonstrated has made Mr. Warren sought for upon building committees in many charities. He was especially active in the building of the Hayes Mechanics' Home, the Hahne-mann College and Hospital, and the Church of the New Jerusalem, Twenty-second and Chestnut Streets, of which building he was one of the original projectors.

Mr. Warren was educated as a Congregationalist, in the old-fashioned strictness of New England, and was named for his father's pastor at Dedham, the Reverend Ebenezer Burgess. He became interested, however, in the writings of Swedenborg and the doctrines of the New Church, through his brothers, who had already become members of that Church, and he himself became a member in Baltimore, Maryland, in 1853, and has since given his aid and encouragement freely to many churches of the organization besides that to which he was personally allied.

Mr. Warren is perhaps most widely known as an art connoisseur and collector. His interest in art began with his first leisure moments, about 1873, and he has since then aided art in all its branches in Philadelphia, through personal encouragement, and in his numerous official positions. The following, in relation to his collection of pictures, is quoted from notes made by a well-known art critic for an article requested by the International Studio, London:

"Mr. E. Burgess Warren has gathered a most interesting collection of modern pictures; in fact, has made his selection with fresh judgment and a criterion of actual preference.

"Mr. Warren has had his opinions many years, so many, by the way, that he has seen the art estimate change until the pictures he first admired are now considered among the most admirable of art treasures. He has a perfect art history of Corot in examples of his work from the beginning of his career. He has mile-posts of Millet on the long road that artist pursued from obscurity to fame, and of Daubigny from the searching after technic to the unconscious mastery of it; and the same may be said of his Rousseaus. He has the art lover's collection, the pictures that convey the personal note.

“ Mr. Warren's collection numbers over eighty pictures, the most of them a synthetic study of the Barbizon painters; around which are grouped the correlative examples of the period preceding this school and the more recent art that has sought to break away, yet nevertheless has really emanated from it. Of this latter, there are examples of Jacque, Dagnan-Bouveret, Cazin, de Neuville, Lhermitte, Isabey, and others, but the Barbizon remains both the nucleus and the accomplishment. Mr.

Warren has had no academic training as an art critic; he has never attended art lectures nor gone into it except in a detached way, and his higher education at Harvard was devoted to chemistry and scientific investigation. Since then he has pursued the life of a business man. But the main-spring of his love for art was native, and it was widened by his love for nature when he was a boy in the Green Mountains of Vermont. From that closeness to nature has come the love of nature in art; so it is that the great painters of the Oise have been the most attractive to him, penetrated as their works are with beauty and full of the spirit of dedication.

“ In a social conversation Mr. Warren gave the history of his collection. With the first idea of it in mind, it was decided that the pictures were to be bought solely as a matter of pleasure to himself and to his family. It was agreed that the pictures were to be of such character as would make them personally desirable; they were to be beautiful in art and tendency and altogether representative of the labor of love they really sought to be. That was the beginning; but while holding to those tenets, it quickly resolved itself into an education of a peculiar and wonderful phase of art, its significance as a collection lying in the pictorial history of the Barbizon school, with the art events that led up to it, and the gradual departure from it to the days of Raffaelli. The development of the school he has traced through Moreland, Constable, and Gainsborough, in England, and through Michel, in France, to the Barbizon painters, and has collected enough of these old masters to show the breaking away from the classic school.

“ The Barbizon was to be the heart of the collection, and while he did not oftentimes possess the most noted pictures of each individual artist, he had carefully chosen such pictures as represented the different periods of his development; as an instance of this, a little Millet may be cited, of the period when the painter very highly finished his work. This painting was said by François Millet to be the most excellent example that he had seen of the time when his father went so carefully into detail. Taking all this into consideration, Mr. Warren's collection as it stands, for a critical estimate of the Barbizon school, can safely be said to be the best in America and one of the very best extant. But, valuable as each picture must be, one never hears them rated in a commercial sense. The art is paramount."

Mr. Warren has been a director of the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts twenty-four years; vice-president of the Art Club, 1898 and 1899, having also been one of the incorporating members. A member of the Union League for many years, he was a director in 1900 and 1901, is at present chairman of the Art Committee, and is one of the Committee on Works of Art of the trustees of the Fairmount Park Art Association. He was at one time president of the Hayes Mechanics' Home, and has been for many years a manager of the Hahnemann Hospital, of which he was elected vice-president in 1901. He was one of the original members of the Genealogical Society of Pennsylvania, and member of the Philobiblion Society, the Sons of the Revolution, the New England Society of Philadelphia, having served as vice-president 1899 and 1900, a member of the Philadelphia Country Club, the New York Yacht Club, and the Ardsley Club upon Hudson. Since 1867 Mr. Warren's winter home has been in one of the houses which he built on Spruce Street, and since 1875 he has made his summer residence at Lake George, where in 1882 he built his cottage "Wapanak" on Green Island.

He married, at Philadelphia, 21 January, 1858, Emma Bolton, daughter of James Murray and Mary Elizabeth (English) Bolton, whose families were among the original Friends in the settlement of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and of Burlington County, New Jersey. She was born 7 August, 1837, at her father's country home on the Schuylkill River, near the present Fairmount Water Works.

LIEUTENANT JOSEPH MOORS<sup>1,*</sup> who was born 4 February, 1704, died at Chelmsford, Massachusetts, 5 July, 1775, where he was resident as early as 1726, at which time he is recorded as having purchased land in that town. In 1731 he bought land on the Concord River Neck, to establish a saw-mill, to which property he afterward added nine acres. His house and farm, however, were in the town of Chelmsford, forty acres of which estate he purchased in 1749. During the French and Indian War Mr. Moors served at Quebec, in 1759, as private in Captain Parker's regiment.† It is probable that he was at that time appointed lieutenant, which rank he held at the time of his death. He certainly bore the title in 1771 when "Captain Ebenezer Parker and Lieutenant Joseph Moors were pall-bearers at the funeral of Lieutenant Benjamin Parker."‡ In 1746/47 he was assessor and Selectman, and in 1753 and 1755 surveyor of boards and timbers. He married, 21 June, 1731, [13] Esther<sup>4</sup>, daughter of Nathaniel, Jr., and Sarah (Fletcher) Butterfield, of Chelmsford. (See Butterfield Lineage, page 79.)

2. SIMEON MOORS<sup>2</sup>, only child of Lieutenant Joseph and Esther (Butterfield) Moors, was born at Chelmsford, 6 December, 1732, where he continued to reside until his death, 19 December, 1781. He was one of the wealthiest citizens of Chelmsford and among its largest landowners; the letters of administration of this large estate are on file at the Middlesex County Registry of Wills, East Cambridge, Massachusetts. He married, at Tewks-

* Many emigrants bearing the name of Moor, Morse, or Moors came to America, and were probably not of the same family, from the fact that the descendants of the respective founders of families in certain towns have persistently followed distinct forms of spelling, as for example, Jonathan Mors, of Plymouth; Abraham Moors, of Groton; John More, of Sudbury; and Joseph Moors, of Chelmsford. Persistent search among the town, county, and probate records of the vicinities indicated above and among the descendants of the respective heads, has thus far failed to show any family connection between the emigrants or to discover the parentage of Joseph Moors, of Chelmsford, and extensive correspondence with those interested in the various Moor emigrations has corroborated this statement.

Mr. Ezra Stearns, whose study of the name has covered the descendants of twelve or more emigrants, says, "It may prove that Joseph Moors, of Chelmsford, was of Scotch-Irish extraction. He appears on the American stage at the right time to be included in the great number of Scotch-Irish people who came to America about 1720. At this time there were Scotch-Irish families in Chelmsford and Groton. Many of the emigrants of Scotch extraction spelled the name Moors.

THE patronym Fletcher was originally "Fledger," and was the name given to the trade of arrow-making; or, as some think, of affixing the feather upon the arrow,—“fledging it.” (Fletcher Genealogy.)

1. ROBERT FLETCHER<sup>1</sup> * was born in England, circa 1592, and died at Concord, Massachusetts, 3 April, 1677. He emigrated to America in 1630, from Yorkshire, England, according to accounts gathered when his great-grandchildren were still living. He settled at Concord, which town was incorporated five years after his arrival, his name being on its earliest records. He became a wealthy and influential citizen, and was much interested in the development of Concord. The court files of Middlesex County contain frequent mention of his name as jurymen, petitioner for bridges, and for other public improvements. The name of his wife is unknown.

He came to Massachusetts with his father in 1630, and 10 May, 1643, was admitted a freeman in that colony, at which time he was a resident of Concord. In 1653 he signed the petition to the General Court which led to the founding of Chelmsford, whither he removed, becoming one of the original proprietors of the town and one of its most prominent citizens. “The first publick meeting was holden at his house, 22 November, 1654,” at which time he was chosen one of the Selectmen, and held the office many years. In 1673 he was one of the Commissioners for Chelmsford. He was ensign in the Chelmsford militia, and was appointed, 15 February, 1676, a member of the committee commissioned to request aid from the General Court, because of the alarming condition of the settlers from Indian depredations. In addition to being one of the most useful citizens of the town, Mr. Fletcher was a large landowner, his tract extending from Chelmsford to the Merrimac River, including what is now a part of the city of Lowell. The estate, including that portion upon which the old house stood where the first public meeting was held, is still owned by the family, being in the possession of Mr. William Fletcher, the fourth of the name in direct succession, and the eleventh generation from the original proprietor. He married, at Concord, 7 October, 1645, Lydia Bates, sister of John Bates, of that town. She died 12 October, 1704.

ACCORDING to tradition, the founder of the Thorndike family in England was from Germany, or the Low Countries, and introduced there a system of dikes of thorn hedges, thus obtaining the name Thorndike.* This is one of the few American families who have a clearly established right to bear arms.

1. WILLIAM THORNDIKE<sup>1</sup> was born in the reign of Henry VII., probably in 1470, and lived in Little Carlton, Lincolnshire, England. He married at Little Carlton, and remained there until his death in 1539. He had sons Herbert, William, and John, and three daughters.

2. HERBERT THORNDIKE<sup>2</sup>, eldest son of William Thorndike, was lord of the manor of Little Carlton, where he died in 1554. His wife Janet died there in 1559. They had, born at Little Carlton, sons Nicholas, Richard, George, Herbert, James, and five daughters.

3. NICHOLAS THORNDIKE<sup>3</sup>, eldest son of Herbert and Janet Thorndike, was born at Little Carlton; removed to Great Carlton, and afterward to Greenfield, where he died 12 June, 1596. His sons, Francis and Herbert, signed for the first visitation of the Heralds recorded in the family, in 1634. He married Frances Southey, and had sons and daughters, the eldest son being Francis.

4. FRANCIS THORNDIKE<sup>4</sup>, eldest son of Nicholas and Frances (Southey) Thorndike, was baptized at Great Carlton, 6 January, 1570, and died at Burwell, Lincolnshire, where he was buried 1 January, 1623. He married Alice, daughter of Edward Coleman, of Wallingford, County Suffolk, England. They had sons Francis, John, Herbert, and Paul. "Herbert was prebendary of the College at the Church of St. Peters, Westminster Abbey, and was one of the most profound and distinguished scholars in England during his life, as his numerous works, not long since republished, testify." †

5. JOHN THORNDIKE<sup>5</sup>, second son of Francis and Alice (Coleman) Thorndike, was born at Great Carlton, Lincolnshire, England, where he was baptized, 23 July, 1603.* He died in London, and was buried in the East Cloister of Westminster Abbey, 3 November, 1668. He came to America in 1629, sailing from Ipswich, England, to the Massachusetts Bay Colony. In 1633 he was one of the twelve men who, with Governor Winthrop's son, John Winthrop, Jr., settled Ipswich, Massachusetts. He was a man of high social position, and from the first was accorded the title of "Mister." In March, 1636, he released the land he owned at "Brooksby," afterward South Danvers, and received, in place of the same, a grant at Salem. The following year he received an additional grant of one hundred and eighty-five acres,† located in that part of Salem which became Beverly, and which is described by deed as "a certain breadth of sea at Patches' Beach and a good way back as far as Beaver Pond." Here he built the house which was his home during his residence in America, and which stood on Hospital Point in the part of Beverly now known as the "Cove." In 1665, and again, 11 November, 1667, he was one of the assessors to make "rates" for the support of the pastor, the Reverend John Hale, and also one of a church committee "to draw up a settlement to be considered by the company with reference to a more comfortable sitting." While thus manifesting an interest in the religious life of the colony, he was not, however, a member of the Puritan Church, but remained a member of the Church of England:

He held the office of deputy-sheriff for Essex County, and, in 1633, was delegate to the Court of Boston; in 1659 he signed the petition to the General Court to have "Cape-Ann-Side" (Beverly) set off from Salem, which result was not effected until 1668, when Beverly was incorporated.‡ Mr. Thorndike did not remain at Beverly to participate in the development of the town, but returned to England during the summer of its incorporation, on a visit to his brother, the Reverend Herbert Thorndike, who was then Prebendary of Westminster Abbey. He took with him to England his daughters Martha and Alice, leaving several daughters and his son Paul in America. In his will, dated 29 July, 1668, he writes: "Being by God's mercy purposed to go to England and that my two youngest daughters shall accompany me:" he then proceeds to dispose of his property, making special provision for Anne, an unmarried daughter who remained in America. His death occurred shortly after his arrival in London, and he was buried,

His two daughters remained in England as members of their uncle Herbert's household, who, in his will, made provision for them, on condition, however, "that they should not return to New England, their birthplace, nor yet, remaining in England, should marry any one who went to Massachusetts, nor to the new licensed conventicles colonies." *

"In the North Transept, where now stands the monument of the Three Captains, a Font was then (1662) newly set up; and two young men were baptised publicly by the Dean. One of them, Paul Thorndyke, was the son of the emigrant to New England, and had been probably baptised at Boston. to 1701, in which year his wife is mentioned as "widow." He resided at Beverly throughout his life, and was one of its leading citizens. His memory is still recalled by "Paul's Head," a rocky point near Beverly, which was named for him. Upon the incorporation of the town, in 1668, he was chosen a member of the first Board of Selectmen, to which he was re-elected in 1671, 1673, and 1675; in 1674 he was appointed Surveyor of Highways. On 22 October, 1677, he was commissioned lieutenant of the Beverly Foot Company, under Captain William Dixey, and, 3 July, 1689, he succeeded the latter in command of the company, with the title of captain. He was representative to the General Court in 1681, served on all committees for the distribution of lands for many years, and in 1694 he was at the head of the committee to settle the bounds between Beverly and Manchester. On 7 February, 1680, he was chairman of the committee which drew up the petition to his Majesty Charles II., to defend the title of the inhabitants of Beverly to their lands against the claim advanced by the heirs of John Mason. He contributed largely to the advancement of the interests of the town, giving in one instance £5 toward the purchase of glass for the meeting-house, a very large sum for those days. Captain Thorndike inherited from his father a landed estate, which he increased by later purchases, and, upon the division of his estate after his death, "the homestead on the south side of the road going to Manchester, except sixteen acres," was set apart to his widow, and the land on the north side to his children. He was married, 28 April, 1668, by Dean Weston, to [2] Mary, daughter of James and Hannah Patch, of Beverly.*

* JAMES PATCH was of Salem, Mass., as early as 1646, and resided on "Cape-Ann-Side," (Beverly), where he died 10 Aug., 1658. He was, possibly, a son of Nicholas Patch, of South Petherton, co. Somerset, England. In his will, James Patch mentions wife Hannah, son James, daughters Mary and Elizabeth, and brothers Nicholas Woodbury and John Patch. It is evident that he had married a sister of Nicholas Woodbury. William Woodbury,* the father of Nicholas, in will dated 5 June, 1663, names daughter Hannah Haskell, who thus appears to have married (2) — Haskell. The children of James Patch were: 1. 18. HERBERT THORNDIKE<sup>7</sup>, born probably 1686; married (1), 17 January, 1712, Sarah Herrick; she died 17 July, 1718, and he married (2), 8 January, 1719, Abby Sallows.
19. MARTHA THORNDIKE<sup>7</sup>, married Richard Thissell; publication, 29 April, 1706; she was living in 1752.

16. CAPTAIN JOHN THORNDIKE<sup>7</sup>, eldest son of Captain Paul and Mary (Patch) Thorndike, was born at Beverly, 22 January, 1674; died there, 23 March, 1760. In 1723 he, together with his brother Paul, was a member of the Beverly committee, who, with a similar committee from Manchester, met to "renew the bounds" between their respective towns. He was conspicuous in public affairs both civil and military; in 1698 he was on the jury of trials at the Superior Court at Salem; he served many years as Selectman, and in 1723 was representative to the General Court. In 1718, at the time of his marriage with Christian West, he bore the title of lieutenant, but the particulars of his service have not been ascertained. In the division of his father's estate he was awarded twenty-seven acres on the north side of Manchester Road, upon which he built the house now numbered 184 Hale Street, and known as the "Thorndike-Rea House," so called from the fact that in the settlement of his estate it went to his grandchildren, Isaac Thorndike and Mehitable Thorndike Rea.

Captain Thorndike married (1), 20 April, 1696, [12] Joanna<sup>3</sup>, widow of Joshua Dodge, of Beverly, and daughter of John and Joanna (Hale) Larkin, of Charlestown, Massachusetts (see Larkin Lineage, page 98), the ceremony being performed by the Reverend John Hale, of Beverly. After her death he married (2), 30 March, 1718, Christian, widow of Thomas West, and daughter of Isaac and Mary (Wilkes) Woodbury, born 30 March, 1677/78; she died 28 April, 1732, and he married (3), 1732, Abigail (Conant) Ober, widow of [8] Nicholas Ober<sup>2</sup> (see Ober Lineage, page 83); she died 28 April, 1786.

21. PAUL THORNDIKE<sup>8</sup>, born 5 February, 1699; died 3 February, 1756; married, 30 September, 1725, Mehitable Woodbury, and removed to Tewksbury, Massachusetts. He was a mariner.

24. JAMES THORNDIKE<sup>8</sup>, son of Captain John and Joanna (Larkin) Thorndike, was born at Beverly, 11 January, 1706. He moved to Tewksbury, Massachusetts, where he probably died, but the date of his death is unknown. On 7 November, 1749,* he conveyed his house in Beverly, part of which stood on the land of his father, together with two tracts of land and common right in "Marmarel Cove Cow Pasture," to Samuel Foster, and on the same day he bought of David Stone,† for £525, a dwelling-house, out-housing, and one hundred and seventeen acres of land in Tewksbury, bordering on land of Francis Bosland and others, and running to the Concord River. In a later deed, in which he sold a part of his land to his "beloved son Paul," he is spoken of as James Thorndike of Tewksbury, yeoman.‡ His intentions of marriage were published 21 January, 1728, to [13] Anna<sup>3</sup>, daughter of Hezekiah and Anna (Morgan) Ober, of Beverly. ## The Parker Family

THE name of Parker dates from Roman times, being derived from parcarius, park-keeper, or shepherd, and is prominent in England as early as the reign of King Edward I., 901-925, when one Geoffrey Parker is noted. It also appears as a Norman patronym, for Johnnes le Parker, a follower of William the Conqueror, was keeper of the Royal Parks. The four brothers, Abraham, Jacob, James, and Joseph, founders of the American branch of the name, were descendants of the Wiltshire family of Parkers, Abraham bringing with him from England a coat of arms which has been preserved by his family, and is thus described by Dr. William Thornton Parker: "Gu. a chevron between three leopards' faces or. Crest, a leopard's head affrontee erased, or ducally gorged gu." This is the same as the coat of arms belonging to the family of Little Norton, England, and now borne by Sir Thomas Parker, Earl of Marlesfield.*

The Parkers became prominent residents of Middlesex County, Massachusetts, and conspicuous for their patriotism in the early days of the Revolution. One of the companies which marched to Lexington from Chelmsford, on alarm of 19 April, 1775, was commanded by Colonel Moses Parker, a great-grandson of Abraham. He afterward fell at Bunker Hill. While the Lexington branch of the family, to which Captain John Parker belonged, cannot prove relationship to Abraham, they believe their family to have also come from Little Norton, England.

1. JACOB PARKER<sup>1</sup> was born at Marlborough, County Wilts, England, and came to Woburn, Massachusetts, in 1644. In 1653 he was one of the founders of Chelmsford, where he died prior to 6 April, 1669, on which day his widow filed an inventory of his estate. He became one of the most prominent citizens of Chelmsford, and was the first town clerk, the original records made by him being still in existence. He was Selectman from 1662 until his death, and in 1666 was chosen Surveyor of Highways.

10. EBENEZER PARKER<sup>2</sup>, was of Chelmsford in 1713.

7. BENJAMIN PARKER<sup>2</sup>, son of Jacob and Sarah Parker, was born at Chelmsford, 8 August, 1663, and continued to live there until his death, 14 April, 1743. He was the first of the family who is known to have located on Chelmsford Neck, now Lowell, where the Parker homestead stands and is now occupied by the eighth generation in direct succession from Benjamin Parker. This land, known as the "Wamesit lands," originally belonged to a reservation made to the Indians by request of John Eliot. When the Indians withdrew to the northward the land was bought by John Tyng and Major Thomas Henschman and conveyed to Benjamin Parker, together with other early proprietors. The original deeds from the Indians, written on the skins of animals, bear date 14 December, 1686, and are in the possession of Mr. Parker, with many other interesting relics which have come to him through successive generations. From here [14] Lieutenant Benjamin Parker<sup>3</sup>, the second of the name, went upon the expedition which resulted in bringing the Acadians to the doors of these Chelmsford homes, exiled from their own land, and Benjamin Parker, of the next generation, took an active part in the war of the Revolution.† He married, 14 January, 1690/91 [1] Sarah<sup>2</sup>, eldest daughter of Nathaniel and Sarah (Willard) Howard. ## Spalding and Jeffs Lineage

The Spalding and Jetts Families

THE name Spalding is of great antiquity, being used as early as the reign of Ethelbald, A.D. 716-757, to designate a borough in Lincolnshire, and is found to have been employed as a patronym in the reign of Henry III., 1267. (Spalding Genealogy.)

1. EDWARD SPALDING<sup>1</sup> was born in England, and died at Chelmsford, Massachusetts, 26 February, 1670. The first known record of the Spalding family in America is found among the Virginia State Documents (Senate Report), entitled "Virginia Colonial Record, 1619-1680," where, on page 37, the following names are recorded in the list taken 16 February, 1623, of living and dead in Virginia after the Indian Massacre: "Edward Spalding, Uxor Spalding, Puer Spalding, Puella Spalding." *

This documentary evidence proves that Edward Spalding and family were then fully established in Virginia, and the supposition is that Edward and Edmund Spalding came together to Virginia with Sir George Yeardley, in 1619, or about that time. Some years later Edward went to Massachusetts Bay, while Edmund joined the Maryland colony under Lord Baltimore. The first mention of Edward in New England is found in Braintree, Massachusetts, where he was made freeman, 13 May, 1640, by which fact we know that he was a member of the established church of the colony. In 1645 he is mentioned in a petition to the General Court. At the settlement of Chelmsford he removed there, and though he is not one of the signers of the petition to the General Court in 1653, he was present at the first town meeting, 22 November, 1654, and was chosen Selectman at that time. On 3 May, 1656, the inhabitants petitioned the General Court for an enlargement of the town, and Edward Spalding, Sr., Edward Spalding, Jr., and John Spalding are among the signers of this document. The same year he was again elected Selectman, and served in this capacity until 1661. In 1663 he was Surveyor of Highways, and in 1665 one of a committee to lay out the meadow to the several inhabitants, according to town order, and the following year was chosen with three others to survey Newfield, subsequently North Chelmsford. In 1686 the land lying west of the Concord River and south of the Merrimac, near Pawtucket Falls, called Wamesit, was sold by the Indians and annexed to Chelmsford. The first named among these proprietors is Edward Spalding, Jr., and also John, John, Jr., Joseph, Benjamin, and Andrew,—five sons and one grandson of the elder Edward.

Prior to 1700 a large number of the Spalding family removed to Plainfield, Connecticut.

The will of Edward Spalding, dated 13 February, 1667, does not name his sons Benjamin and Joseph, who had removed to Plainfield, and doubtless had been provided for by their father in his lifetime. He appointed his wife Rachel executrix, but she died before the will was probated, 5 April, 1670, when letters of administration were granted to his sons John and Edward. His first wife, Margaret, died at Braintree, Massachusetts, August, 1640, and his second wife, Rachel, died at Chelmsford, between 1667 and 1670.

8. DEACON ANDREW SPALDING<sup>2</sup>, son of Edward and Rachel Spalding, was born at Chelmsford, 19 November, 1652, where he resided until his death, 5 May, 1713. He succeeded by will to his father's estate, and became a prominent man in Chelmsford. He was deacon of the church, and his son and grandson each in turn held the same office. He is styled in his will, dated 6 June, 1712, "Andrew Spalding, Senior, of Chelmsford, yeoman," and names therein wife Hannah; daughter Rachel Butterfield; daughter Joanna, to whom he gives fourteen acres of land in Chelmsford, and fourteen pounds, "when married;" and mentions "sons and daughters" who "already have had deeds of gift." The will was proved in Middlesex County, 18 May, 1713, by his widow, Hannah Spalding.

She married, between 1712 and 1715, [19] Josiah Fletcher<sup>4</sup>, son of Lieutenant William and Sarah (Richardson) Fletcher, of Chelmsford. (See Fletcher Lineage, page 50.) No record of this marriage exists; she was, however, unmarried at the time of her father's will, dated 6 June, 1712, in which he willed to her property, "when married," and she was the wife of Josiah Fletcher 13 July, 1715, when Hannah Spalding, Andrew Spalding and Abigail his wife, Henry Spalding and Elizabeth his wife, John Spalding and Mary his wife, Samuel Butterfield and Rachel his wife, Josiah Fletcher and Joanna his wife, all of Chelmsford, signed a quit claim deed to Benoni Spalding of the property in Billerica, which they had received from their grandfather, Henry Jefts.†

BENJAMIN BUTTERFIELD<sup>1,*</sup> one of the founders of Chelmsford, Massachusetts, and the ancestor of nearly all who bear this surname in America, was born in England, and died at Chelmsford, 2 March, 1687/88. He probably emigrated to Massachusetts before 1638, as at that date he was in Charlestown, settling soon after at Woburn, of which town he was one of the projectors. In 1643 he was admitted a free-man of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, and in 1645 his name is found on the Woburn tax-list. In 1652 the inhabitants of Woburn petitioned the General Court to explore "the other [west] side of the Concord River." The land was viewed and found to be "a very comfortable place to accommodate a company of God's people," and the following year Benjamin Butterfield headed a petition of twenty-nine men, including those who had petitioned the preceding year, asking the Court for a grant of land six miles square, to begin at the Merrimac River, at a neck of land next to Concord River, "to run southerly on Concord River and westerly into the wild country," a portion of which territory was known to the natives as Naamkeek. The grant was made, and was occupied in 1654 by Benjamin Butterfield and his associates, and the next year was incorporated as the town of Chelmsford. The line between the town and the tract granted to "Apostle Eliot, as a reserve for Christianized Indians," was run "on the east side of Butterfield's highway," and was marked by a ditch. On this highway was the farm of Benjamin Butterfield, somewhere within the limits of what is now Ward IV. of Lowell. In 1656 he is named as one of the citizens of Chelmsford, to whom was conveyed the Governor Dudley farm of fifteen hundred acres in Billerica. In 1666 Newfield, a tract of two hundred and forty-one acres of intervale, across Stony Brook, and extending up the Merrimac, was granted to Chelmsford, and of this tract, perhaps the best in the town, Mr. Butterfield obtained forty-two acres, the largest share of any one person. In 1686, when Wamesit, the Indian reservation, was purchased, three of Mr. Butterfield's sons—Nathaniel, Samuel, and Joseph—were among the grantees.† This territory, which had been occupied by Wanalansit and his tribe as a cornfield and fishing-station, is now occupied by the manufactories of Lowell. The purchase included also five hundred acres of "wilderness" land on the Merrimac, a general term for unsettled country outside of incorporated limits. Nathaniel and Samuel settled on the Wamesit lands, and Joseph in the "wilderness" between Tyng Pond and the river.

Benjamin Butterfield was one of the Selectmen of Chelmsford, and held a place in the judicial system of the colony as a commissioner to end small causes. He married (1) Ann —, who died 19 May, 1660, and he married (2), 3 June, 1663, Hannah, widow of Thomas Whittemore. She died 19 March, 1677.

2. JONATHAN BUTTERFIELD<sup>2</sup>, born in England; died 3 April, 1673; married Mary Dixon, of Cambridge, Massachusetts.
3. MARY BUTTERFIELD<sup>2</sup>, born probably in England; died 5 September, 1666; married, 15 September, 1653, Daniel Blodgett.
4. NATHANIEL BUTTERFIELD<sup>2</sup>, born 14 February, 1642/43.†
5. SAMUEL BUTTERFIELD<sup>2</sup>, born at Woburn, 17 May, 1647; died in 1714; married Mary —.
6. JOSEPH BUTTERFIELD<sup>2</sup>, born at Woburn, 15 August, 1649; died in 1720; married (1), 12 February, 1674, Lydia Ballard, of Andover; (2), 21 January, 1696/97, Eunice Heald.

4. NATHANIEL BUTTERFIELD<sup>2</sup>, son of Benjamin and Ann Butterfield, was born at Woburn, 14 February, 1642/43; died at Chelmsford, after December, 1719. He removed with his parents from Woburn to Chelmsford, where he became a considerable landowner. In 1718 he was one of the contributors toward the building of the first school-house. His estate was in that part of Chelmsford known as "Wamesit." On 10 January, 1709, he divided his lands in the northern part of the town between his three sons, Benjamin, Samuel, and Nathaniel, by deed of gift. The date of his death is not on record, but he was living in December, 1719, "76 years of age," as is shown by an entry in the appraisal of his son Benjamin's estate. He married, 31 December, 1668/69, [5] Deborah<sup>2</sup>, daughter of William and Sarah Underwood; * she died 15 June, 1691.

* WILLIAM UNDERWOOD, ESQUIRE, was born in England, and died at Chelmsford, Mass., of which town he was one of the founders and a prominent citizen. The earliest record of him in Massachusetts is under date of 25 Feb., 1640, when he was admitted a freeman of the colony, at which time he was a resident of Concord. The first meeting to organize a town government for Chelmsford was held 22 November, 1654, when William Underwood was one of the three men chosen "to manage the affairs of the settlement for the ensuing year." From 1667 until 1686 he was a member of the Board of Selectman; from 1676 until 1686, a commissioner (justice) "to end small causes," and in 1685, surveyor of highways. At one time, when an attack from the Indians seemed imminent, Mr. Underwood was one of the citizens of Chelmsford who petitioned the General Court "to consider of dangerous conditions y<sup>t</sup> we are in refferance to o<sup>r</sup> lives & estates," in answer to which the Court ordered that "measures be taken to protect the settlement." He married Sarah Pellet, a widow,

6. HEZEKIAH OBER<sup>2</sup>, son of Richard and Abigail (Woodbury) Ober, was born at Beverly, 9 November, 1681, and died there, 26 November, 1739. He was married in the house now No. 8 Hale Street, Beverly, which is one of the most interesting of the old houses in that town, and, owing to the prominence of both the Morgan and Ober families, has been the centre of its life in by-gone days. It has been altered from its original appearance, the one-story portion having been removed, and the quaint old well, which was curiously tucked in under the corner of the house, has disappeared, but the front remains the same, and is still covered with the original heavy clap-boards, grooved on the edge. During one period of its history it was an inn. The house was built by [4] Joseph Morgan<sup>2</sup>, a brother of Sergeant Samuel Morgan, on a portion of land (twenty acres) which was given to him in 1671 by his father, Robert Morgan, and by intermarriage passed into the hands of the Ober family. Hezekiah Ober married, 5 November, 1702, [15] Ann<sup>3</sup>, daughter of Sergeant Samuel and Elizabeth (Dixey) Morgan. (See Morgan Lineage, page 103.) The marriage was performed by Robert Hale, Esquire, Justice of the Peace.

LIEUTENANT THOMAS WHEELER<sup>1</sup>, with his brothers Timothy and Ephraim and his son Thomas, were among the early inhabitants of the town of Concord, Massachusetts, where they settled upon their arrival from England in 1639.* In 1645 Thomas, Sr., became one of those who founded the town of Fairfield, all of his family removing there with him except his oldest son, Thomas.† During the early years of the settlement he was prominent in its civil and military life. In 1653 he was appointed lieutenant. He died prior to 23 August, 1654, on which date his will was probated. By it he bequeathed to his son Thomas his Concord estate, "the old homestead," and the Fairfield estate to John, leaving also legacies to his other children. EZEKIEL RICHARDSON, ESQUIRE<sup>1</sup> * was born in England, and died at Woburn, Massachusetts, 21 October, 1647. He doubtless came to the colony in 1630, in the fleet with Governor Winthrop, who, in his journal, mentions some of the families who had "given encouragement that they would accompany him to New England," and among these is one named Richardson. He settled at Charlestown, where he and his wife Susanna were enrolled as members of the church gathered there, 27 August, 1630. This church became the First Church in Boston, and on 11 October, 1632, he and his wife were dismissed from it, with thirty-three others, to form the present First Church in Charlestown. He was admitted freeman, 18 May, 1631, and in 1633 was appointed, by the General Court, constable at Charlestown, then an office of much responsibility, and in the following years he was appointed by the town on several important committees. In 1635, 1637, 1638, and 1639 he was a member of the Board of Selectmen, and in September, 1634, was elected a deputy to the General Court, and re-elected the next year. In 1637 a lot of land was granted to him on "Misticke Side;" his brothers Samuel and Thomas, who had come to Massachusetts the previous year, also received grants at the same place.

"He was a follower of Ann Hutchinson and John Wheelwright in the Antinomian Controversy of 1637, as were most of the members of the Boston church, and was one of the eighty or more persons who signed the Remonstrance in Mr. Wheelwright's favor, presented to the General Court held in November of that year. At the session of the General Court held in November following, he and several others desired that their names might be erased from that paper, which the Court had judged to be of seditious tendency. Thus acknowledging his fault, he was exempted from the censure inflicted by the Court; in other words, he was not disarmed, as were nearly all the Remonstrants." †

Early in 1640 the General Court granted to Charlestown a large tract of territory. Ezekiel Richardson, Edward Johnson, Edward Convers, and some others were sent to explore this grant and to determine its bounds, which expedition resulted, 5 November, 1640, in the church of Charlestown choosing seven men—those above named, together with John Mousall, Thomas Graves,

Samuel Richardson, and Thomas Richardson—as commissioners or agents for the erection of a new church or town upon the land thus granted. Two years later the town was incorporated and named Woburn, from Woburn in Herefordshire, England. The Richardson brothers all settled there, and are recognized historically as among the founders of the town. At the first election of town officers, 13 April, 1644, Ezekiel Richardson was chosen a Selectman, and was annually rechosen until his death, and during the same period he was one of the magistrates of Woburn, commissioned to hold the courts “to end small causes.” He and his two brothers resided near one another, on the same street, which, from its having been their residence and that of many of their descendants, has been known from time immemorial as “Richardson’s Row.”

Ezekiel Richardson lived half a mile north of the present village of Winchester, a locality, until 30 April, 1850, included in the town of Woburn. His will is dated 20 May, 1647; probated 1 June, 1648.* His marriage to Susanna — probably took place on the eve of his leaving England, or immediately after his coming to Massachusetts, as their first known child, and presumably the eldest, was baptized at Boston. His wife Susanna survived him, and married (2) Henry Brooks, of Concord. They moved to Woburn, where she died 15 September, 1681.

was appointed one of a committee to lay out the highway between Groton and Chelmsford. In 1667 he was elected constable, and the next year a member of the Board of Selectmen, in which office he served fourteen years, his last election occurring the year before his death. He was a representative to the General Court in 1689 and 1690; town clerk from 1690 until 1694, and commanded the Chelmsford military company.

Together with Major Thomas Henchman and William Fletcher, he erected, in 1669, the second saw-mill in Chelmsford, to encourage the building of which, a tract of land was granted them.

On 19 January, 1688/89, some Indians, "from the love they bore to Captain Richardson," conveyed to him a parcel of land at the confluence of the Concord and Merrimac Rivers, where now stands the city of Lowell.* Captain Josiah Richardson was not only one of the leading men of Chelmsford, but one of its wealthiest ones, as is shown by the inventory filed in his estate, which gives £697 5s. 6d. as its valuation.† He married, 6 June, 1659, [1] Remembrance<sup>2</sup>, daughter of William and Sarah Underwood, of Chelmsford.‡

EDWARD LARKIN<sup>1</sup> was born in England, and died at Charlestown, Massachusetts, probably in 1652, as his will was probated in that year. Upon his arrival in America he settled in Charlestown, where he was admitted "an inhabitant," 30 May, 1638, and became a member of the church, 23 July, 1639, his wife Joanna being admitted 11 August the same year. He was made free-man 13 May, 1640. In 1644 he was recruited a member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Massachusetts. His property in Charlestown was situated "on the Southwest of the Mill hill, butting southwest upon Crooked Lane." *

He married, presumably in England, Joanna —, who, after his death, married John Penticost. She died in 1686, aged seventy years.†

4. HANNAH LARKIN<sup>2</sup>, born 16 January, 1643; died 10 December, 1704; married, March, 1664/65, John Newell.
5. THOMAS LARKIN<sup>2</sup>, born 18 August, 1644; died of small-pox, 10 December, 1677; married (1), 13 September, 1666, Hannah Remington; she died 8 November, 1673, and he married (2), 18 April, 1674, Elizabeth Dowse.
6. JOANNA LARKIN<sup>2</sup>, birth not recorded; died 25 December, 1713; married, 28 October, 1668, Moses Newton.
7. SARAH LARKIN<sup>2</sup>, born 12 January, 1647; died at Concord, 29 December, 1727; married, 25 March, 1663, John Wheeler, of Concord.

2. JOHN LARKIN<sup>2</sup>, eldest child of Edward and Joanna Larkin, was baptized at Charlestown, 1 October, 1640, where he continued to reside until his death, from small-pox, 17 December, 1677. On 27 June, 1675, he was admitted a member of the Charlestown church. The descendants of John Larkin were stanch patriots throughout the Revolutionary struggle, and upon the night of 18 April, 1775, Deacon Larkin met Paul Revere when he crossed the Charles River, and gave him the fleet horse which carried him on his famous ride.‡ His will, dated 4 February, 1677, was probated in 1678.

He married, 9 November, 1664, [5] Joanna, daughter of Deacon Robert and Joanna Hale, of Charlestown.* His widow married, 25 May, 1685, Captain William Dodge, of Beverly, and her dismissal from the Charlestown to the Beverly church is recorded 2 October, 1687.

Children of John and Joanna (Hale) Larkin, born at Charlestown, Massachusetts:

8. EDWARD LARKIN<sup>3</sup>, born 22 February, 1668/69; married, 1 November, 1688, Mary Walker.
9. JOHN LARKIN<sup>3</sup>, born 26 December, 1670.
10. JOANNA LARKIN<sup>3</sup>, born 13 May, 1673; died 3 June, 1673.
11. ROBERT LARKIN<sup>3</sup>, born 24 April, 1674; died in a few weeks.
12. JOANNA LARKIN<sup>3</sup>, born 8 March, 1675/76.+
13. SARAH LARKIN<sup>3</sup>, born 27 September, 1677; married, January, 1699, David Fay.

12. JOANNA LARKIN<sup>3</sup>, daughter of John and Joanna (Hale) Larkin, was born at Charlestown, 8 March, baptized 12 March, 1675/76. She moved to Beverly with her mother in 1687, and was married there to Joshua Dodge, son of Captain William and Mary (Conant-Balsh) Dodge, of Beverly, baptized 29 August, 1669. After his death, 15 April, 1694, she married, 20 April, 1696, [16] Captain John Thorndike<sup>7</sup>, the ceremony being performed by her uncle, the Reverend John Hale, of Beverly. (See Thorndike Lineage, page 61.)

* ROBERT HALE, the first of the name in the Massachusetts Bay Colony, came probably in the fleet with Governor Winthrop, in 1630. He was one of the earliest members of the Boston church, and, with his wife Joanna, was of those who, on 14 October, 1632, founded the church in Charlestown, being one of the first appointed deacons, and a Selectman, serving in the latter office eleven years. He was a member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company, and Ensign, 1644. He died at Charlestown, 15 May, 1659, his will being dated 26 April, 1647, probated 1659.

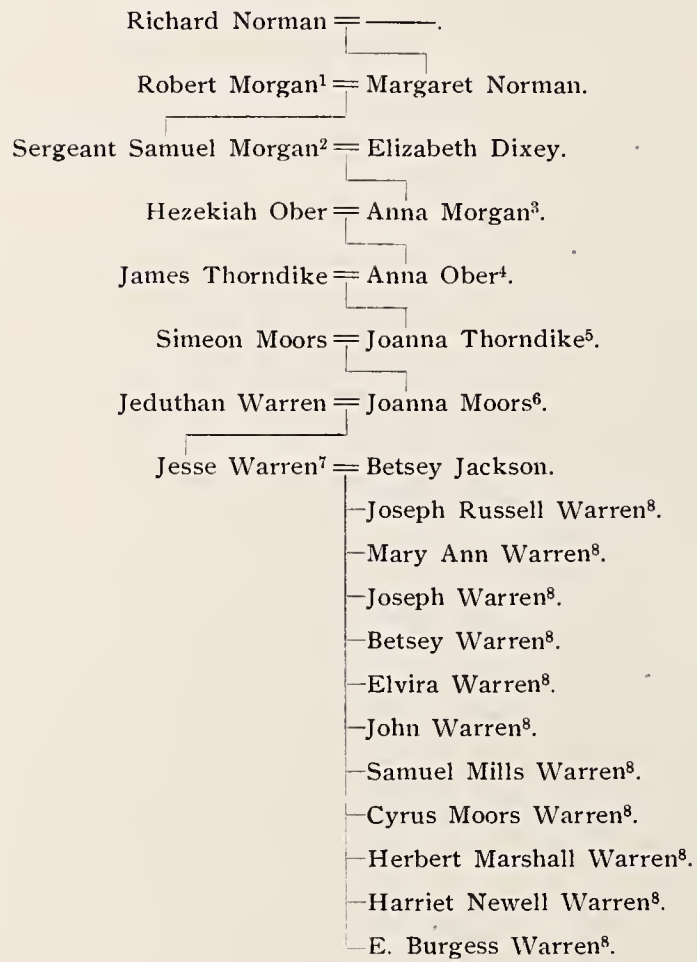

He married Joanna Cutler (?), who, after his death, married (2) Richard Jacob, of Ipswich, 1662. His children were: 1. John, b. 3 June, 1636; d. 15 May, 1700; m. (1), 1664, Rebecca Byles; (2), 31 March, 1684, Mrs. Sarah Noyes; (3), 1698, Mrs. Elizabeth Clark. 2. Mary, b. 17 March, 1639; m. Edward Wilson. 3. Zechary, b. 3 Feb., 1641; d. 5 April, 1643. 4. Samuel, b. 9 Feb., 1644. 5. Joanna.+

His son, the Reverend John Hale, one of the earliest graduates of Harvard College, 1657, became the first pastor of the church at Beverly, and one of the most prominent ministers of his time. He was conspicuous in the early days of the Salem witchcraft delusion. By order of the General Court he served as chaplain in the expedition against Canada. Reverend John Hale was the great-grandfather of Nathan Hale, who was executed as a spy during the Revolution.

KING MORGAN, of Gla-Morgan, Wales, founded trial by Jury in A.D. 725, saying that, "As Christ and his twelve Apostles so should King and twelve men decide," etc. The patronym Morgan means "by the sea." The founder of the American family of the name was James Morgan, who was born in 1607, probably in Llandaff, Gla-Morgan County, Wales. He emigrated to New England and became one of the founders of New London, Connecticut. The family appears to have removed from Llandaff to Bristol, England, a short time prior to 1636. The name of his father is unknown, but there is some traditionary evidence that it was William. The "Morgan Genealogy" mentions John and Miles, two brothers of James, who also came to America, and according to researches made by Mr. J. Israel Baker, of Beverly, and noted in the Beverly Town Records, Robert, the subject of the following sketch, is proved to be a third brother of the same family.

THE MORGAN ARMS

1. ROBERT MORGAN<sup>1</sup> was born in Wales, and emigrated to Massachusetts, where he was one of the early settlers of Beverly, and owned a large tract of land adjoining that of the Reverend John Hale. The estate originally ran from the property of Mr. Hale to the graveyard, and extended down to the sea and up the hill on the far side of Hale Street quite a distance. The stone wall dividing the two properties, and built by him, still marks the line. The original house stood on the sight of the present No. 21 Hale Street.

Robert Morgan was a cooper by trade, making him an especially valuable man to the settlement, as the relations of trade with the Mother Country required the Colony to return to the government a certain proportion of all commerce, which, being largely fish and skins, was sent back in casks. It was because a cooper was essential that John Alden was hired at Southampton by the Pilgrims for this purpose.

On 9 May, 1659, Robert Morgan signed the petition to the General Court to have Cape-Ann-Side (Beverly) set off as a separate town from Salem,* and he was, on 11 November, 1667, chosen to make "rates" of taxes for the support of the Reverend Mr. Hale. He was also one of the founders of the Church at Beverly.

Robert Morgan's will, dated 14 October, 1672, after leaving a legacy to his wife Margaret, gives to his son Samuel twenty acres, and land to his other children. It speaks also of property in "Great Plain Manchester which his wife's father Norman had given to her." *

He married, circa 1636, Margaret, daughter of Richard Norman.† Although there is no record either of this marriage or that of Richard Norman's daughter Florence, who married Thomas Whittridge, the Church Records call the former Margaret, and the following will determines the father of both.

"Declaration of the verbal will of Thomas Whittridge Deceased which wee Robt. Morgan & Richard Norman present, unto this honoured Court now sitting and in reference to their Councill Desiring their helpe: under submission to their godly Disposition Our brother Thomas whittridge being sick sent unto mee Robt. Children of Robert and Margaret (Norman) Morgan:

2. SAMUEL MORGAN<sup>2</sup>, baptized 23 June, 1650, at Salem.†

* Essex County Wills.

† RICHARD NORMAN, one of the "old planters" of Massachusetts, was with Roger Conant and his little band of followers when the first settlement was made on Cape Ann, in 1624, and when that undertaking was abandoned, removed with Conant and settled in the part of Salem which afterward became Beverly. Felt suggests that he probably came from Dorchester, England, but no facts are known to establish either the date of his birth or death. He was juryman in an "inquisition" taken at Charlestown, before Governor Winthrop, 18 September, 1630. He became known as "Old Goodman Norman," and doubtless lived to a great age, but is believed to have died before 1683.

According to Savage, he brought with him to Massachusetts his son Richard, leaving the elder son, John, in England. William Norman, afterward of Marblehead, is supposed to have been another one of his sons. He also had daughters, Margaret, wife of Robert Morgan, and Florence, wife of Thomas Whittridge. The above unprobated paper, written by Robert Morgan, and filed in the Essex County Probate Records, proves Margaret to have been a sister of Richard Norman, and therefore daughter of Richard, Sr. The name of Richard Norman's wife is unknown.

He was a substantial citizen of Beverly and signed the petition to the General Court to have Cape-Ann-Side (Beverly) set off from Salem 9 May, 1659;* was chosen Selectman 12 July, 1683.

For some years he was resident in Marblehead, where he "testified on military affairs" in 1674. He was an early soldier in the Indian campaigns; one record states that in 1690 "Samuel Morgan, Sergeant, wounded in leg whereby the bone was broken." †

MAJOR SIMON WILLARD<sup>1</sup> was born at Horsmandon, County Kent, England, where he was baptized, 7 April, 1605, and died at Charlestown, Massachusetts, 24 April, 1677. He was the son of Richard Willard, of Horsmandon, by his second wife, Margery Humphrey. He arrived at Boston, Massachusetts, in May, 1634, and settled for a short time at Cambridge. He rose to great distinction in the colony. Indeed, "of all the names that stand upon the pages of New England History, none are more honored than that of Major Simon Willard." * In 1635 he removed to Concord, Massachusetts, of which place he "was the chief instrument in settling," and "the most prominent citizen during his long life." † On the organization of the town he was chosen Town Clerk, which office he held by annual election nineteen years, and at the first election in Concord, December, 1636, he was elected deputy to the General Court, and continued to represent the town in this capacity, under annual re-elections, except for three years, until 1654, when he was chosen a member of the Governor's Council, or an "Assistant," as this office was then styled. He remained a member of the Council until his death, and faithfully attended its meetings, being absent only when otherwise engaged in public affairs. On 6 June, 1639, he was appointed a magistrate at Concord, and reappointed 2 June, 1641. Upon the day last named the General Court gave marked evidence of their esteem for Major Willard, as, in addition to his reappointment to the magistracy, he was placed at the head of the company to whom was granted a monopoly of the fur-trade with the Indians; was chosen to collect the tribute of wampum due from the Indians, and appointed one of the commissioners to run the southern boundary line of the colony. His service in the latter position gave such satisfaction that, in 1652, he was made one of the commissioners to establish the northern boundary, and the letters "S. W." upon the famous Bound Rock, discovered many years ago near Lake Winnepesaukee, are doubtless his initials, cut at the time the boundary was fixed.

Major Willard was not trained in the law, yet he possessed an acute legal mind, which, together with his wisdom in council and impartiality in judgment, singularly fitted him for the judicial office, and upon various occasions he was selected by the governor and council for important judicial work. On 23 May, 1666, he was commissioned to preside over the courts of Norfolk County, and on 12 May, 1675, was commissioned president judge of the courts held in the districts that became New Hampshire and Maine.

While thus eminent in civil life, he was more widely known for his military career, which had its beginning in England, where he is said to have held the rank of captain. Johnson doubtless had his pre-American military service in view when, in his "Wonder-Working Providence" (1654), he referred to him as "Captain Symon Willard, a Kentish soldier." In 1637 he was commissioned lieutenant-commander of the first military company at Concord, and in this capacity commanded the company until 1646, when he was commissioned captain, which position he held until 1653, during which year he was given command of the military forces of Middlesex County, under the title of sergeant-major. In October of the following year he was appointed by the Congress of the United Colonies of New England commander-in-chief of the military expedition sent by this body against Ninigret, Sachem of the Nyan-ticks.

That the public services of Major Willard were appreciated by his government is seen in the action of the General Court, 6 May, 1657, when, as the record reads, it "granted Major Symon Willard, for his service to this colony, 500 acres of land, in any place he can find it." Under this grant a tract was surveyed to him, located between Lancaster and Groton. About this time, Major Willard also received a testimonial of the esteem in which he was held by the inhabitants of Lancaster. He had been of great service to them in the settlement of their town, and in 1658 the Selectmen wrote him an earnest invitation to come and settle among them, offering a generous share in their lands as an inducement. This invitation he accepted, sold his estate in Concord, and removed to Lancaster, where he resided until about 1671, when he settled on his large farm in Groton.

Major Willard's most distinguished military service was rendered in King Philip's War. At the outbreak of the war he was still in command of the militia of Middlesex County, the most important military district in Massachusetts, and although he was then seventy years of age, he entered on the work of the campaign at hand * with a degree of mental activity and physical vigor unsurpassed by any other soldier in the colony, and so continued, with unrivalled efficiency, until the end of the war. The details of his service are not here given, as they are minutely chronicled by Bodge, in his interesting history of the war, to which work the reader is referred.* Bodge, in closing his sketch of Major Willard, says,—

* "His first actual participation in that war was in the defence of Brookfield. . . . We must admire this grand old man of seventy, mounting to the saddle at the call of the court, and riding forth at the head of a frontier force for the protection of their towns."—Bodge's History of King Philip's War, p. 120.

“On March 29 (1677), Major Willard was in his seat at the Court of Assistants, and his family was then living at Charlestown. He was also at the session of the County Court at Cambridge beginning April 4. On the 11th he was re-elected as Assistant, having the highest number of votes cast for any magistrate except the governor and lieutenant-governor. He was constantly engaged in his public duties until April 18, when he retired to his home and was struck down, it is thought, by an ‘epidemical cold’ which was then raging, and on April 24 ‘died in his bed in peace, though God had honoured him with several signal victories over our enemies in war,’ says a contemporary historian. No man was ever more fully or more deservedly honored in life and death than Major Willard. His funeral at Charlestown, on April 27, was an occasion of great pomp for that time, six military companies parading under command of Captain Henschman; and his death created profound sorrow far and wide. There are numerous references to his death and funeral in the literature, records, and MS. journals of that day. His family was reimbursed for his great expense and services, in 1677; and again, in 1681, a grant of land of one thousand acres was set aside for his six youngest children when they should come of age. He left a numerous posterity, many of whom have held honorable positions in succeeding generations.”

Major Willard married (1), in England, Mary, daughter of Henry and Jane (Ffeylde) Sharpe. She was baptized at Horsmandon, 10 October, 1614, and died at Concord, Massachusetts. He married (2) Elizabeth Dunster, who died six months after marriage. He married (3) Mary Dunster, who afterward married (2), 14 July, 1680, Deacon Joseph Noyes, of Sudbury, Massachusetts, and died in that town, in December, 1715. His second wife was a sister of Henry Dunster, president of Harvard College, and it is thought that his third wife was also.

* Of the life of Nathaniel Howard but little is known. It is possible that he is identical with the Nathaniel Howard who was at Dorchester, Mass., as early as 1641, and in that year became a member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company, and was admitted freeman 10 May, 1643; he was, however, probably his son. After the death of his wife, Sarah Willard, Nathaniel Howard removed to Chelmsford, where, on 1 July, 1678, he m. [3] Sarah<sup>2</sup> (see Parker Lineage, page 66), daughter of Jacob and Sarah Parker, of that town. By his first wife, his children were: 1. In his will, dated 7 Nov., 1709, and proved 17 Feb., 1709/10 (Middlesex County Probate Books, No. 12, pp. 149-155), he names wife Sarah; eldest son Nathaniel, to whom he gave lands in Stow; son Jonathan, to whom he gave one-half of the farm purchased of Major Thomas Henchman; son Samuel, to whom he gave the "improvement of the farm at the Merrimac;" daughter Sarah, wife of Benjamin Parker; daughter Rachel, wife of Samuel Richardson; and daughters Rebecca and Mercy.

THE ancient name of Woodbury, in Devonshire, England, comes from the British "Vydlie," or "Guydien," meaning wood, and the Saxon "Byrig." The family probably lived on the side of the river Exe prior to the conquest, and the ancient manor house which stood on the river-side, about midway between Exeter and Exmouth, was part of the royal demesne settled upon Editha, consort of Edward the Confessor. By the sixteenth century the family had spread to Burlescombe and South Petherton, on the border-land of Devon and Somersetshire, and the old location of the family became abandoned until now not a vestige is left of the old castle nor any burial tablets, and the name is only recalled in Woodbury parish by the existence of the Woodbury Road railway station. The site of Woodbury Castle was of military value, and as late as 1798 a park of artillery was planted within the old intrenchments. Of the American Woodburys, John and William were of Somersetshire, the subject of the following sketch coming directly from South Petherton.*

I. WILLIAM WOODBURY<sup>1</sup> was born in England in 1589, and died at Beverly, Massachusetts, 29 January, 1677. He was the younger brother of "Mr. John Woodbury," one of the "old planters," and came to Massachusetts in 1728 in company with Governor Endicott, and became an inhabitant in that part of Salem which afterward was incorporated as Beverly. In 1654 Mr. Woodbury served under Captain Lathrop on the Port Royal Expedition, acting during the cruise as one of the pilots. Many Beverly men went on this expedition, and returning brought much booty to the town, including a large bell, which was given to the church of Beverly by Captain Lathrop.† In 1659 Mr. Woodbury signed the petition for the incorporation of the town of Beverly,‡ where he continued to live until his death. His will, dated 5 June, William Woodbury. 1663, and proved 26 June, 1677, names wife Elizabeth, sons Nicholas, William, Andrew, Hugh, and Isaac, and daughter Hannah Haskell. According to the inventory filed in his estate, he was eighty-eight years old at the time of his death. He married, at South Petherton, County Somerset, England, 29 January, 1616/17, Elizabeth Patch, who was baptized at South Petherton, 16 April, 1593.

He came to America with his parents, and his life here was chiefly spent at Beverly. On 9 May, 1659, he signed the petition for the incorporation of Beverly,† and in 1670 he was a member of the committee to settle the bounds between Beverly and Manchester. Her will was drawn 16 October, 1699, in which was bequeathed "what I have by deed of gift already confirmed to my son Richard Ober,—viz., my little house, and small pieces of land, nigh Mr. Hale's house, in Beverly." CAPTAIN WILLIAM DIXEY<sup>1</sup> was born in 1607, presumably in England, and died at Beverly, Massachusetts, in 1690. He came to New England under the following circumstances, testified to by him during the celebrated John Mason difficulty. 16: 12<sup>mo.</sup>: 1680: "I, William Dixy, of Beverly in New England aged about 73 years Testifieth that I came to New England & arrived in June 1629, at cape an, where wee found the signes of building & plantation work, & saw noe English people soe we sailed to the place now called Salem, where wee found Mr John Endicott Governour & sundry inhabitants besides; some of whom s<sup>d</sup> they had beene servants to the Dorchester company: & had built at cape an sundry yeares before wee came ouer." * He settled in that part of Salem which became Beverly, and was admitted freeman in 1634, his name and that of his wife are found on the records of Salem Church as early as 1636, and both were among the constituent members of the Beverly Church, organized in 1667. He was ensign in the militia as early as 14 May, 1645, and is named by such title in the incorporation of the "Military Company of Salem and Linn," as is seen from the act of the General Court of that date, ordering that "Sergent Major Genrall John Endicot, Capt. Rob<sup>rt</sup> Bridges, Mr Willi: Hathorne, Mr Willi: Clarke, Ensigne Willi: Dixie, Sergent Thom: Lathrop, & such oth<sup>rs</sup> as they shall from time to time take into y<sup>ir</sup> company, shal be called y<sup>e</sup> Military Company of Salem & Linn." † On 1 October, the same year, he was commissioned ensign of the military company, or "trained band," of Salem, under Captain William Hathorn, to continue therein "till ye Co't take further ord<sup>r</sup>." He doubtless continued an officer in the militia to the end of his life. At the time of his death he was serving as captain of the Beverly Foot Company, to which he was commissioned, 22 October, 1677, "in answer to the petition of severall inhabitants of Beverly." On 9 May, 1659, he signed the petition to have "Cape-Ann-Side" set off from Salem,‡ and upon the incorporation of Beverly, in 1668, Captain Dixey was chosen one of the first Selectmen, and was again chosen in 1671. In 1670 he was on the committee to settle the boundary lines between Beverly and Manchester, and in 1681, when great excitement was produced in Massachusetts by the claim advanced by the heirs of John Mason to all the territory between the Merrimac and Naumkeag Rivers, he was appointed to attend a convention at Ipswich, "to present such pleas and evidences for the title of the town [Beverly] to its territory as had been agreed upon," and to unite with that body in drawing up "something to be presented to his Majesty by such messengers as the General Court shall send." * He was one of the most material witnesses upon this occasion.

Captain Dixey was a large landowner in Beverly, and had the franchise of the ferry there for many years. He was the proprietor of a famous and reputable tavern, the fashionable resort of many distinguished travellers. General Sedgwick, a native of Beverly, Yorkshire, England, on his return from the Port Royal Expedition in 1654, stopped at this tavern, and, it is said, there gave the name to the town by which it was incorporated, much to the chagrin of Roger Conant and his followers, who afterward petitioned the General Court to change the name to Budleigh.

The name of Captain Dixey's wife was Ann, but her parentage is unknown.

6. ELIZABETH DIXEY<sup>2</sup>, daughter of Captain William and Ann Dixey, was baptized at Beverly, 17 October, 1641. She outlived her husband, as is seen by the deed made by her to Richard Ober, 1 November, 1700, in which she, as administratrix of the estate of her husband, conveys to him "house, barn, other buildings, and twenty-eight acres of land, for £172." She was married, 15 October, 1658, by Magistrate Hawthorne, to [2] Sergeant Samuel Morgan,<sup>2</sup> son of Robert and Margaret (Norman) Morgan. (See Morgan Lineage, page 103.)

EDWARD JACKSON<sup>1</sup>, ESQUIRE, an early and eminent settler of Cambridge, Massachusetts, and a prominent surveyor in that colony, was a son of Christopher Jackson, of the parish of Whitechapel, London, England, where the latter was buried, 5 December, 1633. The son was baptized in that parish, 3 February, 1604, about two years after his birth, if his age as given on his tombstone is correct. The precise date of his emigration to America is unknown, but that he came as early as 1642 seems to be established by an entry in the records of Middlesex County, Massachusetts, noting that he received a certificate stating that he had brought into the province light gold and money to the amount of £40, on 7 September, 1642; £22 10s. on 12 October, the same year; and £32 10s. the February following.* He settled in that part of Cambridge known as Cambridge Village, but which, in 1691, became Newton. His home was on the northerly side of the main street, nearly opposite to the estate of his brother, John Jackson.†

He was admitted freeman in 1644, and rose to prominence in both town and colony, and is justly designated by Paige, in his "History of Cambridge," "a distinguished citizen." He was much employed in public affairs. In 1647 he was chosen one of the representatives of Cambridge to the General Court of the colony, and was annually re-elected until 1654, and again elected in 1656, 1665, 1666, 1667, 1668, 1675, and 1676, his service covering a greater number of years than was covered by any other representative of the town in his day. That he had enjoyed the advantages of a good education, and was fully equipped for legislative work of the highest order, is evidenced by his appointment from time to time on some of the most important committees created by the General Court, and the fact that his colleagues on these committees were men of the first rank in the colony. On 13 May, 1648, the second year of his service in the General Court, a committee, composed of the governor, deputy-governor, the Honorables Richard Bellingham and Simon Bradstreet, Captains William Hathorn and Humphrey Atherton, Surveyor-General Johnson, and Mr. Jackson, were appointed "to peruse the articles of confederation of the United Colonies, and the acts passed by that body, and to propose amendments of the same” to the Congress of the United Colonies. During the following year he and Captain Robert Keayne were appointed to survey the bounds of Dedham Village, and in 1650 he composed a commission, with Captains Simon Willard and Eleazer Lusher, to settle the boundary between Sudbury and Watertown. In 1652 he was one of the committee to audit the treasurer’s and auditor-general’s accounts, his colleagues this time being Captain John Leverett and Captain-Lieutenant Francis Norton; and he was also, that year, on the committee to “lay out the metes and bounds of the Indian plantation at Natick.” In May, 1653, he was chosen one of the committee to consider ways and means for lessening the public charges of the colony and increasing the jurisdiction of the magistrates of the several towns, and on 14 September, the same year, he was named on a committee, with the Honorable Increase Nowell, Captain Daniel Gookin, Captain John Leverett, and Captain Edward Johnson, to examine into the affairs of Harvard College, with the view of its proper maintenance, and “to take cognizance of all & every matter and thing concerning the college, in reference to the welfare thereof in outward things.” In May, 1656, he served, with Major Simon Willard and Captain Edward Johnson, on a committee to lay out the town of Billerica, and, with Captain Eleazer Lusher and Ephraim Child, on a committee to lay out the bounds of the “six miles grant” to the inhabitants of Sudbury.

Mr. Jackson was not elected to the General Court after 1656 until 1665. During this interval, however, the Court, on several occasions, sought his services in public matters. In 1657 the Court took action with reference to the fur-trade with the Indians. It declared that the trade properly belonged “to the Commonwealth, & not to particular persons,” and appointed a committee, of which Mr. Jackson was a member, “with full power to find out the best ways and means, and to make agreement & contract with such able and honest persons as shall tender themselves to prosecute the trade for the best interests of the country.” His services were sought again in 1663, when, in answer to the petition of the Reverend John Eliot “in behalf of the Praying Indians of Oggunkikingquamesit,” the General Court appointed Mr. Jackson, with Captain Daniel Gookin and the Honorable Thomas Danforth, “to act in the disposing of the Indian lands at Marlborough as they shall see fit.”

The year in which he was next elected to the General Court, 1665, was a memorable one in the early history of Massachusetts, made so by the coming to the colony of the Royal commissioners, Colonel Richard Nicolls, Sir Robert Carr, George Cartwright, Esquire, and Samuel Maverick, Esquire, who had been sent out by Charles II. to “reduce the Dutch” at New York, and, among other things, to visit the New England colonies, and hear and determine all matters of complaint that had come before the King with reference to the colonies. The people of Massachusetts felt grave concern at the appointment of this commission, and entertained the fear that it might result in the loss of their charter, and it was in the midst of this crisis that the election took place for members of the General Court that year. The inhabitants of Cambridge recognized the importance of the measures that were to come before the Court, and gave voice to their appreciation of the exigencies of the occasion by returning Mr. Edward Collins to the General Court and electing as his colleague the true and tried legislator, Edward Jackson. That this selection was a wise one, and that the General Court had a high regard for the abilities of Mr. Jackson as a legislator, is evidenced by the fact that, on the very day the Court assembled, Mr. Jackson was appointed on a committee to confer with the King's commissioners, and also on the special committee "to consider of all the papers delivered into this Court by Colonel Richard Nicolls & the rest of his majesties commissioners, & to present a full & meet answer unto the whole to this Court for their approbation." Later in the session he was made a member of the committee to take into consideration the numerous amendments to the laws of the province, proposed by the Royal commissioners, Governor Bellingham being placed at the head of the committee.

Mr. Jackson was active not only in the affairs of the colony, but in those of the town as well. In 1653 he was appointed by the town of Cambridge at the head of a committee, consisting of himself, Lieutenant Edward Oakes, and Mr. Thomas Danforth, to lay out all necessary highways in Cambridge, on the south side of the Charles River, and was later made chairman of a committee "to lay out & settle highways, as need shall require, in Cambridge Vilage," and he also served several years in the capacity of justice of the peace, or, as the office was then styled, "commissioner to end small causes." He was conspicuous in the movement which led to the establishment of Cambridge Village as a separate civil district. Indeed, he may be said to have been the author of the movement, which had its beginning in the petition of Mr. Jackson and his brother John, presented to the General Court, 18 October, 1672, but not acted upon until the following year, when the Court voted "to grant the inhabitants of the said village annually to elect one constable and three Selectmen, dwelling among themselves, to order the prudential affairs of the said inhabitants there according to law, only continuing a part of Cambridge in paying country and county rates, as also town rates so far as refers to the grammar school and bridge." Such limited independence proved unsatisfactory, and consequently a new petition was presented to the Court in 1678, asking that the inhabitants of the village be incorporated into a township "without any more dependence upon Cambridge." This document was written by Mr. Jackson, and his name is the first in the list of signers. The effort was strenuously opposed by the Cambridge Board of Selectmen, but was, nevertheless, successful, and the new town began its separate career 27 August, 1679. The Selectmen of Cambridge, in their remonstrance, said many harsh things in a general way of the signers to this petition, but with this qualification: "We would not be understood to include every particular person, for we acknowledge that Mr. Jackson brought a good estate to the town, as some others did, and hath not been wanting to the ministry or any good work among us, and therefore we would not reflect upon him in the least."

Mr. Jackson was deeply interested in Christianizing the Indians, and when "Apostle Eliot" preached to the Indians at Noonanetum, he was constantly present with him, to write down the questions propounded by Mr. Eliot and the answers of the Indians thereto, and he is mentioned in this connection by the Reverend Thomas Shephard, the pastor of the Cambridge Church, in "Clearer Sunshine of the Gospel, Breaking forth upon the Indians." * He is also mentioned by Captain Edward Johnson, in his history of New England, entitled "Wonder Working Providence," who says that Mr. Jackson "could not endure to see the truths of Christ trampled under foot by the erroneous party."

Mr. Jackson was a large landowner, and a man of wealth for his time. His first purchase of land was in 1643, and in 1646 he purchased "the beautiful farm of 500 acres from Governor Bradstreet, for £140, which had been sold to him for six cows by Thomas Mayhew, in 1638." † This farm began near what is known as the division between Newton and Brighton, and extended westward, including what is now Newtonville. The inventory of his estate makes mention of over thirteen hundred acres of land, and the estate was appraised at £2477 19s. He owned four hundred acres at Billerica, which, with other bequests, he willed to Harvard College. The inventory includes two men-servants, appraised at £5 each, and it is suggested by the author of the History of Newton that probably Mr. Jackson was the first slave-holder in that town.

He died at Newton, 17 June, 1681, aged, as is learned from his gravestone, seventy-nine years and five months. He married (1), in England, Frances, whose maiden name is unknown. She died at Cambridge, Massachusetts, circa 1648, and he married (2), March, 1649, Elizabeth, daughter of John Newgate, and widow of the Reverend John Oliver, a graduate of Harvard College and the first minister of Rumney Marsh, now Chelsea,

"Sebas" is sometimes written "Seaborn" in the old records of Newton, which fact favors the tradition in the family that he was born during the voyage of his parents to this country. He was a soldier in King Philip's War, serving under Captain Prentice at the memorable attack on Mt. Hope, 27 August,

He was chosen one of the Selectmen of Newton in 1750, and served in the office five years. In 1748/49 he was appointed one of the assessors for the town of Westminster, under the Proprietary, but it is thought he never lived there.

At his death he left a large estate, chiefly in lands at Newton and Westminister, Massachusetts. By his will, dated 8 July, 1765, he bequeathed his property at Westminster to his sons Josiah, Edward, and Elisha, who were among the first settlers of that town. All of Isaac Jackson's sons served in the Revolutionary War. He married, at Newton, 10 July, 1729, [10] Ruth Greenwood<sup>3</sup>, daughter of John Greenwood, Esquire. (See Greenwood Lineage, page 150.)

At his funeral General Henry Knox, of Revolutionary fame, Dr. William Eustis, afterward governor of Massachusetts, General Henry Jackson, General Brooks, Colonel Joseph Ward, an eminent Revolutionary officer, and Joseph Blake, Esquire, were the pall-bearers. Colonel Jackson's five sons were Revolutionary soldiers. His tombstone erroneously says, "in the 46th year of his age." He was among the founders of Westminster, Massachusetts, where he located before the town was incorporated. His name appears in the first list of tax-payers, 1752, and again in the records of the proprietor's meeting, held 16 October, 1759. He is a signer of the petition to the General Court for the incorporation of the town, which had been known as Narragansett Township, No. 2. The petition was presented to the Court 15 August, 1759, and opens with the statement: "That Whereas The Greate and General Court was pleased to Grant This Township in the Year of our Lord 1732, To Number

Josiah Jackson of Soldiers and their Legall Descendants as a Reward for Their Public Service in the Narragansett War," etc. He was one of the largest landowners of the town of Westminster, and an influential citizen, prominent in its affairs both civil and military. He was Selectman, 1771 and 1772; a signer, 3 August, 1774, of the remonstrance known as the "Covenant," in which the inhabitants refused to use goods imported from Great Britain; and during the Revolutionary War was appointed, 12 June, 1777, to prepare the letter of instruction for the representative of the town to the Legislature. In 1772 he became sergeant in Captain Nathan Whitney's company, and upon the reorganization of the town into a county militia, in 1774, became private in Colonel John Whitcomb's regiment, and responded to the Lexington Alarm,

Oliver Jackson

He was recognized as one of the substantial citizens of the town, a useful member to the Commonwealth, and, among other services, was one of the committee appointed to build the second meeting-house. Upon his tombstone in the old Westminster burying-ground is the following:

O if my Lord would come & meet

49. BETSEY JACKSON<sup>7</sup>, daughter of Oliver and Mary (Peirce) Jackson, was born at Westminster, 5 August, 1790, and died at Fitchburg, Massachusetts, 24 October, 1876. Throughout her long life of usefulness, she was noted for her especially keen mind and quiet humor, her uncommon executive ability, and her inflexible adherence to the faith of her fathers. She felt a justifiable pride in her Puritan ancestors, who had done so much for the settlement of Newton. Married at seventeen, it is said that even then there was nothing among the recent English importations of fashion to Boston which her ready fingers could not reproduce when desired, and through the many vicissitudes of her life this ability made many apparently impossible things possible. Among the numerous stories of her life, the one she loved best to tell was how, in the early Revolutionary days, the sergeant of that company in which her grandfather, Josiah Jackson served, was struck down in front of him; he, with much trepidation, stepped forward and filled the vacant place; "his heart," she said, "went pit-a-pat."

She was married, 20 September, 1807, to [30] Jesse Warren<sup>7</sup>, son of Jeduthan and Joanna (Moors) Warren, of Westminster. (See Warren Lineage, page 16.)

† If the mother of Mary Peirce was Abigail Beard, she could not have been the daughter of Andrew and Elizabeth (Nichols) Beard, as stated in the History of Westminster, whose birth is on record in Reading under date 15 May, 1757. Careful research throughout the records and deeds of Waltham, Watertown, Lexington, East Cambridge, Worcester, Reading, Billerica, and Wilmington has failed to reveal the parentage of the second wife of John Peirce, and no record of any of his marriages has been found.

JOHN DARBY<sup>1</sup> is recorded at Marblehead, Massachusetts, in 1677, where he appears as creditor to the estate of John Clay, of Marblehead, fisherman.* Nothing is known of him prior to this date, and all efforts to prove his connection with other families of the name have been unsuccessful.† He owned a house at Marblehead and a small lot of ground. He is styled "fisherman," and was doubtless one of the pioneers in the fishing industry which for more than two centuries was an important business in that town. He died circa 1689, as the inventory of his estate was taken 17 June, 1690, by John and Joseph Dodge. Administration was granted 3 April, 1694, to his widow Alice, who had married 2 July, 1690, John, son of Humphrey and Elizabeth Woodbury, of Beverly, to whom she bore eight children.

Children of John and Alice Darby, born at Marblehead:

2. ALICE DARBY<sup>2</sup>, born 12 October, 1679; died at Concord, Massachusetts, 23 April, 1758; married Jonathan Piper, of Ipswich; publishment in 1700.
3. JOHN DARBY<sup>2</sup>, born 8 October, 1681.†
4. MARY DARBY<sup>2</sup>, born 29 September, 1683; married Jeremiah Herbert or Hubbard.
5. JOSEPH DARBY<sup>2</sup>, born 18 October, 1685; married Sarah —.
6. BENJAMIN DARBY<sup>2</sup>, baptized 16 October, 1687; probably died before 26 December, 1713.

3. JOHN DARBY, JR.<sup>2</sup>, eldest son of John and Alice Darby, was born at Marblehead, 8 October, 1681, and died 7 March, 1753, at Concord, Massachusetts. He was a weaver by trade, and resided first at Beverly, Massachusetts, but moved, about 1720, to Ipswich, and in 1731 removed to Concord. In his will, dated in 1747, the name is spelled "Darbie." He married [27] Deborah Conant<sup>6</sup>, daughter of John and Bethiah (Mansfield) Conant, of Beverly. (See Conant Lineage, page 168.)

Although there is no record of this marriage, the will of John Conant (see will, page 168) proves that his daughter Deborah married a Darby, and "John and Deborah Darby" witnessed the will of [14] John Conant's<sup>5</sup> son [23] Lot<sup>6</sup>, thus proving the Christian name of her husband.

8. ANDREW DARBY<sup>3</sup>,* son of John and Deborah (Conant) Darby, was born at Beverly, 26 January, 1706/7; and died at Westminster, Massachusetts, 23 March, 1783. He was a weaver by trade, as was his father. In 1733 he removed to Concord "New Grant," now Acton, where he purchased land, and after the incorporation of the town, two years later, he took an active part in public affairs, proving himself a man of ability, character, and influence. He served as assessor three years, Selectman four years, and constable one year, the latter in those days an office of dignity and importance. About 1746 he disposed of his estate in Acton, and 10 May, 1748, purchased land, with a house and grist-mill, at Westminster, where he afterward lived. His occupation there conferred upon him the familiar title of "Miller Darby," by which he was designated in all the country round about. At Westminster he soon won the respect and confidence of the people at large, and was elected to numerous positions of honor and trust. He was clerk to the proprietors of the town from 1750 until 1754; and was for some years both assessor and a member of the "standing committee" before the incorporation of the town. After its incorporation he was one of the first assessors of the district of Westminster, serving seven years, Selectman four years, and town clerk in 1763. He was a signer of the resolutions for the incorporation of Narragansett township No. 2, and of the "Covenant," 3 August, 1774, a document in which the citizens refused to use goods imported from Great Britain. He, moreover, was active and influential in the affairs of the church. He acquired considerable property,

THOMAS GREENWOOD<sup>1</sup>, ESQUIRE, was born in England, and died at Newton, Massachusetts, 1 September, 1693, aged fifty years. Nothing has been ascertained of him prior to 1667, when he was resident at Cambridge Village, now Newton. He was a landholder there in 1673, and in 1691 purchased an additional tract of "twenty-four acres with the dwelling house thereon." Upon the organization of the town as a separate civil district, he was elected, 27 August, 1679, the first constable, and he is believed to have been the first town clerk. In 1686, 1687, 1690, and 1693, he was a member of the Board of Selectmen, and he also held the office of justice of the peace. He died intestate, and the inventory filed shows his estate to have been valued at £481 13s. 6d., a sum much above the average of estates at that period.

DAVID COMEE<sup>1,*</sup> the first of the name in America, is supposed to have been born in Scotland. He settled in Woburn, Massachusetts, as early as 1663, and was killed in the Sudbury fight, 21 April, 1676, when a resident of Concord, Massachusetts. In 1664 he removed from Woburn to Concord, where he lived until his death, aiding the little settlement in the anxious frontier life of the day, and dying in its defence during one of the bloodiest Indian encounters of King Philip's War, "falling," Bodge's "History of King Philip's War" says, "in the meadow near Haynes Garrison."

He married (1) Elizabeth —, who died at Concord, 4 March, 1671, and (2) Esther —, who outlived him, and married, 7 November, 1682, Samuel Parry.

Prior to 1693 he became a resident of Cambridge Farms (Lexington), and was especially prominent in the church at that place, and was otherwise interested in public affairs. A year before his death, in conveying away his right to his property in Concord, the document describes the land as that which "belongs to the tenement where my Honored Father, David Comee formerly dwelt in the Southerly part of Concord known by the name of Scotland." married the daughter of a Scotchman, points to the truth of the tradition that the Comee family were of Scotch lineage.

John Comee married, at Concord, 21 June, 1688, [2] Martha<sup>2</sup>, daughter of William and Martha Munroe, of Lexington.*

14. ABIGAIL COMEE<sup>3</sup>, youngest child of John and Martha (Munroe) Comee, was baptized 26 October, 1707, at Lexington, and was married in that town, 4 January, 1728, to [30] Jonas Peirce<sup>5</sup>, son of John and Elizabeth (Smith) Peirce. (See Peirce Lineage, page 138.)

* WILLIAM MUNROE, father of Martha (Munroe) Comee, was born in Scotland, in 1625. The history of the Munroe family, one of the most romantic of Scotch families, is given in full in the History of Lexington.

On 11 Nov., 1651, after the battle of Worcester, a cargo of prisoners was consigned to Mr. John Kemble, of Boston, and shipped in the "John and Sarah" to America, landing 13 May, 1652, and were sold as indentured servants. Among these were four "Munroes," the names of Robert, John, and Hugh being still legible in the record preserved at the Registry of Deeds Office, Boston. The fourth name, which is erased, is believed to be William. The "Sketch of the Munro Clan," by Mr. James Phinny Munroe, p. 22, says, "Though the name of William is obliterated on the ship record, it is known that William Munro, son of Robert of Aldie, Baron Fowlis, born 1625, was taken prisoner at the battle of Worcester, and was deported to America. As the first William of Cambridge Farms was a Scotchman, was born in 1625, and was without any doubt sent over as a political prisoner, the proof identifying the two men as one is as direct, short of William's own word, as one could ask."

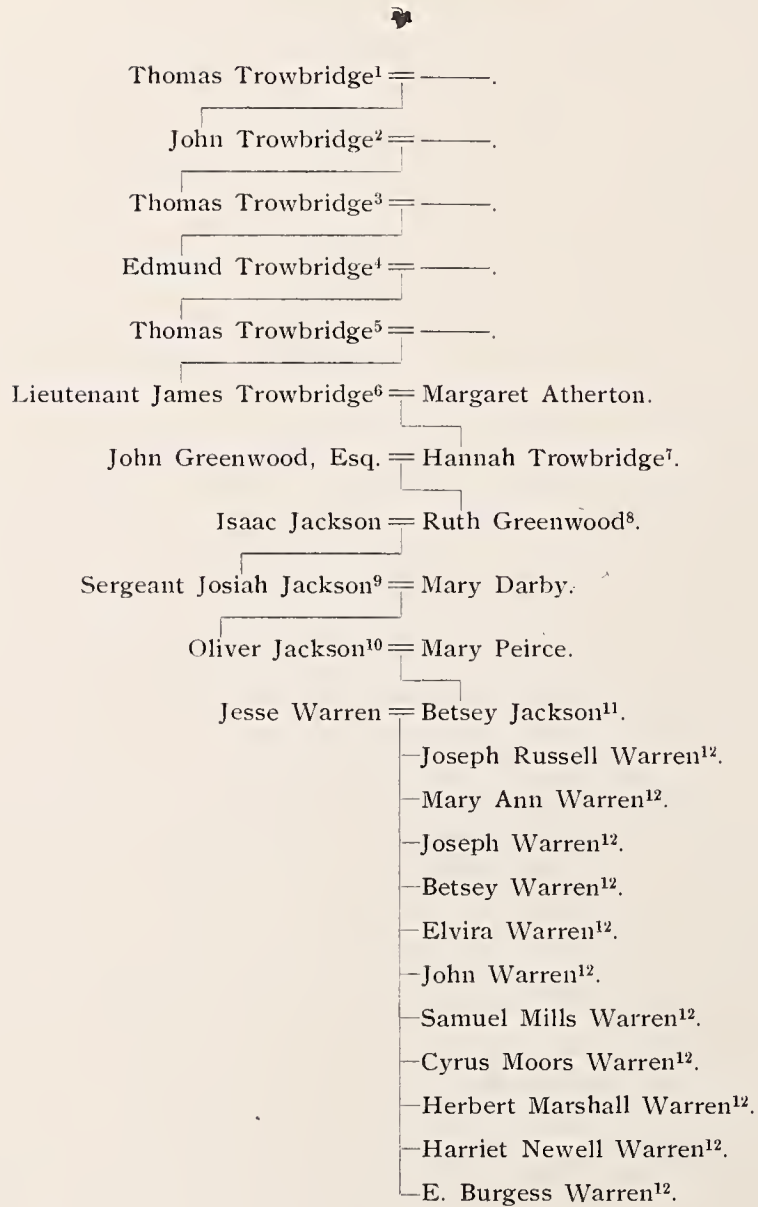

In 1660, upon the expiration of his indenture, he settled in the northwestern section of Cambridge Farms (Lexington), the settlement being afterward known as Scotland, in his honor. He became a man of position and wealth, and died 27 Jan., 1717, leaving will dated 14 Nov., 1716. He married (1), in 1665, Martha; (2), in 1672, Mary; and (3) Mrs Elizabeth Wyn, who died 1715. By wife Martha he had: 1. John<sup>2</sup>, b. 10 March, 1666; m. Hannah —. 2. Martha<sup>2</sup>, b. 2 Nov., 1667. + 3. William<sup>2</sup>, b. 10 Oct., 1669; m. Mary —. 4. George<sup>2</sup>, m. ## The Trowbridge Family

THE Trowbridge family * derives its name from its ancient inheritance, Trowbridge, in the Parish of Crediton, Devonshire, England. This property was the estate of Peter de Trowbridge, in the reign of Edward I. It was sold by the Trowbridge family, in 1720, to Samuel Strode. The Trowbridges, of Taunton, Somersetshire, were of the Devonshire family, as is shown by the coat of arms found in the windows of St. James Church, at Taunton, which is identical with that borne by the Devonshire Trowbridges. The name Trowbridge appears in Taunton as early as 1541.

TROWBRIDGE ARMS

1. JOHN TROWBRIDGE<sup>2</sup>, of Taunton, England, was the son of Thomas Trowbridge. He died 20 March, 1576, and his will, dated 17 February, that year, mentions brothers Richard and Thomas, Jr.; sister Joan Porter, and sons Edmund and Thomas.

THE Conant family is said to be of French extraction. The American Conants are descended from a branch of the family which are supposed to have been originally Bretons and to have come into England with the Conqueror, and lived at East Budleigh, Devonshire, England, from about the middle of the sixteenth century, and prior to that time were, for some generations, at Gittisham, some ten miles northeast of East Budleigh. In 1887 Frederick Odell Conant, M.A., published at Portland, Maine, the "History and Genealogy of the Conant Family," a most interesting work, which contains a large amount of data relating to the family in England, and a record of the descendants of the eminent Roger Conant, one of the fathers of Massachusetts, from which book the following information is chiefly obtained.

1. JOHN CONANT<sup>1</sup>, was born at Gittisham in 1520, and was buried at East Budleigh, 30 March, 1596, as appears from the church register of that parish. He is supposed to have been the son of John Conant, who was buried at Gittisham, 4 September, 1559. In 1523 John Conant, Sr., of Gittisham, was assessed £7 in goods, and John Conant, Jr., was assessed at the same time £4.

John Conant, first above named, is found for the first time, in 1571, on the subsidy rolls of East Budleigh, and for the last time, in 1581, after which date his son Richard paid the tax. In 1577 he was church warden, a position then, as now, of importance, and almost universally filled by members of the leading families of the parish.

2. RICHARD CONANT<sup>2</sup>, son of John Conant, was born in 1548, probably at East Budleigh, and resided there until his death, which occurred about 22 September, 1630, on which day both he and his wife Agnes were buried. In 1588 he was assessed £4 for lands in East Budleigh, in 1600 he paid a malt rate of 4s., and in 1630 was rated at 2s. 6d., the second highest in the parish. He was church warden in 1606 and 1616. His will was proved in the Archdeaconry Court of Exeter, 13 October, 1631, and is given in full in the "History and Genealogy of the Conant Family," above mentioned. The inventory filed gives £129 14s. 4d. as the appraised value of his estate. He married, at Colyton, Devonshire, England, 4 February, 1578, Agnes, daughter of John and Anne (Macye) Clarke,* by whom he had eight children, Roger, the emigrant to America, being the youngest. The Reverend John Conant, A.M., B.D., a brother of Roger, was an eminent divine. He was graduated at Exeter College, Oxford, in 1605, became a fellow in 1612, and in 1619 received the degree of B.D., in which year he was made rector of Lymington, Somersetshire, and continued as such until about 1642. In 1643 he preached a sermon before the House of Lords, and in that year was constituted by Parliament one of the noted Assembly of Divines, and became curate at St. Botolph's, Aldersgate, London, and in 1647, rector of the church of St. Thomas A'Becket, Salisbury, County Wilts.

3. GOVERNOR ROGER CONANT<sup>3</sup>, son of Richard and Agnes (Clarke) Conant, was born at East Budleigh, Devonshire, England, in 1591, baptized there, 9 August, 1597, and died at Beverly, Massachusetts, 19 November, 1679. Although nothing is known of his early life, he was evidently well educated, as he was in later life called upon to survey lands and lay out boundaries; his elder brothers were graduates of Oxford. A document signed by him as "Salter of London" furnishes strong presumptive evidence that he was a member of the Salters' Company, and had served his apprenticeship in that city, under his brother Christopher, who was a London salter. The knowledge thus obtained was of much value to him in establishing the "Salting and Fishing Stages" in New England.

He emigrated to Plymouth in 1623, probably in the "Ann," which arrived at Plymouth about July of that year. It is known that his brother Christopher arrived by that ship, and he, Roger, states in a petition to the General Court, dated 28 May, 1671, he had been "a planter in New England forty-eight years and upwards," which would fix the date of his arrival early in 1623.

Not being a Separatist, he was not in harmony with the Plymouth Colony, and shortly after his arrival he made a settlement at Nantasket (Hull). Here he used the form of service of the Established Church, which was always preferred by him for personal use, though abandoned by the church after the fall of the Brownists in 1629. In this, as in many other cases, he relinquished his personal feelings for what appeared to be the good of the State, and his pacific disposition averted many troubles in the colony.

* JOHN CLARKE was a prominent and wealthy merchant of Colyton, where he died, 6 April, 1585. His name stands first upon the patent from the king for the purchase of the estates of the manor of Colyton, which had reverted to the crown upon the beheading of Henry Courtenay, Earl of Devon and Marquis of Exeter, in 1538. In June, 1544, he married Anne, daughter of William Macve, of Colyton.

In 1624, at the request of the Dorchester Company, he undertook the management of a projected settlement at Cape Ann. This settlement was attempted by the Dorchester Company under the Sheffield Charter, by an arrangement with the Plymouth Colony, under which patent Roger Conant was appointed governor. Conant and his men landed on a point in Gloucester Harbor, now known as "Stage Head."* Here they erected a fishing "stage," which they held with some difficulty, as the London Adventurers Company, who were no longer in harmony with the Plymouth Colony, sent out a Captain Hewes, who claimed the stage, whereupon Miles Standish sailed down from Plymouth in battle array to protect the new settlement, and only Conant's compromise with Captain Hewes's company averted an engagement between the two claimants.

STAGE HEAD

It became necessary, however, in spite of Conant's administrative talent and good conduct of business, to abandon the undertaking, the settlement being composed of the most unruly elements. In 1625 the Dorchester Company dissolved, paying the wages of the men and offering free passage each to those who desired to return to England. Through Conant's influence the worthier portion of the settlement remained, and he and his companions, taking with them such things as they could to form their new settlement, marched through the untrodden forests and established themselves at Naumkeag (Salem), where he held together the little colony until the re-enforcements should arrive which had been promised by the Reverend John White, through whose influence and work in England Conant's work in New England had been made possible. When the re-enforcements appeared, under Endicott, they brought with them the Massachusetts Bay Colony patent, by which Endicott was appointed governor. Some slight friction between Conant's "Old Planters" and the new-comers ensued at the start, but again, through Conant's influence, the difficulty was allayed in the allotment of lands and subsequent exchanges, and because of these pacific arrangements the place was called Salem, the "City of Peace." Here he withdrew from leadership, and lived at "Cape-Ann-Side," Salem, afterward Beverly, until his death, being, however, always active in public affairs. He personally drew up the appeal to have Beverly set off from Salem, and a number of original documents signed by him are now treasured in the Historical Society at Beverly. The house in which he lived has long since been destroyed, but its site is occupied by No. 471 Cabot Street, Beverly.

Roger Conant was the first and only governor under the Sheffield and Cape Ann Charter, as Endicott was the first under the Massachusetts Bay Charter. He was a delegate from Salem to the General Court, 9 May, 1632; deputy to the General Court from Salem, May, 1634; foreman of the jury Honorable Conant of trials, 1637; the book of Grants for 11 July, 1637, is in his handwriting; he was elected in 1637, and served three years as justice of the Quarterly Court at Salem, chosen by the General Court; was frequently a member of the grand jury of Essex County, and of the jury of trials, and served many years in the office of Selectman.

His will, dated in 1677, is recorded in the probate records of Essex County, vol. i. 75. He married, at St. Ann's, Blackfriars, London, England, 11 November, 1618, Sarah Horton. The date of her death is not known, but she was living in 1666.

In 1657 he was resident in Marblehead, and Selectman there in 1662. In 1666 he received by deed of gift from his father an estate in Beverly consisting of two tracts of land, one of thirty-two and the other of seventy-five acres. The homestead, with three acres of land, he leased the same day to his father and mother for an annual tribute of "one Indian corn." He moved to Beverly about this time, as on 4 July, 1667, Lot Conant he was one of those dismissed from the First Church of Salem to form the church at Beverly. In 1669/70 and in 1671 he sold most of his land, together with his dwelling-house, in Marblehead, and resided during the remainder of his life in Beverly. He was Selectman in Beverly in 1673. JOHN SMITH<sup>1</sup> was one of the settlers of Watertown, Massachusetts, where he was living prior to 1636/37, when his name appears on the earliest list extant of the proprietors of that town. His wife Isabel, who doubtless emigrated with him, died at Watertown, 12 October, 1639, aged sixty years.

5. DANIEL SMITH<sup>2</sup>, probably the son of John and Isabel Smith, was born in England, and is supposed to have come to America with his parents as early as 1636. He was a resident of Watertown, where his son Daniel was born, 27 September, 1642. He died 14 July, 1660; his will, bearing the same date, bequeaths to "deare wife Elizabeth" all temporal estate, particulars after mentioned only excepted, during her widowhood; if she marries again, a third part of all that estate; to "son Daniel" the "grey colt about 3 years old: and the cow called Long-leggs: with a parcell of planting ground lying upon ye great freshpond being by estimates 3 acres;" also mentions Abigail Sherman and a brother Abraham. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Roger and Grace (Coolidge) Porter.†

6. DANIEL SMITH, JR.<sup>3</sup>, only child of Daniel and Elizabeth (Porter) Smith, was born at Watertown, 27 September, 1642, and died there, 7 June, 1681. His will, dated 30th of the preceding month, bequeaths total estate to his wife "so long as she shall continue a widdow, if she marries again the third of the yearly Income of my lands and that only:" mentions three sons, —Daniel, John, and Joseph,—and bequeaths "all my moveable estate after my wife's decease or marriage" shall be "equally divided among all my daughters" (no names given) "and what my mother's will and mind was to bestow upon any of my daughters my will is it should be performed without

DEACON WILLIAM WARD<sup>1</sup>, one of the founders of Marlborough, Massachusetts, was born in England, and died at Marlborough, 10 August, 1687. He is believed to have emigrated to Massachusetts in 1639, and settled at Sudbury, where, on 18 November, 1640, he was granted land. In 1643 he was admitted a freeman of the colony, and the next year was elected representative to the General Court. He was for some years a member and also chairman of the Board of Selectmen of Sudbury. In 1656 he, with twelve others belonging to Sudbury, petitioned the General Court for a grant of the township of Marlborough, and gave these reasons for the request: "Whereas your petitioners have lived divers years in Sudbury, and God hath been pleased to increase our children, which are now, divers of them grown to man's estate, and we, many of us, grown into years, so that we should be glad to see them settled, before the Lord take us away from hence; also, God having given us some considerable cattle, so that, we are so straightened, that we cannot comfortably subsist as could be desired; and some of us having taken pains to view the country, we have found a place, which lyeth to the Westward about eight miles from Sudbury, which we conceive might be comfortable for our subsistence," etc.* The Court granted the request, "provided it hinders no former grant, and there be a town settled with twenty or more families within three years." The same year a public meeting of the inhabitants was held, and a committee chosen, with Mr. Ward at its head, to put the affairs of the said new plantation in an orderly way. The settlement was duly effected, and in 1660 the town was incorporated as Marlborough, Mr. Ward being chosen one of the first Selectmen, to which position he was several times re-elected. In 1666 a church was organized in the town, and Mr. Ward appointed the first deacon, which office he filled until his death. He was also elected, in 1666, the first representative of Marlborough to the General Court. During King Philip's War he was active in the defence of the town from the savages, one of the garrisons formed for protection being under his command and established at his house, where were quartered three soldiers and six citizens, three of whom were of his own family. On 21 January, 1675/76, he was chosen to guard the magazines of the town.†

Mr. Ward married, in England, Elizabeth —, who came to America with him. She was his second wife, and was not the mother of his first two children. She died at Marlborough, 9 December, 1700, in the eighty-seventh year of her age. They were the grandparents of Colonel Nahum Ward, an eminent citizen of Shrewsbury, Massachusetts, and the great-grandparents of the distinguished Major-General Artemas Ward, of Revolutionary fame, who, 19 May, 1775, was commissioned general and commander-in-chief of the Massachusetts forces, and on 16 June, following, was commissioned by the Continental Congress the first major-general of the Continental army, Washington having been elected the previous day as general, to command "all the Continental forces."

His children, according to his will, dated 6 April, 1686, were John, Joanna, Obadiah, Increase, Richard, and Eleazer.

to his wife by her father, Edward Jackson, and where he is believed to have built the house which was not destroyed until 1821, after having sheltered seven generations of the family. One of the garrisons for the protection of the town was under the command of John Ward, and the house was therefore built for defence and as a place of refuge. It was always known as the "Garrison House," from its use during King Philip's War. At the incorporation of Newton, in 1679, John Ward was chosen one of the first Board of Selectmen, and held the office nine years. He was also the first representative of the town to the General Court, and served in this body eight years. The year in which he was first chosen representative, 1689, was a memorable one in the history of Massachusetts, being the year after the accession of William and Mary to the throne of England, and the deposition of Governor Andros in Massachusetts. The first session lasted fifty-two days, and the town voted him 1s. 6d. per day for his services. The setting off of Newton from Cambridge in 1679 had caused much feeling in Cambridge, but Ensign John Ward being the son-in-law of Mr. Edward Jackson, for whom the Cambridge people had great respect, he was permitted to take his seat without opposition.*

During his life he increased his property from forty-five to five hundred acres, which in 1701 he distributed among his sons by deed of gift, seven years before his death. His will is dated 1707, in which he gives the homestead to his son Deacon Richard Ward.

AMAJOR-GENERAL HUMPHREY ATHERTON<sup>1</sup>, one of the most eminent of the early New England colonists, was born in England * prior to 1615, and died at Boston, Massachusetts, 17 September, 1661. He came to Massachusetts in 1635, and settled at Dorchester, where he was admitted freeman, 2 May, 1637, and where he resided until his death. From almost the year of his arrival in the colony, to the day of his death, he was in public service, and achieved great distinction in both civil and military life. His civil career began in 1638, when he was elected one of the Selectmen of Dorchester, and a representative of the town to the General Court. He served in the former office thirteen years, although not continuously, and as representative in 1639, 1641, 1643, 1645, 1646, 1649, 1650, 1651, and 1653. The latter year he was elected from Springfield, and when he came to take his seat he was chosen Speaker of the House of Deputies. The following year he was chosen one of the governor's assistants.

General Atherton was a prominent member of the House of Deputies, and was frequently selected by his colleagues for important trusts outside of his legislative work. In May, 1646, he was appointed to "lay out ye bounds & settle ye 150 acres, a portion of the farm which Deputy-Governor Dudley had presented to the town of Dedham, and during the same year, and again in 1647, he was commissioned one of the magistrates at Dorchester, "to end small causes." In 1650 and 1651 he was appointed on a committee to draw up instructions for the Massachusetts delegates to the Congress of the United Colonies of New England, and in May, 1650, he and Captain Eleazer Lusher were chosen commissioners, "with full power and authority to consult, agree and determine with the General Court of Plymouth Colony, concerning the title of land called Shawamett and Patuxet, and for the protection of the English and Indians there." These commissioners met the commissioners appointed for a like purpose by the Plymouth Colony, and with them settled the dispute involved, to the satisfaction of their respective governments, for which, after reporting the results to their government, the Massachusetts commissioners received a vote of thanks from the General Court for their good service.

* He was probably a native of Preston, Lancashire, England, which county was the home of an ancient family of the name.

About 1653 the question, whether the Congress of the United Colonies had in their administration somewhat exceeded the powers conferred upon them by the articles of federation, was seriously agitated in Massachusetts, out of which agitation grew the action of the General Court on 18 May, of that year, appointing a committee, of which General Atherton was a member, "to ascertain and report to the court whether the Congress had power to determine the justice of an offensive or vindictive war, and to engage the colonies therein."

In 1654, as has been stated, General Atherton became a member of the Council of Assistants, to which high position he was annually re-elected until his death, serving with distinction, and with such acceptance to the General Court that this body continued to bestow upon him marks of appreciation of his worth in matters of public trust. In 1655, 1659, 1660, and 1661 he was elected one of the two alternate delegates, or delegates "in reserve," to the Congress of the United Colonies, his coalternate being the noted Major William Hathorn, ancestor of the famous author, Nathaniel Hawthorne.

General Atherton was of great value to the colonists in their relations with the Indians. He understood their language and their character; and had manifested a large degree of humanity and sympathy toward them, because of their ignorant and degraded condition, and in his dealings with them displayed great energy and decision of character, and was personally known to and held in a high degree of respect by the Indian chiefs, which facts, so well known to the General Court, were doubtless the considerations which influenced that body, in 1658, to select General Atherton to govern the Indians under the jurisdiction of Massachusetts, and to intrust him with large powers in such government. He was authorized to appoint Indian magistrates in their several plantations "to heare and determine all such matters that doe arise amongst themselves as one magistrate may doe amongst the English;" to appoint under officers, such as marshals and constables; to establish a "general court," with powers such as were exercised by the county court of the colony, and to himself preside at the court when organized. He performed the trust so confided to him with marked ability, and with such satisfaction to the government that he was continued in the position until his death. In 1659 he was named one of the commissioners to lay out the bounds of the Indian plantation called Natick, and was appointed to preside at the courts held that year in the district that became New Hampshire; and the next year he was placed at the head of a commission to run the southern boundary line of the colony, and at the same time was chosen to preside at the courts holden in the Maine district.

General Atherton's military career also dates from 1638, in which year he became a member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Boston. In 1642 he was senior sergeant of the company; was promoted ensign in 1645; lieutenant in 1646 and 1650, and in 1658 was made captain of the company. His first known active military service was in September, 1643, when he was commissioned lieutenant of the force sent forth under Captain George Cooke to arrest the famous Samuel Gorton and "his company," which incident forms an interesting chapter in early New England history. His next important military work was in July, 1645, when war was declared against the Narragansett Indians, and an expedition sent forth to the relief of the Mohegans and against the Narragansetts. Humphrey Atherton was commissioned, by both the Massachusetts government and the Congress of the United Colonies, lieutenant commander of the Massachusetts forces, his commission declaring that "the scope and cause of this expedition is not onely to ayde the Mohegans but to offend and invade the Narrohgansetts Nyaticks and others their Confederates who upon making warr upon Uncas the Mohegan Sachem contrary to their engagements are become as well our enemies as his." At that time Congress also appointed a council of war for the expedition, with General Edward Gibbons at its head, and with General Atherton and the doughty Captain Myles Standish, and others as members. The organization of the expedition overawed the offending sachems, and led to a treaty of peace, which averted the shedding of blood.

The following year General Atherton was commissioned captain of the Dorchester militia company, and in 1648 was appointed by the General Court a commission to man the fort known as the "Castle," and to provide supplies for the same and levy taxes for these purposes.

On 19 June, 1650, the General Court of Massachusetts extended to General Atherton substantial evidence of its appreciation of his special public work, civil and military, as is shown by this extract of the minutes of the court on that day: "It is ordered by the authoritie of this court, that Captayne Humphrey Atherton in consideration of the good service he hath done at severall times for the country, shall have, as a manifestation of our thankful acceptance of the same, a farme granted him of five hundred acres." The land thus granted was afterward located near Springfield, which fact probably accounts for his election to the General Court by the inhabitants of that settlement in 1653.

On 20 September, 1650, he was appointed commander-in-chief of an expedition sent to the Narragansetts, and is thus referred to, in connection with this expedition. in the "History of Dorchester," page 191: "His great courage and presence of mind were strikingly exhibited when he was sent, with twenty men, to Pessacus, an Indian sachem, to demand the arrears to the colony of three hundred fathoms of wampum. Pessacus put him off for some time with dilatory answers, not suffering him to come into his presence. He finally led his men to the door of the wigwam, entered himself with pistol in hand, leaving his men without, and seizing Pessacus by the hair of his head, drew him from the midst of a great number of his attendants, threatening, if any of them interfered, that he would despatch them." During this year he was also appointed an assistant to the surveyor-general of the colony. Later, but just when is not known, he became surveyor-general, and is so styled under date of 14 May, 1656, when the General Court named him in this capacity, to act in connection with Captain Davenport, in completing repairs upon the "Castle." On 19 October, 1652, he was designated to command the militia of Suffolk County, "in the absence of Major Gibbons," and on the death of the latter, in 1654, he was commissioned major, and remained in this position until the general election in the colony, 22 May, 1661, when he was chosen major-general, to command the military forces of the colony, in which capacity he was serving at the time of his death, which occurred a few months later.

Captain Edward Johnson, in his "Wonder-Working Providences," speaks of General Atherton as a lively, courageous man, and says, "Altho' he is slow of speech, yet he is downright for the business, and of cheerful spirit, and entire for the country."

His death was caused by a fall from his horse, 16 September, 1661, when returning from a review of his troops on Boston Common. The fall is said to have rendered him unconscious, which lasted until the following day, when he died, mourned widely throughout the colony. His funeral was attended with the military pomp befitting his station. The epitaph on his tombstone reads:

"Here lyes our Captaine & Maior of Suffolk withall
A Godly Magistrate was he, & Maior General
Two Troops of Hors with him heare came, such worth his love did crave,
Ten Companyes of Foot also mourning marcht to his grave.
Let all who read be sure to keep the Faith as he has done,
With Christ he lives now Crown'd; his name was Humphrey Atherton."

Administration in his estate was granted to his son Jonathan and his three sons-in-law, Timothy Mather, James Trowbridge, and Obadiah Swift.

He married, in England, Mary Wales, who died at Dorchester, Massachusetts, in 1672.

He came to Boston in 1636, and removed to Lynn about 1640. He was a farmer, owning large tracts of land; the portion of the estate upon which he resided was called "Mansfield's End." In 1657 he was one of a committee to lay out town lots; in 1663 Mr. John Hathorn complained to the church at Lynn that Andrew Mansfield and William Longley had given false testimony in a land case, for which they were censured. They appealed to the county court, accusing Mr. Hathorn of slander, of which he was found guilty, and sentenced to pay a fine of £10 and make a public acknowledgment in the Meeting-House at Lynn, or else pay £20 and costs. This case caused a great disturbance in the town, both in church and civil affairs. In 1666 he was chosen town recorder; in 1678, Selectman; and in 1681, 1682, and 1683, a representative to the General Court.§ His will, dated 1 June, 1679, mentions sons Andrew and Daniel, and daughters Hannah, Bethiah, Lydia, and Deborah.
